In other respects, however, the Bengal collection will be perfect. The articles displayed during the week, and visited by the Governor-general, splendid and numerous as they are, give only a faint idea of the whole which the necessities of time forced the committee to despatch at one. The last packages leave by to-day's steamer overland. Both the P. and O. Company and the Egyptian Government have acted liberally in the matter, reducing the freight from £30 to £13 per ton. The specimens sent amount in number to 6,000, of which 3,936 are now on their way by the Cape in the Nile, Hotspur, and Renown. The whole number sent in 1851 was only 2,699. The Secretary says, "The collection comprises specimens of every production upon which human industry is engaged in the provinces whence obtained, and it contains a number of articles, either entirely new, or of which no specimens have as yet been exhibited in Europe." On the whole, the Commissioners' classification into the four general sections of raw products, machinery, manufactures, and works of art, has been adhered to, though such valuable articles as Cashmere shawls are entered rather as "embroideries" than as "manufactures in wool" in the sub-divisions. So the Benares doputtahs or shawls are classified as silk manufactures, the peculiar workmanship for which they are valued being the standard. The collection reveals some curious facts. The well-known Delhi paintings on ivory have hitherto been destitute of perspective or shading. But not so those sent to the Exhibition, which are, in many cases, faithful copies of M. Beato's photographs, and in others copies of native photographs. Exquisite as are the carpets made in the Lahore and Meerut Jails and Jubbulpore School of Industry, they cost only Rs. 100 each, but fully fifty per cent. more for transit—a commentary on our Indian roads. The finest shawls, direct from Sreenugger and Umritsur, sent by private contributors, were not opened in Calcutta. Cashmere has for the first time attempted to compete successfully with France and Germany in Papier Maché, but the articles cost more than those of Europe. The Punjab silks are the finest. The Borneo Company's hemp fabrics, made at their factory some miles above Calcutta, are superior to all others, showing what machinery is yet destined to do for India. The Patna cotton goods manifest an improvement. The Punjab committee have sent two books, one showing the different silk patterns preferred by the Sikhs, Mahomedans, and Hindoos, and those which have been introduced by the English, and the other containing specimens of the cotton fabrics used by the agricultural tribes. Jung Bahadur has sent a third book consisting of a large number of specimens of colours produced by a combination of Indian dyes. There is paper, too, made from the Nepal Daphne plant, from bamboo, hemp, aloes, plantains, old records, and old ropes. We saw one grass mat, twenty-seven feet square, which throws that presented to the Queen by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, far into the shade. Lieutenant R. A. Cole has sent us a catalogue of the Mysore articles, consisting of specimens of rice, wheat, cloths, silk, cotton, iron, embroidery, carving, and jewellery, chiefly contributed by the Mysore Government. The article that will attract most attention is, perhaps, the little known Corandum stone, which is next in hardness to the diamond. The most of the Mysore articles are intended for the Royal Asiatic Society's Museum, after exhibition.

The articles forwarded from every part of India, and illustrating all its products, arts and manufactures, combined with the collection of photographs of its races, tribes and castes now being made, should give the English a most vivid idea of what the fabled East really is. If they be the means of directing to India the attention of all classes in England—the general public as well as capitalists and manufacturers, travellers as well as traders, and above all, members of Parliament—India will not have been represented in the International Exhibition of 1862 in vain.—Friend of India.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.

If any doubt existed as to the difficulties of telegraphy in India at all times, and as to the insuperable obstacles to accuracy and speed in the transmission of messages during the rainy season, such doubt must have been removed by the official publication of the defence of Captain Douglas, the director-general. The other papers which accompany this official letter give no information with which we have not already made our readers familiar.

So far as the department is to blame for the evils with which it has been charged, the causes seem to be the youth of the signallers; their limited number, which led them to presume on lenient treatment when in fault; and the method of receiving messages by sound, so that when a signaller hesitates as to the meaning of the first word he is deluged with its successors, and puts down the first inaccurately rather than let it escape. To meet these evils trained lads, chiefly natives, will be introduced into the department; a larger number of signallers are being employed, so that dismissal is feared; and new French instruments have been used, the click of the armature of which is nearly inaudible, and by which the message is written down on paper in a black pigment. So far as the public are concerned, they are to blame for not meeting the liability of the telegraph to mistake each word as thirteenth for thirtieth, and hundreds for thousands, by attending to the rule that in all money messages the sum be given in two forms, halving or doubling the amount, thus—"Pay to my order Rs. 500, or half 1,000." Where this is done Colonel Douglas has never known a single instance of error. And, so far as we must look to nature, or our want of power over it, as the source or evil, we are told India is no worse than America. In all long telegraphic circuits "escape" is common, that is the electric current frequently passes off the line into the earth, especially when the atmosphere is damp. The most powerful batteries can then "scarcely effect the armature of a sensitive electromagnet at a distance of even 100 miles, the remainder of the current escaping a little at each pole, during this entire length of line."

Allowing all this, the Governor-general, in his review of the subject, comes to the conclusion we before expressed, that the efficiency of the Indian telegraph is "favourable." To meet the evils, however—of which officials, with the Viceroy at their head, have had as much reason to complain as the general public—the establishment of the department has been improved, the Director-general being paid Rs. 3,000 a month, three directors from Rs. 700 to 1,500, and fifteen superintendents from Rs. 350 to 700 a month. Assistant superintendents will receive Rs. 300 a month. The most hopeful feature of all is that India will have a hundred inspectors instead of fifty-four, a point in which we are glad to see our representations have been successful. The public who use the telegraph will be allowed refunds for unreported as well as repeated messages, if the precaution as to figures is adopted; and the date and hour of despatch "from the telegraph office" will be inserted in every message, free of charge. As we announced some time ago, if the public continue to be dissatisfied with the Government lines, they may set up lines of their own on which, however, Government claims priority of transmission for all public messages, when necessary. We are not told if this means "service" messages also, such as officials were recently reproved for sending on their own private affairs, and such as are continually sent still between departments in the most trifling cases. If a private company will put up another wire between Calcutta and Bombay, Government will abstain from doing so. With something like an inward chuckle, Colonel Douglas recommends that if existing lines are to be made over to such Companies, a beginning had better be made with that to the Burmah ports, at present most troublesome. Or perhaps private capitalists might attempt a line from Port Mutlah to the mouth of the river, that is from no place to nowhere.

All this is satisfactory, and may tend to meet present evils, with one exception. The public, when they complain, expect, if not a refund, the solitary satisfaction of a courteous answer. John Bull is often unreasonable, and never more so than when he grumbles and gets no redress. If Government would appoint at the head of the Complaint-office some trained clerk, whose suavity and parsimony at once are those of the Parisian, the Director-General's temper would not be tried, the State would save instead of lose, and the mercantile world would cease to grumble.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The Friend of India believes Captain Hector Mackenzie has been appointed Secretary to the Government of the Central Provinces. He has the reputation of being a good revenue officer, having been trained in settlement work in Goojerat. In this respect he will be able to make up for the deficiencies of the rest of the commission. The revenue arrangements now made will affect the future of the Central Provinces, and the prospect of their furnishing in time the chief cotton supply of England, more than any other administrative act. The more liberal the assessment, even though the revenue should temporarily suffer, the greater will be the prosperity of the territory.

BRITISH BURMAH.—Some fatality seems to attend the scheme for amalgamating the provinces of Arracan, Pegu, and Tenasserim, into the Chief Commissionership of British Burmah. Hardly had Colonel Phayre taken his passage from Rangoon in the steamer of the 17th January with the former Resolution in his pocket, when a change was ordered in some of the minor details, which must be sanctioned by the Council. Determined not to lose hold of his scheme, to sit in dherma at the Council door till it is carried out, Colonel Phayre has remained in Calcutta till the steamer of 2nd February. We trust that our friends in Burmah will then be no more disappointed. They must not form too high expectations of the future, as they seem to be doing. As Chief Commissioner, Colonel Phayre has not unlimited power to do all they wish commercially and financially. But he will secure the inestimable boon of an honest and uniform administration. The notification in the Gazette transferring Arracan from the jurisdiction of the Lieutenant governor of Bengal to that of the Governor-general, has paved the way at once for the Bengal Legislature, and the amalgamation with Pegu and Tenasserim.

THE DELHI MURDERERS.—The Delhi Institute Journal notices the progress of the trial of the murderers of Mr. Fraser and the others in Delhi, in May, 1857. There are two men under trial, one of whom is the notorious Mogul Beg. Several witnesses identified this man as one of five or six ruffians whom they saw coming down from the rooms above the Lahore gateway of the palace, then occupied by Captain Douglas, with a sword in his hand dripping with blood. Some assert that they saw him cut down Mr. Fraser and Captain Douglas. One witness identifies him, and says he brought a pistol from Captain Douglas's room immediately after the murder.

KUMAON FORESTS.—Major Ramsay, Commissioner of Kumaon, reports on the forests of Kumaon and Gurhwal. They extend from the Ganges on the west to the Saarda River on the east, a distance of about 160 miles. In Kumaon their average breadth is fifteen miles. The Gurhwal forests are confined to two extensive dhoons, the valley of the Mundal River and the Outer Range. On the east bank of the Ganges above Badasnee at the head of Chandee there are extensive slopes of young saul. All the trees worth cutting have been removed. Between the Chandee Hills and Kaldwara all good saul timber, except in very inaccessible places, has been cut. There is a large quantity of felled timber scattered over the Kotree dhoon, which contains about fifty square miles. As much of it as possible will be exported. The Patlee dhoon extends over 200 square miles and contains some good forests. The Mundal forests are good and will bear the expense of a road being made through them. The Gurhwal forests are nearly exhausted, and the chief object must be to restore them to a prosperous state. A road down the Ramgunga valley would probably not cost more than Rs. 10,000. Only three miles would be expensive, the other seven very easy. The whole of the forests of Kumaon have been most extensively cut, but though sadly mutilated, they may be extensively improved. The quantity now required in the market might be supplied by these forests at present rates with a clear annual profit of Rs. 100,000. About 100,000 to 150,000 trees might be supplied annually at Rs. 2-8 to Rs. 3 each at the depot in the plains. Planting saul trees is quite unnecessary; wherever the tree thrives saplings abound. Millions of young saplings are annually destroyed by fire. The system on which the forests are worked is this:—A head sawyer takes an advance on good security to bring workmen. He is sent to a forest, where trees are marked for him, and is fined Rs. 100 for every unmarked tree his party may cut. Once a month the forest daroga examines all that has been collected, classifies the logs, and stacks them. At the close of every season a final adjustment is made with every workman employed. Dr. Cleghorn, of Madras, is now on a mission to report in all the forests of the Himalayan slopes.

TWO NEW BILLS.—I. A Bill to revive and continue in force for a further period Act XXXIII. of 1857 (to make further provision relating to foreigners). II. A Bill to provide for new silver, and a new copper coinage. The object of the first, to quote the words of the "statement", is "to enable the Government to prevent the subjects of foreign States from residing or sojourning in India, or from passing through or travelling in the same, without the consent of Government." It is asserted that a special reason for the desire of extending the Act lies in the recent concordat between the Pope and Portugal, under which it is probable that the subjects of foreign European nations may resort to India in greater numbers, and in positions of greater influence than heretofore. The only new coin, introduced by the second, is a half pice. All the others, both silver and copper, are, as relates to denomination, standard and weight, the same as now. The words "East India Company" and the Persian designation on the reverse are to be omitted; the designation of the coin in English will be substituted. The likeness and titles of the Queen, of course, continue on the obverse. There will be changes in the devices and ornaments.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY seem to be extending their operations more than any other in India. Their income, though annually increasing, does not allow them to meet some 20 applications during the past year for the commencement or extension of missions in the East by persons willing to support themselves partly, or to build houses and schools. These are remarkable facts. "In the Society's fifteenth year its income rose from £3,300 to £11,000; and that was the year of the Bill which opened India to Christian missions. In its thirty-sixth year it rose from £52,000 to £69,000—the year of Negro Emancipation, which called for large operations in the West Indies. Four years later came the movement at Krishnagur, and the consequent enlargement of the work in North India, and the income simultaneously advanced by £12,000. In 1847, the year previous to the Irish famine, the income was £15,000 in excess of the last; and the means were thus provided beforehand for an expenditure which must otherwise have been curtailed. The voice that spoke in the Indian mutiny called forth upwards of £68,000 as at once a trespass-offering and a thank-offering." Since the mutiny the Society has increased its staff of ordained missionaries from 91 to 107, and has occupied Oudh, Sonthalistan, the Godavery district, and Aurungabad. It is remarkable that, since the mutiny, this is the only English Missionary Society which has extended its operations.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES N. W. P.—The Lieutenant-governor of the N. W. Provinces has published rules for the guidance of honorary magistrates. They will possess no control over the police, and may not entertain charges made on the report of police officers. All charges of the commission of the following offences must be preferred to the police:—Murder, thuggee, dacoitee, highway robbery, culpable homicide, wounding, burglary, theft, receiving stolen property, &c. Complaints of other offences, which are detailed in the schedule annexed to Act XXV. of 1861, if the offences have taken place in their jurisdiction, "may be entertained directly by honorary magistrates, who will thereupon proceed to investigate and decide the cases thence arising, and shall be guided as to their procedure by the rules prescribed for the guidance of the magistrate of the district in similar cases, as set forth in chapters XIV. and XV. of the Criminal Procedure Code, and shall, in the disposal of such cases, exercise the powers defined in section 22 of the Criminal Procedure Act (sections 273 and 275, Act XXV. of 1861)". Honorary magistrates may try cases referred to them by the magistrates, and if empowered under section 38 of the Criminal Procedure Code, may commit or hold to bail accused persons to take their trial before the Court of Sessions. A magistrate may withdraw a case from an honorary officer. Complaints and witnesses shall be examined on the following affirmation:—"I solemnly affirm, in the presence of Almighty God, that what I shall state shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." Convicted persons under 16 may be sentenced to imprisonment in a reformatory recognised by the local authorities. A magistrate may call for the records of the subordinate Honorary Magistrate's Court, and if he think fit refer them to the Sudder.

THE ALLAHABAD MELA.—The North West Gazette says the annual mela or fair has commenced. Grand shops are being erected, and Government is letting out the ground at two rupees a square yard. The demand for ferry boats is immense. "Numerous pilgrims are ready to pay any money for admission to the subterraneous passage from the Allahabad Fort, said to have been constructed by the Emperor Akbar and to communicate with Benares and all the other holy cities in India, Dwarka included." There is such a passage leading from the fort, but its extent and original use are unknown.

INDIAN PILGRIMS.—A letter from Mecca contradicts the report of the death of the Nawab of Furruckabad, which report originated with one of his dismissed servants. At the date of this letter he was at Hamayunjah, and his mother is said to send him large remittances every six months, which enables him to "live in clover." The ubiquitous Peroze Shah, whom we last heard of in Candahar, was not long since on a flying visit to his brother ruffian of Furruckabad, and left him to go to Medina. There are at present some thousands of destitute Indians, some of them ex-robbers, others pilgrims, begging and starving in the streets of Mecca; and hundreds of them were lately swept off by an epidemic. In time of drought they die literally of thirst, in dry seasons water costing a rupee for ten small "mussucks." The Governor of Jeddo, sometime since, suggested the propriety of our Government prohibiting the pilgrimage of these poor wretches, as the French Government has already done.

BARRISTER JUDGES.—The Phoenix learns "that Sir Charles Wood has sent out the most stringent orders for the barrister judges recently appointed to the Mofussil Small Cause Courts to pass in the vernaculars, else resign their situations, as they are to have no interpreters allowed them. If home instructions are carried out it will all end in Government employing their sudder ameens only, who have no knowledge of the English law, which will be all important after the amalgamation of the two courts, and when a barrister judge of the High Court will have to go on tour in the Mofussil. Mr. Read, of the Calcutta bar, will, perhaps, be the only one found competent to pass—that is, if the Government can get him to accept the appointment."

THE FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE at Agra held a meeting on the 13th of January. The amount to be refunded to Government was found to be Rs. 1,90,994. The balance of the fund, after making this transfer, was Rs. 2,86,270. Several missionaries reported on the orphan children they had received under their charge. Mr. Barton stated that the institution at Secundra, which contained at the commencement of last year thirty-two orphans, had received five hundred and sixty-nine during the famine, of whom one hundred and thirty-seven had died. Father Lewis, of Agra, had one hundred and sixty-five orphans under his care. Dr. Butler, of the American Mission at Bareilly, had one hundred and fifty-nine; Mr. Scott, of Futtehghur, thirty-eight; Mr. Campbell, of Saharunpore, eighty; and Mr. Burrell, of Cawnpore, twenty or thirty. The committee have resolved to apply the funds in hand to the establishment of one General Orphan Institution for the North-West Provinces at Secundra, near Agra, for which purpose the sum of two lakhs and a half is to be invested in Government Securities, and the Church Missionary Society in England communicated with in order to arrange an amalgamation between the old Secundra Orphanage and Press and the new institution. Though it is not considered desirable to fritter away the funds in grants to small institutions several missionaries and others have incurred great expense in connection with their charge, and the sum of Rs. 6,000 is accordingly given to the Agra Roman Catholic Mission, Rs. 5,000 to Dr. Butler at Bareilly, Rs. 3,000 to Mr. Scott at Futtehghur, and Rs. 5,000 to Mr. Campbell at Saharunpore. The balance of Rs. 17,270, together with the unremitted balances of some local committees which will remain after all this has been done, will be retained to meet any possible contingencies connected with the winding-up of the operations.

TREATMENT OF CHOLERA.—Dr. R. Playfair reports on the cholera which appeared in the Agra Central Prison in July last. His experience has led him to believe that there is an early stage of true cholera which yields to prompt and vigorous treatment. In this early stage a strong stimulant with opium or cayenne pepper is frequently efficacious. In the generality of cases brandy is the best stimulant. The cholera pill is most useful in this stage. In the second stage, or that of collapse, which resists almost all treatment, Dr. Playfair tried venesection. This remedy was first suggested by Dr. Annesley. The heart's action is enfeebled and oppressed, the blood is black and thick. In an advanced stage of this stagnation of the blood, stimulants alone are insufficient and venesection is necessary. The remedy has generally proved unsuccessful hitherto, from ignorance of the proper method of practising it. The two rules to be observed are that it is useless to attempt venesection if no pulse is perceptible at the wrist; and that the object is not to deplete as if to relieve an inflammation, but merely to lessen the resistance to the action of the stimulant to the contraction and re-invigorated action of the heart. Dr. Playfair says—"I do not pretend to explain satisfactorily the cause of the success of venesection in cholera, but the facts I have seen are, that, combined with plain, quickly acting stimulants, a greater number of recoveries ensue than from any other practice I have followed." Of 122 cases of Cholera Morbus treated in the Agra Central Prison from 6th to 10th July, 55-18 per cent. were cured by the usual treatment, 58-63 by the addition of saline enemata, and 77-15 per cent. by stimulants and venesection. Some months ago Dr. Sutherland of Patna reported on the cholera that appeared among the inmates of the Lunatic Asylum there. He found injection of chlorate of potash under the serin of the chests and arm very successful, even in bad cases.

WILD BEASTS IN THE PUNJAB.—The Officiating Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab has issued a circular to all Commissioners and Superintendents regarding the destruction of wild beasts. The periodical returns show that wild beasts are not kept under, and that the arrangements for killing them are defective. The rewards allowed are Rs. 6 for bears and leopards,

Rs. 3 for cubs, and Rs. 5 for tigers. In the Huzara and Kangra districts and the Mooltan division, Rs. 15 each are given for tigers. It has been suggested to organise bands of native hunters composed of Sansees, Bowreahs, Harnees, &c., to wage war against the wolves, but the plan has not succeeded where it has been tried. The adoption of a trap is recommended similar to those used in the German forests. It consists of two concentric circles of stakes, the inner being six or eight feet in diameter, and the outer fourteen inches from the inner. They are driven in close and covered with twigs and mud so as to resemble a hut. The inner circle must contain a young kid, which attracts the wolf by its bleating. The door into the outer circle is so constructed as to open inwards by pressure from without and not outwards. The wolf once in, walks round and round the narrow circle, shutting the door each time he passes. The Deputy-commissioner of Umritsur made a trap of this kind portable so as to have it removed from place to place. "There is no question that the disarming of the rural population has resulted in the increase of wild animals, and that the actual loss of human life is great, and it is to be feared that the loss of missing children murdered for their ornaments, or by their relations in the case of females, is imputed falsely to wild beasts. It has also been remarked that in districts where goats abound, the number of children lost is considerable."

PESHAWUR, Feb. 1.—The Commander-in-Chief is now preparing for his journey Trans-Indus. His escort, the 37th N.I., under Captain Nesbit, has been relieved by the 1st N.I., Colonel Milne commanding. They proceed with his Excellency's camp to Rawul Pindee, where the 4th N.I., whose detachments at Nowshera, Khyrabad, and Attock, are to be relieved by the 1st N.I., in order that they (the 4th) may take that regiment's place as escort from Rawul Pindee. Sir Hugh Rose pays a high tribute to the efficiency of the 37th, in parting with them. The camp starts to-day for Simla. Sir Hugh is now (8 a.m.) busy at a grand field-day, consuming powder enough to drive a Financial Commissioner to despair. He leaves either this afternoon, to-morrow, or Monday, on his Trans-Indus tour, which will extend only to Mooltan. The Khyberies would not allow his Excellency to remain very long here without paying him their devoirs, after their own characteristic fashion. On Thursday night they entered his camp and were about making free with some of the valuable horse-flesh thereabouts abounding, when the sentries gave the alarm, and a corresponding rush took place, in the course of which one of the intruders was secured to be dealt with by the civil authorities on the morrow. On the same day, I believe, the cantonment joint magistrate had issued a circular, warning the residents of the station to keep their chowkeydars on the alert, as intimation had reached him that a party of hill men was on the way down to make a raid, "each on his own hook," among us. At all events, while the 93rd Highlanders were being inspected, no less than thirty medals were stolen from their barracks, besides other articles of less value; and while the officers were at the theatre, on Wednesday night, one had his horse looted from his stables. A telegram was received yesterday ordering the immediate return of the 7th Fusiliers to Nowshera. They march hence on Wednesday (5th) and detach two companies to relieve those of the 98th at Attock, which will join head-quarters at Rawul Pindee. The Fusiliers, however, will only be a short time at Nowshera, as they must proceed to Ferozepore as soon as the 79th Highlanders come up from that station to take their place. A party of the 93rd proceeds to-day, I believe, by bullock-train, to Meean Meer, to bring up several families of the regiment who are now en route from Kurrachee.—Delhi Gazette.

MR. MACPHERSON vacated his appointment as First Judge of the Small Cause Court, on the 30th January, to take up his new one of Secretary to the Bengal Council. His successor in the court is Mr. Bonhous, late Judge of the Small Cause Court at Kishnaghar.

A CLEVER BURGLARY was perpetrated on the premises of Messrs. Thacker, Spink, and Co., of Calcutta, on Saturday, the 25th of January. The thief, or thieves, had evidently a thorough knowledge of the warehouse, and knew where to go to for the plunder. Jewellery and other goods, to the value of Rs. 18,000, were carried off. The robbery, it is supposed, must have occurred on Saturday night, and the thief had all Sunday to hide his loot. The police are actively engaged in a search, but as yet with little success. The burglar, it is supposed, placed a ladder against the wall from behind, whilst the durwans were wrapped in the arms of Morpheus. On this he ascended to the first floor, cunningly pasted a piece of flannel on the glass window, and smashed it, without making the slightest noise. He could then easily remove the inside bar, open the door, and step in pleasantly to enjoy himself amongst the books, pictures, and riches of Messrs. Thacker and Co.'s library. He must have done the work at his leisure, and without interruption from any rude warders, chowkeydars, or durwans. The loss is very serious, and we trust the police will soon be on the right track, so as to recover the bulk of the property.

MEETING OF CIVILIANS.—The long-talked of meeting of the Civil Service was held in the Town Hall, on the 30th of January, and the gathering was, as might have been anticipated, a numerous one. Mr. Harington was in the chair. The report of the Compensation Committee, and the proposed memorial, were read, and Mr. Wauchope suggested an amendment that it would be preferable to ask for a simple annuity of £1,000 per annum on the expiration of the usual term of service on payment of what the men of the service understand as quarter value, and not to pray for what they would be far less likely to get,—a graduated scale of pension, with increased rates to those who remained in the country after such services. The amendment was seconded by Mr. Sandeman, and so far as the actual meeting was concerned, was carried by a majority. The opposition, however, carried the day by throwing in pockets-full of proxies, and it was, therefore, resolved that the memorial be adopted.

CASHMERE.—The Englishman states that the Maharajah of Cashmere has received from the hands of Mr. Davies, Secretary to the Punjab Government, his investiture with the insignia of the Exalted Order of the Star of India. After the ceremony the Maharajah, in token of his appreciation of the honour conferred on him, despatched, as an offering to Her Majesty the Queen, a Cashmere shawl of unexampled workmanship, and of great value. At the request of his Highness the Maharajah the services of a medical officer have been placed at his disposal, for employment in his professional capacity at Cashmere during the period of the year at which sickness is most prevalent in that beautiful valley. There has been a marriage in the family of the ruler of Cashmere, his son having taken unto himself a wife, on which occasion the Maharajah, accompanied by Captain Mercer, Assistant Commissioner Trans-Sutlej States, proceeded to Chumba to take a part in the festivities.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.—Sometime since the Lieutenant-governor submitted to the Supreme Government the report of the commission appointed by him to inquire into the municipal administration of Calcutta, together with his own opinion on the report. The Supreme Government concurred with the Lieutenant-governor as to the advisability of affording a fair trial to the scheme proposed by the commission, and his Excellency the Viceroy has, accordingly, authorised the Lieutenant-governor to promote such legislative measures as may be necessary for its introduction. With regard to local taxation, the Viceroy's decision was to the effect that the expense of the all local works, and the interest on all money raised to meet that expense, must undoubtedly be met from local sources, and that the one per cent. Income-tax fund being, by law, only applicable to roads, canals, and other reproductive works, could only be made available to a very limited extent for metropolitan improvements.

MILITARY HOSPITAL AT KIDDERPORE.—The military hospital, which was temporarily established in the Lower Orphan School House, at Kidderpore, has been decreed a permanent existence, and is to be called, in future, the Depot Hospital, at the Presidency. It is intended for the reception and treatment of all sick and wounded European soldiers of H.M.'s forces, British and Indian, who will henceforth be under special care and discipline there, instead of, as heretofore, being sent to the "mixed society" of the Presidency General Hospital; where, even if there was always proper room and accommodation—which was not the case—they were most disadvantageously placed. Some outlay is required upon the building in which the new hospital has been established, as it is of the good old times, when verandahs, now considered an indispensable necessity for all houses, were given to but few, and the tropical sun beat direct upon the naked, unsheltered walls within which our European soldiers and others resided. This main improvement effected, and a few others, the necessity of which is obvious to any engineering eye, added, the new hospital will meet a want which has long been felt at the Presidency, and be a first-class institution for the reception and treatment of our sick and wounded soldiers arriving at, remaining in, or passing through Calcutta, from or to England.—Englishman.

OPIMUM REVENUE.—"Mr. Laing's estimate of opium revenue," says the Indian Field, "is not, after all, very exaggerated. The results of the last nine months' sale comprise 16,743 chests, the proceeds amounting to Rs. 27,581,395, and giving an average of Rs. 1,647½ per chest. There remain for sale 7,320 chests, which, at the prices last realised, that is, at Rs. 1,450 per chest, would give Rs. 1,06,14,000. The total opium revenue, then, of the year would amount to Rs. 3,81,95,395, being Rs. 19,04,805 less than four millions which Mr. Laing had counted on from this source. This deficiency again could be reduced to a much smaller figure if we deduct Rs. 471,050, being the loss from the sale of opium bought by defaulting traders, &c. As there are excesses in his estimates of other sources of revenue, we trust Mr. Laing will be able to show a surplus in the end of the year."

THE LANDHOLDERS' AND COMMERCIAL ASSOCIATION have elected as their president for the ensuing year Mr. Alexander Walker, of the firm of Messrs. Gisborne and Co., than whom, says the Hurkaru, "a better selection could not have been made from the ranks of the mercantile community. They have been equally fortunate in their choice of a Vice-President in the person of Mr. D. C. Mackay, whose capacity and knowledge of Indian affairs leave him with few rivals in the country."

MR. SETON-KARR, late member of the Legislative Council of India, and Secretary to the Bengal Government, has been appointed to the office of Commissioner of Chittagong.

CHITTAGONG.—The Hurkaru hears from Chittagong that the Mary Buckland, the largest barque ever built at that place, was launched the other day. All the European residents of the station, as well as a large number of natives, were present on the occasion. She is looked upon as rather an unlucky vessel by the natives, from the circumstance that a few days before the launch a carpenter fell overboard from her topmast and died immediately; and on the day of launching another accident happened to a Brahmin. The Burmah steamers will soon touch at Chittagong, and if an attempt is really made to civilise the Kookees this port may recover its old glories, as in the days of the Mughls and Portuguese.

THE INDO-RUSSIAN ROMANCE.—Some seven months ago, we (Friend of India) published an account of the journey of a Sikh, named Roy Brahmin, from Jhung, and of a Mussalman named Moolla Ooch, from some other place in India, to St. Petersburg. There both of them acquired fortunes, and each sent for a friend to share his prosperity, Roy Brahmin for Ramdass, and Moolla Ooch for "Galarman Chowk." Meanwhile, both died, and their friends became heirs to their wealth respectively. Before the Russian authorities would recognise the heirs, they applied through our Minister to the Secretary for India in London, who called on the Calcutta authorities for a report on the truth of the story of Ramdass and Galarman Chowk. The former was almost identified, but meanwhile died, so that the fortune of half a million sterling, which he claimed, is still in the hands of the Russians. The latter, who was heir to a sum much less, but still very large, could not be traced in the place which he assigned as his native town. In rendering his name and that of his town, the Russians by no means manifested that philological knowledge for which the learned world gives them credit. Hence the difficulty of identification. The first attempt was made in 1856 and failed, but now "Galarman Chowk" again turns up. Resolved not to be defeated, with the aid of some interpreter in St. Petersburg he has written a letter to his parents in a place called "Cachee," which he asserts to be in Beloochistan. The letter, forwarded from St. Petersburg to Sir C. Wood, and by him to the Governor-general, begins—"Dear parents," and continues in bad English, reminding them of the time when he left his home for Central Asia and Russia, telling them of the fortune which he is heir to, imploring them to convince the Indian authorities of the truth of his story and promising that if they do so, he will return and share his wealth—twenty thousand pounds—with them. Again the Calcutta Foreign-office are making efforts to find out where Cachee is. It is supposed to be Cutchee, a very common name in Western India, especially in Sind and on the border of Beloochistan. This second letter shows that at the bottom of the mystery there must be some truth, and we are curious to know if it will be discovered. It is certain that "Galarman Chowk" is in St. Petersburg, that Ramdass was there and died, that Roy Brahmin did leave Jhung, and that two fortunes of half a million and twenty thousand pounds, made by two natives of India now dead, await the lawful heirs in St. Petersburg.

KANGRA.—All over India the cry is for roads. A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says:—"In the Kangra valley, where five planters and six companies have purchased lands for the growth of the tea-plant, they are, during the rains, shut out from all intercourse with the neighbouring stations of Kangra and Dhurmsalla for the want of bridges over the impassable hill torrents, and a planter or his family may, during that period, suffer or die from want of medical attendance. The Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab has, of late, caused an inquiry to be made regarding the wants of the settlers, and I have no doubt, if anything can consistently be done, he will do his utmost."

DEHRA DHON.—The Hills considers the tea-planters' prospects very bright in the Dhon just now, if present prices can be maintained, but fears that Assam tea, which can even now be sold cheaper than that raised on the spot, will be sent up in larger quantities, and China tea will become more plentiful in the Calcutta market, which will render the profits of Dhon planters much lower. Attention is drawn to arrowroot as an article worth cultivating in the valley. "The price realised is not to be sneered at by prudent men; and we are assured by competent judges that the Dehra arrowroot is superior to any other in India."

MEDICAL AMALGAMATION.—The scheme of medical amalgamation has been sent in to Lord Canning. Sir Charles Wood is so anxious for the whole matter to be concluded before he meets Parliament, that it will be despatched at once to England, and will probably be sanctioned in time for senior surgeons to retire before the rainy season. As, during the session of Parliament now being held, Sir Charles Wood will have enough to do in sustaining the fierce assaults of the Indian officers headed by Colonel Sykes, he may not be unwilling to point to his liberal treatment of the medical service as some atonement. Deputy-inspectors of hospitals will be glad to learn that they will be tempted to surrender their well-paid appointments by a step in rank, carrying with it a proportionate pension. It is believed that all surgeons above twenty years' service will be similarly induced to retire.

EASTERN BENGAL.—According to the Hurkaru there is every reason to fear that unless Lord Canning makes up his mind to act vigorously with regard to the Hill Tribes in Eastern Bengal, he will leave to his successor the legacy of a little war, and the necessity of employing a large force of men to quell it, and that, too, at a time when campaigning is all but impossible. It was but the other day we had to narrate the slaughter of a dozen defenceless villagers near Debroogurh, and now we have to speak of a far more serious outbreak of savages near Sylhet. The correspondent of a mercantile firm, writing from that place on the 24th Jan., says—"In continuation of my previous letter I have to inform you that the ball has at last opened amongst the Khassias at Goonye in the Jyntiah Hills. On the 17th instant, the Sepoy Guard was attacked by 600 Khassias, forty of whom were armed with guns, and it is reported that eighteen out of thirty Sepoys were killed. There is a large muster of Khassias at Mulligool, and it is said they are joined by the Luckysie tribe and some mutineers of the late 34th N.I., who had taken up their abode with the Luckysie people in the Tipperah Hills ever since the mutiny. All the daks between Sylhet and Jyntiah have been waylaid, and the bustees and bazaars are all deserted. Picquet guards are thrown out from the station. The avowed intention of the rebels is to take Sylhet, looting everything in their way. All the tea planters in the district keep regular guard, and should the rebel Khassias come near their gardens you may be sure they will meet with a warm reception."

MEDICAL AMALGAMATION SCHEME.—The Calcutta papers profess once more to give the substance of the medical amalgamation scheme. The Englishman says, "About a hundred and eighty medical officers, at the head of the lists of the three presidencies, are invited to go away; and, as the terms and conditions of retirement for those of from twenty to twenty-five years' service are liberal, it may be assumed that a large exodus will be effected, seeing that, of the main number mentioned above, almost all have completed, or are very near, the former period of servitude. We have been told that, for the officers junior to twenty years, the conditions of amalgamation to be offered will be comparatively disadvantageous; but this assurance is not very intelligible, as nearly all those invited to retire are of twenty years' service; and those who do not go must benefit by the departure of their seniors, unless their fusion with the royal medical list should place a number of the Queen's surgeons above them in the amalgamated list." The Hurkaru adds, with respect to the Bengal Medical Fund, we "may be allowed to congratulate the juniors of seven years' standing, and those lower down on the list, on the chance of receiving their share of some thirty-six thousand rupees, which will be available for distribution amongst them in the general scramble for the Medical Fund. The whole sum in hand to the credit of the Bengal medical service amounts to thirty-seven lacs, but of course the elderly gentlemen will get the largest slice of the cake; and we anticipate that, so far as this presidency is concerned, it will furnish its full quota to the 180 names of those for whom a residence in a colder climate is thought desirable."

DEATH OF MR. A. FIELDING.—We regret to learn from the Bengal papers of the death, on the 31st January, of Mr. Alexander Fielding, agent in Calcutta of the Commercial Bank of India, after an illness of but a few days' duration. Mr. Fielding was first connected with the Commercial Bank at Bombay, and was afterwards transferred to Calcutta. He was quite a young man, being only twenty-nine years old at the time of his death.

TANJORE.—We observe that there has been a general fall of rain throughout the great rice district of Tanjore, which has removed some of the fears of the revenue authorities. There is now a prospect of an average harvest.

MR. MUIR, member of the Sudder Board of Revenue, has been appointed Chief Commissioner of the newly constituted Central Province,

MR. MURDOCH, agent for the Christian Vernacular Society of India, has published a volume consisting of translations into English of tracts published on Christian subjects in the vernaculars of India. The volume contains 35, but the number of such tracts is 774, of which there are in Bengali, 85; Canarese, 39; Guzarati, 58; Hindi, 52; Hindustani, 57; Khassia, 3; Malayalam, 37; Marathi, 89; Oriya, 55; Punjaubi, 2; Pushto, 1; Tamil, 246; Telegu, 50.

PLAIN TRUTHS.—In a case in which two Hindoos were sentenced to long periods of transportation for open brigandage in the Gonda jungles for two years, and for a breach of the Arms Act, Mr. G. Campbell, the Judicial Commissioner, makes the following remarks:—"It seems that there must be something very much wanting in our procedure when there is so much difficulty in reaching with the heaviest penalties of the law persons who have notoriously been engaged for years in open brigandage. It is a weakness which does not occur in other countries. Under a native Government such persons would have been very rapidly hung up; under a civilized system the evidence would easily have been put into tangible shape." It is not often we have such plain truths with regard to the essential weakness of our judicial system told by our high officials.

ADDRESS OF CONDOLENCE.—The Oudh Gazette publishes the report of a great meeting in Lucknow. Some 2,000 native and European gentlemen of the station assembled in the theatre at the Chatter Munzil, to vote a humble address to Her Majesty, testifying the earnest sympathy felt by the inhabitants of Oudh for our Most Gracious Sovereign, under her recent and calamitous bereavement. Colonel Renny resigned the chair to Mr. Campbell, the Judicial Commissioner who, seconded by the Rev. M. Baldwin, in feeling and dignified terms, expressed an earnest and heartfelt assurance of respectful condolence with Her Majesty on the recent affliction with which it has pleased God to visit Her Majesty.

"MESSAGERIES IMPERIALES."—The first steamer belonging to the Messageries Impériales expected at Galle about the end of February, is, according to the Ceylon Times, the Imperatrice, of 3,500 tons, and 500-horse power. She will proceed to Calcutta, and make her first trip to Suez towards the end of March, followed by other steamers at intervals of a month. Every preliminary arrangement has been made at Calcutta in a satisfactory manner, and Lord Canning has given the company's representative every assurance of the most cordial support and assistance in carrying out his arrangements.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.—The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has gazetted the following as honorary magistrates:—In Hooghly: Mr. George Smith and Baboo Bipproo Dass Dey. In Bancoorah: Mr. R. P. Sage, Mr. J. Check, Mr. James Erskine, Baboo Damoodhur Sing, Baboo Heera Lal Sing. In Midnapore: Mr. William Terry and Mr. John A. Clarke. Mr. G. F. Cockburn is appointed Commissioner of Patna, in the place of Mr. Fergusson, nominated to the Local Council.

THE ENTRANCE EXAMINATION OF THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The results of the late examinations were finally decided on the 27th Jan. Of 1,045 candidates, not including those of Ceylon, whose papers have not yet been received, 576 have been "plucked," 72 have passed in the first or highest division, and 397 in the second.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—The order for the re-organisation of the telegraph department have been published. The staff will in future consist of 1 director general, 3 directors, 15 superintendents, 15 assistant superintendents, and 100 inspectors.

INDIA'S GAIN.—The Lahore Chronicle states "that the enormous quantity of 1,022,239 bales of cotton were exported from Bombay during the year 1861; each bale contains about 400 lbs. The number of pounds was therefore 408,825,600, against 292,020,607 lbs. exported in 1856-57, showing a difference of 116,804,993 lbs. in favour of 1861, being an excess of more than 25 per cent. Assuming the average price to be 4d. per lb., the gain to India will be nearly two millions sterling." Assuming our contemporary's figures to be correct, the gain would be very much greater than he supposes. The average price of the whole 408 millions of lbs. exported in 1861 probably exceeded the average of the 292 millions in 1856-57 by 1½d. or 2d. per lb., while the average price of Surats for many months past has not been less, we believe, than 6d. or 7d. per lb., instead of 4d. The total excess of gain should, therefore, shew thus:—408,825,600 lbs. at 2d., £3,407,460; 116,804,993 lbs. at 6d., £2,963,411; total, £6,370,871. It is an error, however, to suppose that the whole of this amount is India's gain. English merchants both here and at home have very largely participated therein. We include the former, because their gains will eventually be carried from the country. The share of India in these gains would probably be four to five millions sterling, and to this amount must be added the ordinary average gain upon the whole amount, say, 1d. per pound including the profits of all classes,—growers, middlemen and shippers. —Times of India.

MEMORIAL TO COLONEL BAIRD SMITH.—A few of the friends of the late Colonel Baird Smith met on the 24th of January at Sir Bartle Frere's, to consider the best means of commemorating the public regard for him. It was agreed to erect a monument in the Cathedral, and should sufficient funds remain, to devote the surplus to a tablet in the Church of Lasswade, Colonel Baird Smith's native parish. Subscriptions are not to exceed two gold mohurs. A committee was appointed to carry out the object in view. Mr. H. W. I. Wood is honorary secretary. Subscriptions will be received by him at the office of the Chamber of Commerce, and by all the banks.

MAJOR PATRICK STEWART has been chosen by the Governor-general to go as Special Envoy to the Court of the Shah of Persia for the purpose of entering into negotiations for the extension of the London and Baghdad line of telegraph by way of Teheran to Kurrachee.

THE CACHAR MELA, which is to Eastern Bengal what those of Mhyjee and Samlajee are to Bombay, has been this year unusually successful. There were many Europeans present, who took part in the races and games of all kinds. Cattle, piece goods, and brass utensils, were the chief articles exposed for sale.

RANGOON.—Something must be done for Rangoon, and that speedily, or the whole town will collapse, and sink into its primitive swamps. Its inhabitants are groaning under a load of taxation such as is not borne, probably, by any other city in the world. What with land rent, assessment in lieu of capitation, municipal and income taxes, the tax collector is for ever at their doors: many who were deluded by the fair prospects held out to them into embarking their capital in the place, are now withdrawing themselves and the wreck of their fortunes to other lands. Land in the best portions of the town is offered for sale at half the Government upset price and fails to find a purchaser even on those terms. The population of the place is rapidly decreasing, and the latest imposition, that of the Income Tax, has succeeded in making all those who were formerly hesitating, decide upon leaving the place as fast as they can. This odious impost, which is about as suitable to a semi-barbarous country like this, as parliamentary government and election by universal suffrage, frightens the people a good deal more than it hurts them. The annual collection from Rangoon is under Rs. 80,000, but every native in the place is, nevertheless, inspired with a most lively horror of the very name of the tax, and every payer would, no doubt, pay Government twice the sum he is assessed at, if he were informed straightforwardly and at once what he had to pay, and knew that no more would be demanded of him. There is something in the numerous forms which they are required to fill up which frightens them very much, and the expression of blank and utter despair which is shown on every Burman's face when a heap of these is put into his hand would be amusing if it was not painful. The Burman population of the town is now decreasing at the rate of ten or twelve families every day. Colonel Phayre's objection to encourage immigration is also another of his failings; and it is to be feared that he has become so wedded to the principle of "Burmah for the Burmese" that he will hardly be induced to adopt any measures for encouraging foreign labour to settle in Pegu, though that is almost all that is required to make it the garden of India.—Englishman.

AN EDUCATIONAL CONTROVERSY seems to be raging in Madras. The Church of England is anxious to have a Christian Grammar-school of its own, considering the Doveton Protestant College a dissenting institution. Even Calcutta with difficulty supports two first-class Grammar-schools for the Christian community. Both there and in Madras all sects should unite round the endowed and successful Doveton Colleges, and, if necessary, infuse more of the Church element into their committees and visiting staff. One strong Christian college, with cheap branches in destitute districts, now abandoned to inferior teachers under the guidance of the priests, is the best educational organisation for the resident Christian population of the three capitals.

A DARING OUTRAGE occurred near Chingleput lately. A French advocate, M. Brun, was travelling by transit from Pondicherry to Madras, and for the first time in his life, under such circumstances, without firearms. Within a few miles of Chingleput he was assailed by a band of native ruffians with swords and spears. After treating him in a brutal manner they robbed him of his money and valuables, and he barely escaped with his life. Mr. Charles Reade, the new collector, took prompt measures to discover the criminals. M. Brun's wounds, though serious, are not considered dangerous.

THE KARENS.—The Bishop of Calcutta, during his visit to Pegu, inspected the Karen Mission Institute at Rangoon. He reports that the answers of the lads in training for the native pastorate "showed an accurate and thoughtful acquaintance with Scripture." Nothing can be more encouraging than the accounts given of the Karen missions, numbering 30,000 Christians. There are fifty candidates for the ministry "lodged in neat but plain houses, built in Dr. Binney's compound, after the model of those to which they are accustomed in their native villages." This is the true style of work; but the Karens were prepared for the Gospel as the Hindoos and Mussulmans are fortified against it.

LIEUTENANT A. B. S. HAMILTON.—According to the Madras Times of the 17th January, Lieut. A. B. S. Hamilton, of the 34th Regiment Madras Light Infantry, was recently tried by a General Court Martial at Fort St. George, for conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having assaulted and struck with a stick Lieut. C. Hayter, of the same regiment. The Court found him guilty, and sentenced him to be suspended from rank and pay for one calendar month. The Court explained that they awarded the above sentence because they found it impossible to estimate the extent of Mr. Hamilton's criminality in resorting to violence apart from the consideration of the very gross insult offered to him and repeated by Lieut. Hayter; and that the act was prompted by the impulse of an unguarded moment at the instant the provocation was offered. The Provincial Commander-in-Chief considered the sentence to be a very lenient one, but in the hope that it might have the good effect of inducing Lieut. Hamilton to keep a very good temper under better control, he did not call upon the Court to revise its award.

DROUGHT.—Local journals mention that Madras is suffering from drought. The usual monsoons have failed. The standing grain is parched and withered. The reservoirs are nearly empty. The heat is beginning to be felt and disease breaking out. Prayers are being offered up in all the churches that the land may be visited with rain.

THE MADRAS PIER.—The Madras Times says the surf has been very high for a few days this season. A masoolah boat, carrying Capt. Gillilan to the steamer, was dashed against the piles of the pier and broken to pieces, the passengers and crew saving themselves by clinging to the fastenings of the pier. A similar accident happened a short time before. The perils of the pier, when a heavy sea is on, are not much inferior to those of the surf.

A BALL was given in Madras Government House on New Year's-day, at which Sir W. Denison and Sir Hope Grant were present, as well as Prince Azim Jah.

CAPTAIN KEIGHLEY.—The Rangoon Gazette hears that Captain H. P. Keighley is to be restored to the service, and replaced in his old position in Pegu.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR C. TOWER, H. M.'s 3rd Dragoon Guards, is appointed Aide-de-Camp to his Excellency the Governor.

DR. C. G. WIEBE has been appointed Inspector-general of prisons in the Bombay Presidency, in succession to Dr. Ogilvie, deceased.

MR. ARTHUR E. D. GREY, Judicial Assistant to the Commissioner in Sind, has been appointed Under Secretary to Government, with the view of his being placed in charge of the Office of Secretary to the Legislative branch of the Bombay Council.

LIEUT. W. F. YATES.—At a naval court-martial held on board the ship Ajdaha, Lieut. William Francis Yates, of the Falkland, was charged, amongst other things, with having wilfully broken his arrest. He having pleaded guilty to the charge was sentenced to be reduced and placed at the bottom of the list of lieutenants, by which he loses fourteen steps.

MAJOR-GENERAL R. W. HONNER, C.B., of her Majesty's Bombay army, has been appointed to act as political resident at Aden.

MR. GEORGE SCOTT, Acting Collector and Magistrate of Rutnagherry, has been appointed to succeed Mr. James Gibbs, as Special Income Tax Commissioner, Collector of Income Tax, and Superintendent of License Tax, for the town and island of Bombay.

DEATH OF MR. R. W. LEEDS.—The Sindian announces the death at Keamaree, on Saturday morning, the 25th of January, of acute dysentery, of Mr. Rowley Ward Leeds, of the Indus Steam Flotilla, formerly Port Officer at Kurrachee. Mr. Leeds was the first who piloted a square-rigged vessel over the bar at Manora, and thus demonstrated the capabilities of this harbour.

ASSISTANT-SURGEON ROBINSON BOUSTEAD is to be tried by court-martial, in consequence of the finding of the naval court on Commander Hopkins. Dr. Boustead will be tried by the same court now trying Assistant-surgeon McCloy.

PLUMBAGO, closely resembling the English, has been discovered in large quantities at Sonah by Dr. Thompson, Civil Assistant Surgeon, Goorgaon. Its analysis gave:—In grains, 1,000; water, 43.54; salts soluble in water, 0.80; sulphates, 0.45; chlorides, 0.34; sesquioxide of iron, 32.94; carbonate of lime, 8.37; silica and alumina, 129.80; carbon, 784.52.

A CONSIDERATE ORDER.—Sir William Mansfield, in a general order, expresses his desire that the practice of marching British troops to church in the middle of the day may be discontinued. The Commander-in-Chief is of opinion that it is prejudicial to their health, and, therefore, requests that in all stations in this Presidency where British troops are quartered, an early morning service may take place.

MR. J. D. INVERARITY is likely to be the new member of Council in room of the Honourable H. W. Reeves. Mr. B. H. Ellis, it is said, will succeed Mr. Inverarity as Commissioner of Sind.

VICTORIA MUSEUM.—Government have formally granted £10,000 for the Victoria Museum, proposed to be established in Bombay. A project is on foot to expand the institution into the Victoria and Albert Museum, in honour of the departed Prince Consort.

THE 38th (COUNTY OF DUBLIN) REGT., 400 strong, embarked for England in the ship King Lear, on the 5th February, at Vingoria. A number of its officers sailed in the Windsor Castle and Cospatrick. Major Hankey and Lieut. and Adjutant Colthurst proceed home overland by the mail of the 12th February.

MR. E. T. GARRETT.—The Gosforth carried away from Bombay the Deputy Postmaster, Mr. E. T. Garrett, who, after an uninterrupted residence of nearly forty years in India, is now on his way to England on sick leave. Few men's lives, perhaps, would furnish more of incident to the biographer than Mr. Garrett's. Present as a mere youth in the British army at the siege of Bhurtpore by Lord Combermere in 1825, Mr. Garrett many years afterwards entered the military service of the King of Oude, in which he was present at a good deal of desultory fighting between the State troops and the refractory talookdars of the province. It is about thirteen years since Mr. Garrett left the Oude service and entered the department of the Post-office. A man of unswerving uprightness, of considerable energy, and intimately acquainted with the character of the people, Mr. Garrett was well fitted for the duties of the position he filled. He seems to have gained the esteem of a very wide circle of friends in India, and will be followed to his native shores with the good wishes of all classes. He is succeeded in the Bombay Post-office by Mr. E. T. Beauvais, of the Uncovenanted Civil Service, and late Postmaster in Sind. For the important services rendered by this gentleman during the eventful days of the mutiny, in which Mr. Beauvais was one of the greatest sufferers, losing wife and family in the massacre at Indore, he was awarded a medal by Sir Charles Wood himself.—Times of India.

DR. GRIERSON.—The General commanding in Sind has issued a general order on the services of Dr. Grierson, promoted to Bombay, in which the following occurs:—"Surgeon-major Grierson's name has become identified with Sind; no useful institution, no good work, but has received his active co-operation and support. Many originated from him. Sind generally, and Kurrachee especially, is deeply indebted to him." The natives have resolved to establish a school bearing Dr. Grierson's name.

"RULES OF THE CASTE."—The first adultery case under the Penal Code has come before Mr. Crawford, the police magistrate of Bombay. Ambarrao Norottum, a plate layer on the Baroda railway, had been married fifteen years to Crustabhaia, and has one son. On his return from work, some three months ago, he found his wife had decamped with some of his property. With the aid of the police she was traced and found in company with one Soonderjee, whom she refused to leave, alleging that her husband had not given her bread enough to eat. On being asked to find bail, Soonderjee said he had committed no fault. The magistrate told him he was charged with adultery, and, if proved guilty, was liable to five years' imprisonment. The defendant said he had done it for the last month and a half according to the rules of the caste!

A LIBEL ACTION.—The Supreme Court at Bombay has been engaged for twelve entire days in trying an action of libel, in which a Maharaj, a high-priest of the Wullabhacharya sect of Hindoos, sues the editor of a Gujaratee newspaper for damages. The case, which, from its connection with one of the worst phases of native superstition, has excited considerable interest in the community, is not likely to be concluded for a week more.

ABUSE OF MILITARY POWER.—The Deccan Herald states "on good authority, that Mr. Elliot, the Assistant judge, has, within the last three or four days, been removed from his house at Kirkee by a guard, acting under the orders of Colonel Lucas, commandant of artillery. We know nothing more of the circumstances under which the removal took place, than that Mr. Elliot was at issue with Colonel Lucas as to the terms on which he was to be relieved of a lease on which he held his house. Mr. Elliot, we believe, contended that he had a right to receive from the officer in whose favour he was called upon to vacate, an acknowledgment transferring the liabilities he was under to his landlord to the income. And, looking to the separate General Order of 1856 on the subject of Cantonments and Quarters, at page 35, para. 19, we find it distinctly laid down, that 'an officer or soldier in whose favour another party has been removed from a house, is to make good all engagements to which the previous tenants were liable,' and nothing can be plainer than this. If our information be correct, and we have every reason to believe that it is, there cannot be a shadow of a doubt that Mr. Elliot was merely insisting upon his right in refusing to leave his house without the demand he made being satisfied. But however that may be, and to disclaim any attempt to argue for Mr. Elliot without a better knowledge of the facts of the case than we at present possess, it becomes our duty, in our public capacity, to dwell on the occurrence, not as between Colonel Lucas and Mr. Elliot, but as an arbitrary and indiscreet abuse of military power, aimed at rights which we cannot be too jealously careful to do our utmost to preserve intact."

Dr. MOREHEAD is about to retire from the service. Whether Dr. Roche does so is uncertain. By the rules of the fund, he must retire before the 31st of March or pay a fine of Rs. 1,680 for remaining another year in the service; and unless he is permitted to retire on the pension of his rank, it is believed that he will elect to pay the fine. By the present rules of the service he cannot retire upon that pension, but would be able to do so under the forthcoming ones. The committee of the Medical Fund passed the following resolutions at their meeting of the 7th instant:—1. That the annuity of £168 per annum for 1862 be allotted to B. P. Rooke, M.D., from date of retirement, provided he retires from the service within three months from this date, under Arts. 11 and 12 of the Sect. V. of the Regulations. 2. That the annuity of £140 per annum for 1862 be allotted to A. Burn, M.D., from the 1st instant. 3. That the annuity of £112 per annum for 1862 be allotted to C. Morehead, M.D., from date of retirement, provided he retires within three months from this date, under Arts. 11 and 12 of Section V. of the Regulations.

MAJOR CURTIS has resigned the command of the Bombay Volunteer Corps, owing to a misunderstanding with the committee.

Mr. W. F. HUNTER has been appointed manager of the branch of the Bank of Bombay, to be opened at Poonah.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Feb. 12).—Cotton.—The advices to hand on the 25th ult., reporting the peaceful settlement of our dispute with the North American States, caused great excitement in our cotton market, and a rapid advance in price. Before the arrival of the mail, New Broach, Dholera, and Oomrawatee were selling at Rs. 185, 175, and 175 respectively. Immediately after her advices became known European houses made large purchases of these at Rs. 197 to 200 for the first named, Rs. 186 to 187½ for the second, and Rs. 185 for the third. The Jeddo's news caused a further advance, and on the 14th inst. the day after her arrival, Broach reached the very high figure of Rs. 204, and Dholera Rs. 190. During the fortnight the contracts for new Cotton cannot have been less than from 60,000 to 70,000 shipment bales. Wool.—Market very firm, and large purchases have been made both by European and native firms at advanced rates. Stocks of good qualities are light, and arriv. is moderate. Coffee.—The market is firm, and very bare of stocks of all descriptions. Of Malabar two lots are reported sold at Rs. 9½ to 9½ per surut maund. Linseed.—Market very firm, with light arrivals.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Feb. 12).—Grey Goods.—Shirtings.—There is no improvement in the demand for these goods, which are only saleable in small lots at the reduced quotations given in our last. Long Cloths are not much asked for, and the only sale reported for the fortnight is a small lot of 9 lbs. at Rs. 5-4. Domestic are without improvement. T. Cloths of 4 to 6 lbs. are in moderate request, but prices are unchanged. Jackets of low counts continue in demand, and are light in stock. Bleached Goods generally are unchanged since our last. Turkey Red Goods are in moderate request. T. Red Plain Mills are reported sold at Rs. 4-8, Prints from Rs. 6½ to 7½, and Scarfs from ans. 13½ to Rs. 2-7. Coloured Tarns.—Prices of these are well supported. Metals of nearly all descriptions are very depressed.

THE MADRAS EUROPEAN FORCES.

Jan. 21.—No. 43.—H.E. the Gov. in Council directs it to be notified that H.M.'s Govt. and the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, have decided that the Eur. portion of the milly. force to be hereafter maintained in the Madras Pres. shall consist of 29 Batteries of Artillery,

2 Regiments of Cavalry,
11 Regiments of Infantry.

THE MADRAS NATIVE ARMY.

The decision of the Govt. of India in regard to the native army of this Pres. having also been received, H.E. in Council is pleased to publish the same for general information:—

"The native cavalry has been brought down to four regts., and the Gov. gen. in Council considers that no further reductions can be made in this arm."

"The Governor-general in council has given every consideration to the services of the Madras army, and has felt every desire to employ the regiments of that army in places where they could be substituted for other troops. This H. Excy. in Council finds can only be done to a very small extent. The requirements of the several districts occupied by the Madras army are reported to be far below the garrisons now employed in those districts; and though the amount of force assumed by each of the district officers as sufficient for his own district, cannot safely be taken in the aggregate as showing the strength at which the Madras native army should be fixed, since some reserve in addition to the actual requirements of each district is necessary; it is clear that a large reduction of the present army is called for.

"The extent of this reduction has been fully considered by the Governor-general in Council, who has arrived at the conclusion that eight of the present fifty-two native infantry regiments, must at once be disbanded.

"The force of native infantry now fixed, viz., forty-four regiments, is, the Governor-general in Council is satisfied, ample for the requirements of the Madras Presidency including the occupation of the Central Provinces, Pegu and the Straits, and this force provides a sufficient reserve not only for any emergency on the Continent of India, but for any likely calls from Pegu and the Straits."

3. H. Excy. in Council desires to observe, that the measure ordered above is one of the unavoidable results of the reduction of the Indian army to a peace establishment.

4. In communication with H. Excy. the C.-in-C., the Governor in Council announces that the 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, 51st, and 52nd regiments N. I., are the corps to be disbanded, and directs that they be finally broken up from the 31st March, 1862.

5. Commanding officers, officers commanding companies, and permanent adjutants and quarter masters who may not previously be appointed to corresponding situations in other corps, will be permitted to draw their respective command and staff allowances for a period of six months from the above date.

6. All regtl. appts. will cease on the date the regts. are broken up; but subadar majs., regtl. havildar majs., color havildars and drum and tife majs. whose transfer to other corps may be ord., will retain their present staff rank and allowances.

7. H.E. the C. in C. will be good enough to issue the necessary subsidiary instructions for giving effect to this order.

The annexed general order has been promulgated:—

"Horse Guards, S.W., Feb. 19.—With regard to the addition of twelve non-purchase regiments of the line to the British army, H.R.H. the General Commanding in Chief is pleased, with the concurrence of the Rt. Hon. the Secretaries of State for War and for India, to establish the following regulations:—

"1. In non-purchase corps of the line, no officers can sell their commissions. Those who enter from the Indian service retain their claim to Indian pension, and all others are entitled, with her Majesty's approval, to retire on full or half-pay, according to the terms of her Majesty's Warrants of Oct. 14, 1858, and March 28, 1861. 2. An officer joining a purchase regiment from the Indian service will be placed on the same footing in all respects with the rest of the officers of that regiment. Having forfeited all claim to Indian pension, he will become entitled to retire on full pay or half-pay, under the warrants above specified.

"Non-purchase officers of such regiments have the privileges of receiving, subject to the consent in each case of the General Commanding-in-Chief and of the Secretary of State for War (which is liable to be withheld if the retirement results from misconduct) an allowance on retirement, of £100 for each year's service, whether in the British or Indian army provided the total amount does not exceed the price of the commission resigned.

"By order of His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief, JAMES YORKE SCARLETT, Adjutant-General."

MR. JOHN DICKINSON ON PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.

If some kindly power would only endow us with the gift of making others see us as we see ourselves, no man would be more conspicuous among his fellows than Mr. John Dickinson, F.R.S., F.R.G.S., F.R.A.S., F.E.S., and Chairman of the India Reform Society. This distinguished authority on Indian questions has taken in hand to dole out to members of Parliament at the beginning of every session some few crumbs of information from his own inexhaustible wallet. No doubt there is ample room for improvement on the part of the representatives of the British people, especially as regards their knowledge of Eastern subjects, but it does not necessarily follow that Mr. Dickinson is the individual of all others best qualified to instruct them. Indeed, in the pamphlet he has lately published under the title of "An Address to the Members of the House of Commons on the Relation between the Cotton Crisis and Public Works in India," he does little more than scold them for allowing themselves to be dominated by "the Railway and Old Indian Cabal." The glorification of the first personal pronoun is also an object of particular care, and if India could have been saved from mutinies, famine, and debt, it would have been by listening to the advice of this exceedingly modest Fellow of many Societies.

Si Pergama dextrâ

Defendi poscent, etiam hæc defensa fuissent.

According to Mr. Dickinson, there is nothing like water—not as a beverage, but as a means of communication—and so far we are disposed to go with him. There can hardly be two opinions as to the value of irrigation to a parched and thirsty soil, or the cheapness and convenience of water transit; but the poles are not more widely asunder than the admission of these obvious facts, and the reckless assertion that if there should arise a dearth of cotton in England it "will be due entirely to the refusal of the Indian Government to make the required cheap communications and works of irrigation." In the same spirit of wilful exaggeration this writer elsewhere affirms that the want of such works "is the sole cause why India did not long ago compete with, and even beat America, as a source of cotton supply and a market for our manufactures." Again, "the distress of some millions of our own most industrious and intelligent operatives, for want of raw produce, and for want of markets, endangering our commerce, our marine, our revenue, and our social security, is distinctly traceable to that policy of sacrificing national to personal objects, in this question of Indian public works, which Parliamentary pressure has hitherto forced upon every Government." Surely it does not need much experience of mankind to arrive at the conviction that no good is ever gained by overstating a case, or by imputing culpable indifference and interested motives to those whom it is sought to conciliate, instruct, and rouse into action. At the same time, we fully agree with Mr. Dickinson that it would have been better to have laid down rough tramways in every direction, than to have sunk such an immense capital in lines that only half meet the requirements of the country. Speed is not so much an object as easy and safe transport at a moderate rate. Bulky goods, such as rice, cotton, and salt, which are also low priced, cannot afford to pay for quick carriage, nor is the delay of a week or two of any consequence whatever. The same with minerals and manufactured articles. The main lines of railway will unquestionably be of immense service to Government for the transport of troops and military stores, but they certainly have not been wisely designed so far as the real wants of the people are concerned. Thus many important cities have been passed by, which would have materially advanced the interests of shareholders by the traffic they would have contributed. But commercial considerations were overridden by those of a purely political nature, and thus dividends will be diminished in order to lessen the military charges of the State. "The Indian Tramway Company," indeed, if properly managed—of which we entertain little doubt—will supply to a great extent the chief deficiencies of the present railway system, and will furnish the connecting links to bring the great native marts in the interior of the country into communication with the trunk lines. But for that no thanks are due to the Government, whose selfish and shortsighted policy has caused such an enormous waste of money, and time, and power. Mr. Dickinson, however, is scarcely fair in declaring that each additional length of railway diminishes the receipts per mile. That will occasionally happen, of course, where the new section traverses a thinly-peopled district; but, as a rule, every addition may be expected to increase both receipts and profits. Still, it is to be regretted that more attention is not paid to the improvement of the great waterways. Although it may be impossible to make them at all equal to the inland navigation of North America—in consequence of the division of the year into wet and dry seasons—they might yet be turned to excellent account for the conveyance of heavy and bulky goods, and at a comparatively trifling expense. But, after all, why should the Government be called upon to execute these public works, when private companies may undertake them with a certainty of success? Beyond affording every facility and encouragement, it is surely the duty of the Government not to interfere with private enterprise, or to enter the labour market in competition with individuals. Instead, then, of abusing the rulers of India and finding fault with the grand old Company that, with all its shortcomings, founded an empire, Mr. Dickinson would render far greater service to that country and its inhabitants by employing his talents and influence in persuading English capitalists to invest their money in undertakings that promise to be largely remunerative to their originators, at the same time that they open up a new era of prosperity to the industrial classes of the Indian peninsula.

ORDER REIGNS AT COSSIMPORE.

ONE man's meat, says the proverb, is another man's poison. An "amicable adjustment of a dispute," as defined by the Officiating Commissioner of the Dacca Division, simply means the ruin and destruction of one of the disputants. His idea of reciprocity is strictly Hibernian—it is all on one side. For some time past the manager of the Cossimpoire Factory has been in a state of antagonism with the neighbouring ryots because, after entering into contracts to supply him with Indigo plant, and receiving money on account, they coolly set him and his agreements at defiance. After trying the effect of forbearance and conduct of a conciliatory character, the manager was compelled to have recourse to the law courts for protection, and readily obtained decrees in his favour. The next thing to be done was to serve these decrees upon the ryots, and it does not appear that any great difficulty attached to that process, though payment was still evaded. The Deputy Magistrate of Madareepore then enters upon the scene, and, as he himself states, "in a morning walk called together two or three of the reputed headmen, and explained to them that they could by no means evade the payment of the decree money by violence, but simply opened themselves to additional punishment, and advised them to—compromise with the Factory." Mr. Godfrey naively adds, "they felt impressed with what I said and went away quietly." It would have been rather strange if they had not "felt impressed" with advice that tallied so exactly with their own wishes. At first we may suppose they were not a little alarmed when the potent administrator of the law summoned them to his august presence, and warned them of the consequences of acting in contempt of Court. True, there is a certain degree of incompatibility between the ideas of evasion and violence, but possibly the awe-stricken "headmen" would not scrutinise very closely the accuracy or grace of the magistrate's language. It may be asked, however, parenthetically, if by the phrase "reputed headmen" Mr. Godfrey means "headmen of reputation," or persons who were reputed to be headmen? There is some little difference, it will be seen, between these two interpretations, but we are inclined to adopt the former, as it would hardly be fair upon the deputy magistrate to suppose that he could not ascertain who were really the headmen of their respective villages. Again, it sounds rather oddly in English ears to be told that the refractory ryots "opened themselves," though among the Japanese it would merely suggest the notion of the "happy despatch." As Mr. Godfrey's familiarity with Bengali may perhaps have impaired his acquaintance with English, we will endeavour to overlook his defective phraseology, and consider only the nature of the advice he tendered to these "reputed" individuals. It must be borne in mind that he appeared among them in the character of a magistrate, whose duty it was to enforce obedience to the law, and to see that the decrees of the Civil Court were properly carried out. But after telling them that if they attempted to evade payment by violence they would open themselves to additional punishment, he suggests a course that amounts to evasion. He advises them to compromise with the factory—that is, to pay no more than they are absolutely forced to do. This counsel was naturally acceptable to the men of reputation, and so deeply were they impressed with its wisdom and originality that they went away quietly, communing with their own hearts, and grateful to Brahma for setting so excellent a magistrate over them. A couple of days having intervened, a reputed headman walked into the court-room and made the satisfactory announcement that “the generality of the ryots were willing to compromise if Mr Smith (the manager) would receive Rs. 15 per beegah for all the five years of his complaint, instead of the Rs. 33 that was (sic) being now decreed to him.” The unfortunate manager, driven to his wit's end by fruitless litigation, and only anxious to save something out of the fire, wearily consented to this “amicable adjustment,” and the result was, to use Mr. Godfrey's enthusiastic expression, that every day scores of ryots came in and compromised. Actually, 144 ryots paid Rs. 15 instead of Rs. 33, and Mr. Smith informs the magistrate that he thinks he might be fully justified upon the whole in coming to the conclusion that there is now a pretty fair prospect of coming to terms with the ryots. “In the mean time,” he goes on to say, “I must continue to institute fresh suits daily, as I am fully convinced by past experience that were the judicial officers and troops, so considerably sent here by Government, to be removed, there would at once be an end to all ‘peaceable adjustments.’” A little further on he writes, “We are, in fact, as quiet as bees, and, as I expected we should be; this quiet, however, I can alone attribute to the presence of the troops and yourself here.” Mr. Godfrey, however, declines to subscribe to this opinion, and assures the Lieutenant-governor that “the profound quiet now reigning in my Sub-Division, which is a couple of days' journey from end to end, is far from being due to thirty sepoy stuck in a corner, where they are almost equally distant from the ends of my Sub-Division as they were at Furreedpore.” With all due deference we may be permitted to doubt the fact that the presence of thirty sepoy, even if “stuck in a corner,” had nothing to do with the “profound quiet” so happily reigning in Madareepore. The knowledge that by a forced march they could be brought in twenty-four hours to operate upon any given point could scarcely fail to have some weight with the most refractory of the malcontents. But Mr. Godfrey's views of things in general are decidedly peculiar. For instance, after recording the pleasing intelligence that the ryots were coming in by scores to pay 15 rupees instead of 33, he coolly observes—“It is needless, then, to remark that the spirit displayed by the ryots is far from being lawless or turbulent, and certainly opposed to the inference that they were determined not to pay.” And yet the last paragraph but one of his absurd and self-contradictory letter contains the acknowledgment that even the compromise would not be carried out if the Executive Officer were removed:—

“I am, however,” he says, “not of opinion that the Civil Courts are no longer required here, and neither do I think all matters will be amicably adjusted without the presence of an Executive Officer here, for there is distrust on both sides, and the ryots will not compromise unless I witness the transaction, for they seem to be under the impression that all the transactions of the factory as to contracts are fraudulent.”

No wonder that the ryots should imagine that a pitfall is being dug for them when they find a magistrate counselling them not to pay so much as one-half of the amount required of them by his own decrees. No wonder they believe that the Government is unfriendly to the planters when they see an Executive Officer, supported by thirty sepoy, “stuck in a corner,” employed to assist them in evading payment of their just debts and the due fulfilment of their contracts. But what is to be said of an English magistrate who can complacently tell his superiors that these false, contract-breaking, treacherous scoundrels “seem to be under the impression that all the transactions of the Factory as to contracts are fraudulent?” If any such impression was really entertained, it might well be attributed to his own suggestion to Mr. Smith that he should accept Rs. 15 for Rs. 33. The phrase, however, is not the less a gratuitous insult to the proprietors and manager of the Cossimpoore Factory. The concluding paragraph of Mr. Godfrey's letter is so perfectly characteristic, that we cannot resist the temptation of copying it in extenso:—

“It is satisfactory, however, to contemplate that now there is laid a foundation for a speedy and complete adjustment of differences between the factory and ryots, and much that would interfere with the tranquillity of the district and the welfare of its inhabitants is likely to be obviated, and I trust my conduct in the matter will meet with the approbation of Government, it being fashioned after the directions contained in letter No. 6,431 from the Under Secretary to the Government of Bengal to the Commissioner of the Division.”

This modest appreciation of his own services is ratified by the Bengal Government, and “the Lieutenant-Governor considers this Report to be satisfactory.” That Sir J. P. Grant should take this view of the case was to be expected from one who has shown himself so miserably incompetent as to be singled out for the “bad pre-eminence” of civic knighthood; but it is rather startling to read that “the attention of his Excellency in Council is solicited to this report as a proof that the general laws are, in practice, amply sufficient to provide for cases of contract for agricultural produce, as they are for all other contracts.” Why, if this Report proves anything, it is that the general laws are wholly insufficient to enforce the fulfilment of contracts, for even with the assistance of the thirty sepoy so strategically disposed of in a corner, a sub-divisional magistrate is only able to induce a limited number of ryots to pay fifteen rupees for thirty-three. Fortunately, however, for European settlers a new Contract Law is about to be introduced, in spite of the Bengal clique and their obsolete prejudices. Very few capitalists, we suspect, would otherwise be tempted to invest their money in a country where such “amicable adjustments” are the order of the day.

INDIA STOCKS TRANSFER BILL.

MEDICAL OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Mr. BAZLEY asked the right hon. gentleman the Secretary of State for India when his promise to place the medical officers of her Majesty's Indian army upon a perfect footing of equality with the medical officers of her Majesty's British army would be carried into effect; and inquired the reason why medical officers of her Majesty's Indian army had been so long deprived of commission, substantive pay, furlough pay, and retiring pensions according to their relative rank, but which had been granted to the medical officers of the British army, both at home and in the colonies ever since the 1st day of October, 1858?

Sir C. WOOD: I hope it will not be supposed that in answering the questions put by my hon. friend I admit the correctness of the statements to which I am called on to reply. The circumstances of the two services are so entirely different that it is impossible to put the officers in each on a perfect footing of equality. Arrangements have been for some time in contemplation with regard to the medical service in India, but it is impossible to proceed further till we receive information which we have called for from India, but of which we are not yet in possession.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 28.

THE LATE MADRAS AND BOMBAY ARMIES.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary of State for India whether the right of officers of the native regiments of the Madras and Bombay armies to succeed by seniority to the command of troops or companies, and to the ultimate command of their regiments, was abolished; and whether officers who had elected for local service with their regiments could be sent on general duty notwithstanding their wish to serve with their own regiments? He maintained that with respect to those officers the right of succession to the command of companies and regiments had been practically abolished. He contended that the officers of the Indian service had a right to complain that the principle on the faith of which they entered the service was violated. The practical result of those arrangements was to abolish entirely regimental ranks. The 21st and 22nd Victoria, cap. 100, guaranteed to the military and naval forces of the Indian service the like pay, pensions, and privileges, as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the company; and it was also provided that the advantages as to pay, pensions, and allowances, privileges, promotions, and otherwise, should continue and be maintained in any plan for the reorganisation of the Indian army, anything in the Act to the contrary notwithstanding. He thought he had made out distinctly that these guarantees had been violated, and the inference might consequently be drawn that regimental promotion was to be superseded and virtually annihilated by the transfer of officers from one regiment to another.

After some remarks by Sir G. BOWYER, evidently founded on a misapprehension of facts, Sir CHARLES WOOD explained, that owing to the reduction of the native armies a considerable number of officers had unavoidably been thrown out of employment, but it was the intention of the Government to employ them again, as far as possible, with the rank to which they were entitled by seniority. The best answer, however, which he could, perhaps, give to his hon. friend was to read an extract from the order which had been sent out to India on the subject:—“Officers of the staff corps will be rarely appointed to do duty with native regiments retaining their regular organisation. When so appointed, however, and on public grounds, it would be unjust to deprive them of the privileges attached to their relative regimental rank. Their position in the regiment, therefore, will be similar to that of the officers belonging to the general list formed by your General Order No. 1,637 of 1859, and they will be entitled, while so employed, to all the advantages of their (original) position as regimental officers. Officers of the staff corps, who, while doing duty with their former corps, may be promoted in the staff corps to a higher grade, will at once cease to do duty with their former regiments, and must remain unemployed until their services are required for staff duty.”

Mr. H. BAILLIE was not satisfied with these explanations.

INDIAN ARMY EXPENSES.

Colonel DUNNE asked the Secretary of State for War whether the total force maintained on the Indian establishment had been decided on for this year; whether he would lay upon the table of the House, before he brought in the Army Estimates, the data upon which the capitation rate of £10 per man which was to be paid by the Indian Government had been calculated; whether the amount so produced was to cover the expenses of the depots of Indian regiments at home, of recruiting, and of the payment of pensioners from Indian regiments; and whether he would furnish an account in detail of the items and services to which this payment by the Indian Government would be applicable? In putting those questions he said his object was to ascertain that no expenses which ought to be borne by the Indian Government were charged upon the Home Treasury. He also remarked that he understood that the depot battalions were to be reduced this year.

Sir G. C. LEWIS said that in answer to the first question of the hon. and gallant gentlemen he had to state that the total force in India, exclusive of local troops was, during the year, to consist of 56 battalions of infantry, 11 regiments of cavalry, and 16 brigades of artillery. The reply to the second question was, that the capitation rate of £10 per man was calculated on the total force of the Imperial army in India, including cavalry, infantry, and artillery officers and men, as shown on the monthly muster rolls. The sum thus calculated was paid by the Indian Government to cover all expenses of raising and training men in the United Kingdom, and was continued until they landed in India. It did not include clothing. There was another sum of £3. 10s. per man, which was calculated, in a similar manner, for non effective charges. It was estimated that those payments would in 1862-3 amount to £730,000 for effectives, and £255,000 for non-effectives—giving a total of £985,000. Formerly the effective charges used to be paid over by the Indian Government to the War-office without appearing in the estimates. In the present year, 1862-3, these charges were included, for the first time, in the Estimates, the increase in which was therefore in a great degree merely apparent. The money received from the Indian Government would not be deducted from the Estimates, but would be paid into the Exchequer.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 3.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel GILPIN asked the Secretary of State for India if he would lay upon the table the report of the Commissioners who were assembled in India to consider upon what terms officers of the Indian Army, for whom no active employment could be found, should be permitted to retire; and also the decision of the Home Government in reference to the recommendation of such Commissioners? In case the right hon. baronet should refuse the return he asked for, he begged also to inquire of him whether he could state the number of promotions which would be made in consequence of the retirement sanctioned by the Home Government.

Sir C. WOOD did not think it was desirable to lay on the table the report alluded to by the hon. and gallant gentleman. It was the report of a commission appointed by the Indian Government. The Indian Government disapproved the report; and all the Home Government had done was to concur in disallowing the recommendations of the commission. The Government of India thought that a smaller retirement was desirable, and a retirement of such a character had, in the meantime, been made out by the Home Government. Their scheme was for the retirement of lieutenant-colonels, majors, and captains, to the number of 300 in all. Up to the date of the last accounts, 122 lieutenant-colonels, 83 majors, and 30 captains had accepted the proposal, and the Government had reason to believe that the full number of 300 would avail themselves of the retirement. The hon. and gallant gentleman had asked him as to the number of promotions. One-half the vacant lieutenant-colonelcies, and the whole of the vacancies in the rank of major and in that of captain would be filled by promotion. There had been 59 promotions to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, consequent on the 122 retirements; 83 to that of majors—equal to number of retirements; and 30 to that of captain, the same as the number of retirements. It would thus be seen that there had been 235 retirements and 172 promotions. The Government had reason to believe that there would be 65 more retirements of captains, and if so there would be 65 promotions. These, like all other promotions in the Indian Army, were by seniority.

INDIAN RELIEFS.

Mr. H. BAILLIE called attention to the want of system which prevails in relieving her Majesty's troops serving in India and in the colonies, and which, he contended, was injurious to the service as well as to the country, and was simply a question of economy.

Sir C. WOOD begged to reply to the observations of the hon. gentleman, and he trusted that the statement he had to make would prove satisfactory. It had been asked what change had been introduced in respect to the system of reliefs in consequence of the amalgamation of the forces in India, as the present mode of relieving the Queen's troops in India and elsewhere was stated to be unsatisfactory, imposing on them hardships. When the time arrived for converting the local troops in India into regiments of the line, it was necessary to consider what would be the demands on the regiments, in order to know the number of regiments that should be added to the army, and the question of reliefs was carefully gone into by Lord Herbert himself and the rest of the Government. It was quite true that there had been instances, but not recently, of regiments serving abroad for twenty years; but it had been the great object with the military authorities to bring the system of reliefs to ten years abroad and five years at home, being about equivalent to two-thirds of the army abroad and one-third at home. In this calculation the subject was generally treated as confined to infantry. When the question of the formation of regiments of the line from the local troops in India was under discussion, the number was determined by the consideration to which he had adverted—namely, that such a number of battalions should be formed as would enable one-third always to be at home. According to this principle, there would be 56 battalions of infantry in India, 38 abroad in the various colonial possessions, and 47 at home, making 141 battalions of infantry of the line. It was true that a much larger force had been sent to Canada, and a larger force was also employed in New Zealand, than usual; but when the demand for men beyond the ordinary number in various places should cease, then some of the regiments would return home, and would enable that arrangement, which was a desideratum both for officers and men, of ten years' service abroad and five years' service at home, to be carried out. It was the object of the Government to attain that most desirable state of things; and he believed there never was a period when it was more nearly approached than at present, when the numbers of battalions at present in India was 56, abroad 45, and at home 40. Of course, circumstances might arise occasioning a temporary demand for additional regiments abroad; but, under ordinary circumstances, the arrangement he had mentioned would be the rule.

MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY moved the following resolution:—"That all moneys required on account of the raising, training, &c., officers and men for service in India, and all other expenses connected therewith, shall be voted in this House in a separate estimate; and that all such moneys shall be repaid into the British Exchequer by the Indian Government." He observed that his proposal was supported by high authority, and it was dictated by common sense. It appeared from the Army Estimates for the present year that a sum of £985,500 was to be expended for and to be repaid by India. So large a sum ought to put the House on its guard. The charge fell, first, upon the British taxpayer; but it was especially for the interest of the Indian taxpayer that the account should be kept separate, that he might know that all was fair and above-board, instead of the Indian finances being muddled up with the British.

Sir G. LEWIS, observing that the resolution could have no effect upon the Estimates for this year, said, if the Government had adopted the plan recommended by Sir Henry, he confessed that he should have expected him, as a financial reformer, to have protested against so complicated a system. The present system, which was an improvement upon the past, was arranged on fixed and simple principles, and showed the whole military expenditure in one account. Not the slightest advantage could result from adopting the proposed plan, and he did not think it would be practicable to separate the accounts.

The resolution was supported by Colonel Sykes, and opposed by Mr. Ayrton.

Mr. HENLEY asked whether, when the House came to vote the Ways and Means for the service of the year, this sum of £985,500 would have to be provided for. If so, an equivalent burden would be cast upon the British taxpayer; if not, what was the use of placing the sum in the Estimates, and how was it to be got back again?

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER explained that, according to the new system, there would practically be no advances to the Indian Government, who undertook to make monthly repayments at the rate of £3. 10s. per man for the non-effective, and £10 per man on the effective service. Payments would be made at very short intervals, and repaid, in the same financial year, into the Exchequer on account of the miscellaneous revenue. The payments would come back into that branch of the revenue as quickly as the sums went out from the War Department.

Further discussion and explanations followed, and the House divided, when the resolution was negatived by 132 to 55.

INDIA STOCK TRANSPORT BILL.

This Bill was read a third time.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE MR. W. D. ARNOLD.—Mr. M. Townsend has addressed the following letter to the leading journal:—"Sir,—The friends of the late William Delafeld Arnold—and they include all Rugby men of his standing, and most Anglo-Indians—will be rejoiced to hear that his Punjabee fellow-workers, headed by Mr. Macleod, have carried out a scheme for keeping his memory green. Mr. Wyon has, at their order, completed a medal, three of which, in gold and silver, will be given every year to the ripest scholars in the schools which he founded in the Punjab. The medal bears on the obverse his likeness in relief, exquisitely carved, and though, like all likenesses from photographs, a little too old, conveying the precise impression which so fascinated his friends—a kind of sweet stateliness in accord with the whole tone of his mind. The reverse bears the simple inscription, 'In memory of W. D. Arnold, First Director of the Department, 1855.' One medal in gold has been sent with a graceful thoughtfulness to his sorrowing mother, the widow of the late Dr. Arnold. William Arnold did not live long enough to gain his true place in the world, but he had time enough given him to make himself of importance to a Government like that of Lord Dalhousie, to mould the education of a great province, and to win the enduring love of all with whom he ever came in contact."

JAPAN.—Mr. Alcock, the British representative in Japan, has sent home a narrative of his journey from Nagasaki to Yeddo, of which the Athenaeum gives a very interesting abridgment. He confirms the oft-repeated statements as to the fertility of the soil and the very favourable character of the climate. The future commerce of Japan will have its principal seat, according to Mr. Alcock, at Osaka. From the sea it is reached by the port of Hiogo, where there is safe anchorage, and the navigation for cargo-boats over the river is short and easy. Osaka is a great mercantile centre, situated on a plain, intersected by twenty branches of the river, and spanned by innumerable bridges, some of them 300 paces across; with this great advantage, above all others, over Yeddo, that, although an Imperial city, it is comparatively free from the two-sworded generation of locusts and obstructions. Of the fighting powers of the Japanese, Mr. Alcock records an instructive piece of gossip:—"M. de Wit told me he was one day asking an old Japanese about the army and the people, and particularly what the latter would do if a foreign Power were to invade the country. 'Oh, run away!' he unhesitatingly exclaimed. 'How! run away?' 'Certainly we should; it is not our business to fight; that is for the two-sworded and the Daimios' soldiers.' 'Oh, then, they would fight, I suppose, for you say they are in large numbers.' The old man hesitated a moment: 'Hem! yes. Well, you see that is not sure; they are like the newly-built fireproof houses we have just been building here—they have not been tried yet.'" The accumulation of capital is checked by the existence of a numerous non productive class, the Daimios, or great landlords, and their retainers. A peculiar difficulty attends travelling in Japan. The passage of a foreigner along a road renders it unfit for the Tycoon (the Prince); before the Tycoon can pass over it the road must be broken up and remade. Admiral Hope mentions an instance where the inconvenience of this custom disturbed the matrimonial arrangements of the head of the Government. The Tycoon should go to Miako to marry the Mikado's daughter, but, Mr. Alcock having travelled on the road, in accordance with the custom it should be remade. In consequence of the delay thereby caused, the Tycoon was late for the wedding.

TRADE WITH JAPAN.—The exports from the Port of Kanagawa, which amounted in value to £389,958 in the first half of the year 1860, rose to £408,150 in the first half of 1861, silk, tea, copper, and oil forming the chief items. The imports, which were only £34,636 in the former period, reached £184,312 in the latter; but it is alleged that a very large portion represents goods lying unsold in the warehouses. Some of the merchants complain greatly of obstructions to trade interposed by the Government. Of course the limit of consumption of foreign goods is soon found among a people who have scarcely acquired a taste for or want of them, and whose capabilities of buying may be supposed to be limited. In his recent journey through the interior, from Nagasaki, Mr. Alcock saw clear indications of abundance in the yield of the soil, but the general aspect of the endless succession of villages and towns was that of poverty; there were masses of population with nothing evidently beyond the barest necessities of animal life, implying that little superfluity is produced, or it is absorbed by the Daimios, who are said to be proprietors of nine-tenths of the soil. Few signs, however, of absolute destitution met the eye. But not everything was allowed to meet the eye. At one large town, Uieno, he was to sleep, but his escort stopped him a league off, pretending that the only houses of reception were under repair, and on passing through the town next morning he found it hermetically sealed up. The main street through which his road lay was free, but all the streets opening into it were fenced across and curtained off, so as to prevent his seeing or being seen, and not a living soul was allowed to appear. It is supposed to have been a token of deep displeasure at his intrusion.

INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA COMPANY.—An addition of £167,000 is about to be proposed to the capital of the Indus Steam Flotilla Company, but it will not be offered to the public. The object is to give effect to an arrangement entered into with the Secretary of State for India for the transfer to the Indus Steam Flotilla of selected steamers and barges belonging to Government now on the Indus, the price of which the Secretary of State has agreed to take in shares or stock of the Indus Steam Flotilla. A reference has been made to India as to the transfer by the Government to this company of workshops and other appliances at Kotree and elsewhere.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for 40,000,000 rupees (£400,000) in Bills of Exchange on India were opened on Feb. 28, in presence of two members of the Council of India and the Deputy-governor of the Bank of England. The official minimum declared was for bills on Calcutta, 1s. 11½d., and on Madras and Bombay 2s., being the same as that declared on the 1st of February. The whole amount has been taken. All tenders above the minimum are accepted in full. The rates of allotment at the minimum will be, to tenders on Calcutta about 50 per cent., on Bombay about 4½ per cent., and on Madras in full.

LETTERS FOR PASSENGERS.—On Saturday, the 5th of April, and thenceforward, letters for passengers on board the Mediterranean packets about to sail from Southampton with the mails for India—provided they be addressed to the care of the officer in charge of the mails on board of such packets, and registered—may be posted up to the same time as registered letters for India. The letters should be addressed thus: "Mr. —, on board the Mail Packet '—,' at Southampton. Care of the officer in charge of the mails."

THE ARMY AMALGAMATION IN INDIA.—A parliamentary paper just printed contains copies of all questions put to the Government of India by officers of the three armies of that continent, asking for explanations of clauses of the Amalgamation General Order of the Governor-general, dated April 10, 1862; the replies of his Excellency to each question, and the remarks of the Secretary of State for India upon those replies.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's screw steamer Ellora, Capt. N. Roskell, was despatched from Southampton on the 27th of February, with the Mediterranean and Bombay mails. She took out 846 boxes of specie and jewellery, value £295,408, viz.—For Malta—sovereigns, £1,800. For Alexandria—sovereigns, £62,000; watches, &c., £65. For Bombay—bar silver, £220,447; bar gold, £750; sovereigns, £10,000; watches and jewellery, £346. The shipments of specie by the Ceylon steamer amounted to £94,028; of this £76,507 was silver, and £17,521 gold. The remittances to India were £54,521; to China, £34,907; to Ceylon, £3,000; and to Alexandria, £1,800, the whole being on merchant account.

ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—At the Ethnological Society on Wednesday evening last, Mr. J. Crawford, president, in the chair, an interesting account was given by Mr. George W. Earl of the shell-mounds in the Malay peninsula. Mr. Earl, having occasion to visit Wellesley province to examine the watercourse between the Leber Ikan Mati lagoons and the Mudah river, came upon a dome-shaped mound, composed of cockle-shells, eighteen feet high, and nearly 200 paces in circumference, undoubtedly formed by human agency. The surrounding country presents a nearly uninterrupted level all round, except to the north-west, where, about a mile off, were a cluster of other mounds, which are largely dug by the Chinese settlers for lime-burning. The shells adhere together in lumps by the crystallisation of carbonate of lime, showing thus their great antiquity. The Chinese had made an excavation directly into the centre of one mound, the walls of which formed a kind of crater twenty five feet high. Reckoning fifty cubic feet to the ton, about 2,000 tons had been thus removed from one mound alone. In the debris at the base Mr. Earl found a human pelvis, which, with other human remains and implements of red rock found by the Chinese diggers, have been forwarded to England in the ship Ceylon from Penang, so that British physiologists will soon have the opportunity of studying these ancient remains. The contents of some of these refuse mounds are estimated at 20,000 tons. Such enormous accumulations lead to the inference that they were raised by a numerous people, among whom shellfish were the principal article of food. The present inhabitants of the country are Malays, Samsams, and the Semangs, a diminutive negro race, now consisting only of scattered tribes, but formerly much more numerous and widely distributed. To these latter Mr. Earl attributes the formation of the mounds.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—Sir Henry Bartle Edward Frere, K.C.B., has been appointed Governor of Bombay, in succession to Sir George Russell Clerk, K.C.B., who has been compelled to resign that high office from ill health. Sir Henry Frere is the fifth son of the late Mr. Edward Frere, of Llanelly, Brecknockshire, by Mary Anne, daughter of Mr. James Greene, of Turton Tower and Clayton Hall, Lancashire, and was born on the 29th of March, 1815. His maternal grandfather was the representative of Sir Francis Bland, of Kippax; and of the benevolent Humphrey Chetham, founder of Chetham's Hospital, Manchester; and he is nephew of the celebrated statesman, diplomatist, and wit, the Right Hon. John Hookham Frere, a colleague of Mr. Canning's in the Eton microcosm, and the intimate friend of that minister; as also of the late Rev. Temple Frere, canon of Westminster, and for many years chaplain to the House of Commons. Sir Henry Bartle Frere was educated at King Edward's School, Bath, and at Haileybury College, and entered the Hon. East India Company's civil service in 1833. After a long and useful career he became chief commissioner in Oude and Scinde, and member of the Council of the Governor-general of India. Sir Henry Frere married October 10, 1844, Catherine, daughter of Sir George Arthur, Bart.

THE ARMY.—There has been issued a return to the House of Commons of the number of effectives (including officers and staff) who were on the British Establishment of the army on the 1st of each month, from April 1 to Nov. 1, 1861; and a similar return relating to the Indian Establishment. RED SEA TELEGRAPH.—A telegram is stated to have been received from the Red Sea Telegraph Cable Repairing Expedition to the effect that the cable between Suez and Jubal Island (200 miles) has been successfully repaired, and that it was connected with the island on the 20th ultimo. A station will be opened there at once, and the company have arranged with the Post-office for the Peninsular and Oriental Company's vessels to call there for messages. The land line between Alexandria and Suez, which was carried away by the floods in October, has been reinstated, and is now working, so that messages may be sent direct to Jubal, instead of stopping at Alexandria.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Homes News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 28, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE gather from the Calcutta papers received by the Mail of the 8th February that the disturbances on the north-eastern frontier of Bengal are of a more serious nature than was at first supposed. Not only was Sylhet for a time in imminent danger, but Darjeeling also was threatened. Measures, however, seem to have been promptly taken to secure the safety of both places, and by the latest accounts there was nothing to fear. Reinforcements have been rapidly forwarded to both points threatened by the barbarians, and a stockade was gallantly carried at Jallong by a detachment of Europeans and Sepoys under Colonel Richardson. A telegram received by the Bengal Government from Sylhet on the 5th February reports the restoration of tranquillity in that district, but considerable agitation still prevailed in Assam. Darjeeling has also been strengthened by a detachment of H.M.'s 38th, and a wing of the 10th N.I. The Bhootahs have for some time past exhibited symptoms of restlessness, and a disposition to make inroads into the British territory, but have hitherto tempered their thirst for plunder by a certain degree of discretion. At last, however, fear has given way to rapacity, and it has become necessary to teach them the impolicy of coveting their neighbours' goods, if at least they wish to preserve their own. There can be no doubt that a very insufficient force has been maintained on the north-eastern borders of Bengal, and that the prospect of impunity has led to the recent aggressive forays. But this state of things cannot be permitted to continue now that so many Europeans are settled in Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar.

The Bengal Legislative Council, presided over by the Lieut.-governor, held its first meeting on the 1st of February, in the Chamber of the old Council, but nothing occurred worthy of notice.

A further portion of the East India Railway was to be opened on the 10th, by which steam communication would be established between Calcutta and Monghyr. If the bridge over the Soane be completed in June, according to the assurances of the engineers, the line from the Presidency to Benares will be completed in October.

A telegram from Suez brings the grateful intelligence that the financial equilibrium has been recovered, and that, consequently, the Licence-tax would not be imposed. The cash balances at the close of the last year exceeded seventeen millions sterling.

Lord Canning's last appearance probably took place on the 22nd of last month, on which day, in his capacity of Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, he was to confer a certain number of degrees.

The news from China is extremely unsatisfactory, inasmuch as it holds out the prospect of a collision between the Allies and the Taipings. The latter having approached the city of Shanghai have been warned that it is under the protection of the former, and that any attack upon it will be repelled by force. It was, of course, impossible to allow that important emporium of foreign commerce to fall into the hands of those brutal marauders, but it is not the less to be regretted that there should be any necessity for European intervention in the internal affairs of the Chinese Empire. Nor is this regret diminished by the fact of the French co-operation.

BENGAL.

THE DEATH OF A FRONTIER OFFICER.

On the 24th of August, 1861, the telegraph flashed this message from Peshawur to Lahore:—"Poor Henderson died yesterday—Shortt has gone off to Kohat." Poor Henderson! close up the ranks! another brave soldier fallen at his post on that frontier which Nicholson only quitted to die in the breach of Delhi, and which Mackeson guarded till the steel of an assassin pierced his lion heart.

Let us hear out this story, in the manly and touching words which were written at the time.

From Capt. Henderson, C.B., Deputy-commissioner of Kohat, to Major H. James, C.B., Commissioner of Peshawur, August 17, 1861.

SIR,—In continuation of my letter of the 14th instant, I have the honour to report that yesterday morning the treasury and English department of my office was closed, pending my convalescence.

2. I had hoped this might have been unnecessary, but the civil surgeon having enjoined the entire stopping of all work and movement, and my confinement to my house and bed, I have been compelled to close office for the present. It is much to be regretted from the inconvenience this necessary suspension of work gives rise to.

3. Any emergent business I will endeavour to attend to when able partially or wholly to resume duty.

Six days more—work—pluck to the last; and then a brief note from Colonel Wilde, C.B. commanding at Kohat, tells that he died that morning, and next day from the same officer comes this letter to the Commissioner of Peshawur—one soldier recounting the dying words of another.

"SIR,—I have the honour to report the death, yesterday at ten o'clock A.M., of Captain Henderson, C.B., Deputy-commissioner of the Kohat district.

2. "Captain Henderson requested me to bring to your notice the opinions he had formed of the integrity and character of the following chiefs—and on his death-bed urged me to solicit you to express to them the assurance that their good conduct had not been forgotten by him, and that he had taken measures to convey to you the high estimation in which he held them.

3. "Captain Henderson said that he had the most perfect confidence in the word of Shazada Mahomud Jumboor, extra assistant commissioner—that he always found his advice was for the interests of Government—and that, without exception, he was the best man in the district; honest, trustworthy, and gentlemanly in his bearing—deserving of the protection of the British Government.

4. "He also spoke in high terms of Khwajuh Mahomud Khan Bahadoor the Khuttuk chief; and left a valuable horse as a legacy to his son. He said that this Khan was the best and kindest master the people of his jagheer could have; that he was an attached and faithful follower of the Government, and that no political disturbances would ever change his fidelity.

5. "He further recommended the conduct of Mozuffur Khan of Hungoo and of Mahomud Ameer Khan, but not in a way that renders any recognition desirable.

6. "In conclusion, I would wish to place on record, as a proof of the estimation in which the late Captain Henderson was held, that not a man of any importance in the district failed to attend at his funeral, and that hundreds of all classes accompanied the procession to the grave.—I have," &c.

A true tribute to their worth, and to his. A life finished on the field of success—a great work done—a death over which shine lustreously the love and sorrow of comrades—and a tomb far off—but a very present monument to lead on to noble emulation. And not unmourned by the Government he served. Warmly the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab has recorded his deep regret and his acknowledgments of that care for the public service and that thoughtful interest for the people who aided him.

A soldier and a civilian, his high courage and excellent judgment especially qualified him for his difficult post. "The Government is fortunate" (writes Sir Robert Montgomery) "in having on the frontier officers so devoted to its interests and so capable of attaching its wildest subjects." Nor were the objects of his last earthly care forgotten. Handsome gifts were presented to them in the name of the Governor-general of India, "as a mark of the value attached to the recommendation and favourable opinion of an officer of Captain Henderson's character."

Close up the ranks! Forward! Thank God there are still left us men to fill these blanks along the border; soldiers to fight and to establish peace; ready to force the strong hills of robber tribes, and ready to draw to them the bold hearts of the races who dwell within that long arid strip across the Indus—the outpost line of the Indian empire.—Correspondent of the Friend of India.

INDIAN CHAPLAINS.

The besom of change, and we trust of reform, which has been sweeping so ruthlessly over the civil, military, and medical services of India, is not likely to leave the ecclesiastical establishment unaffected. Conservative from the nature of their office as well as by instinct, the chaplains will probably survive any change that may be impending, and continue to present to the outward eye only their old appearance. They are not military men, but so far as they have been connected with military funds that connection will cease. The only other change which has as yet been resolved on is in the mode of appointment to Indian chaplaincies. Previous to 1858 chaplains were nominated by the individual members of the Court of Directors in rotation, and appointed by the Court. On its abolition as a governing power, and up to the present day, the ecclesiastical patronage has rested with the Secretary of State for India. On his will the choice altogether depends. He may give a nomination to either of the Universities, to any corporate body, or to individual friends or applicants, as he pleases. Occasionally the Indian Bishops have recommended clergymen already in India, and there are at least two chaplains in Bengal who gained their appointments by distinguished services during the mutiny. In the olden days the well-known evangelical tendencies of Bishop Wilson indirectly influenced the ecclesiastical appointments of the court and the willingness of clergymen to accept nominations. A very high churchman would not care to labour in a diocese where elaborate altar cloths, candles, and genuflexions were deservedly scouted, and condemned as not unlike the ceremonial observances of the heathen. But there was and is no legal restriction on the Secretary of State's appointments, except one which has become a farce. No chaplain can be sent to India who has not been approved of by the Bishop of London or Archbishop of Canterbury. But this approval is asked after nomination. Henceforth, we believe, the present Secretary for India has expressed it as his intention to hold out Indian appointments as rewards to colonial chaplains. As anything would be better than the past system of nominating chaplains, we expect the colonies to send us an improved class of men. Ecclesiastical pay there is so miserable, and the romance attached to Indian work and allowances still so lingers in many quarters to the obscuring of the cost of living, risks of climate, and expense and hardship of family separations, that the best colonial men will probably be appointed. If this is the case, their extensive experience of English work, their habits of personal activity and mental energy, and their, perhaps, broader views of life and society, ought to make them an acquisition to the civil residents of our stations, and lead them to work with self denying energy among our large English army. But, in point of fact, as the majority will commence their Indian career as middle-aged men, we do not see how an assistant chaplaincy on Rs. 500 a month, with a small pension after sixteen years' service, can be looked on as a reward.

The time is most favourable for considering the propriety of a far more radical change in the ecclesiastical establishment than this. We do not refer to its expense. It is one of the many proofs of the very materialistic character of the spirit that now pervades India, or rather it is another sign of the total absence of the non-utilitarian element which ought to exist side by side with that spirit, that the question of a reduction in the cost, if not the total abolition of the State endowment of chaplains, should be raised, and for the moment meet with favour from thoughtless writers. Were India a colony, or even England itself, we could understand the wisdom of such a cry, and might consider the propriety of maintaining an endowed Church questionable. But in India what is the state of the case? The Government is a patriarchal despotism. The spiritual wants of an army of eighty thousand men have to be provided for. The civil population is floating, the residents of a station changing, root and branch, every seven years. The temptations to immorality caused by the climate, surrounding idolatrous practices, a frequent state of celibacy, and the absence or weakness of public opinion, are overpowering. The Government, moreover, has ever been notorious, not only for disconnecting itself from Christianity, but for its timid fear of seeming to have any religion at all, and its consequent support of idolatry and Mahomedanism. And out of its whole revenue of upwards of forty-one millions sterling, the State spends not one on purely non-material objects. The struggle of Claudius Buchanan, the Grants and the noble Clapham sect, to secure an ecclesiastical establishment for India, was most intense. And what has been the result of the presence of chaplains on the country? Let it be said that they have been inefficient, worldly, unclerical, still their very presence has, with that of missionaries and English ladies, gone far to make Anglo-Indian society differ, as it does at this day, from the moral filth in which it wallowed half a century ago. The question may be raised whether the present chaplains might not, as a body, be more zealous, or whether the Presbyterian, Dissenting and Roman Catholic soldiers should not have their spiritual wants better attended to. But the good done, directly and indirectly, by the ecclesiastical establishment of India, would be cheaply purchased at twice its cost.

The radical change on which we would insist is one which would reconcile the enemies of State endowments and the friends of the English soldier, would economise the money now spent on the Church of England in India, and enable Government to do its duty at once to its own servants, to the English society which lives under its protection and in whose high character it is now more than ever interested, and to its neglected soldiers. It is this: convert the chaplains into military officers, attaching one, or, if necessary, more, to every regiment, so that the same clergyman shall remain with the same corps throughout its Indian service, in the barracks, on the march, and on the battle-field, till its return to an English port. Leave all not so employed at the largest civil stations. For the stations which might thus be deprived of a chaplain's services, call in the aid of the Additional Clergy Society, as the railway companies are now doing, the residents providing a parsonage and part of the salary, while Government guarantees the rest. The most bigoted "Voluntary" or Dissenter could not object to the State providing its soldiers with chaplains, if Churchmen, Presbyterians, and Dissenters, wherever they exceeded a hundred each, were cared for. Nor, when he considers the peculiar circumstances of Indian stations, outposts of Christendom in the midst of heathenism, could he object to the aid granted to purely civil stations. We are aware that Archdeacon Pratt, ten years ago, advocated a plan of this kind, and regret that the difficulties started by interested parties checked his action. We know that the plan has been tried and abandoned in England, for reasons not applicable to India. There the horrors of exile and the temptations of our hot climate are unknown, and as ministers are to be found in every town and village, it is cheaper to engage their services for the troops. But in India there are no such conveniences. Half our military stations are separate from the civil, and in the civil stations the chaplain has enough to do with his own work. This plan would be less expensive than that which prevails. And on the march, in the battlefield, when regiments leave one station for another, the good seed so patiently sown is choked, the new habits formed with such difficulty are thrown off, because the sheep are without the shepherd. We have seen the bitter evils of the want of military chaplains in every regiment, within the last two years, in the one station of Barrackpore, and in the case of H.M.'s 67th and 6th who have successively left the place. Every station has a similar tale to tell.

We attach no importance to the objection that a chaplain once posted to a regiment degenerates into a mere military officer. We could cite more than one name of a clergyman who, in the campaigns of only the last fourteen years, has reformed regiments. It would be the bishop's duty to select men specially suited for the work.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DISORGANISATION OF THE ASSAM FRONTIER.—Information is reaching us from all quarters of the alarming state of disorganisation into which the hill districts of Assam are rapidly falling. Each succeeding post brings us details of the progress of disorder in and about Cherra Poonjee, and the hills in the neighbourhood. Yesterday came to hand further news of the disaffection of the Cossyah and the Synthea hill tribes. A detachment of fifty men of her Majesty's East India regiment had been detached to aid in repelling an expected attack of the hill tribes either on Sylhet itself or in its immediate vicinity. The cause of disquiet and disaffection on the part of these tribes cannot with certainty be said, but there can be little doubt that it has arisen out of their dislike to taxation in any form, from the injudicious manner in which it has been introduced, and to the prohibition placed on the cultivation of opium, which has caused not only a considerable rise in the price of that drug, but no little difficulty is experienced in obtaining it at all. In the assembly at Phoolgoree, in the end of October last, of a large concourse of Abors and other people of both hill and plain, to discuss the acts of Government which impose taxation and put a stop to the cultivation and manufacture of opium, we saw the first step towards the present utter disorganization of these districts. The murder of Lieutenant Singer and the successful evasion of the penalty of their crime by those who participated in it, proclaimed at once the weakness of the Government. Of this they have not been slow to avail themselves, and from all quarters we hear of risings and intended risings of the wild occupants of the inhospitable hills and forests which abound in our eastern frontier districts. The officers in the interior find themselves surrounded by hostile peoples, and powerless, not only to coerce submission, but even for self preservation. Major Rowlatt at Shillong, with a guard of but thirteen men, finds himself hemmed in on all sides, and when our correspondent wrote, Colonel Richardson had just started from Cherra with thirty men of the 44th regiment to form a junction with him; but subsequent to his departure news reached the station that a large body of Jynteah and Cossiah tribes were lying in ambush at the road by which he was proceeding. Advice was immediately despatched to Sylhet, from whence Lieutenant Udney, with 180 men of the same corps, was at once despatched to Colonel Richardson's and Major Rowlatt's assistance. Up to the time of the posting of our letters no news of either party had reached Sylhet or Cherra Poonjee. At Sylhet all was alarm, Captain Phillips, with a few men of the East Indian regiment, forming the entire force at the station. Should the troops under Colonel Richardson have fallen into the ambush laid for them, there could be little, if any, hope of Major Rowlatt's either maintaining his position or being able successfully to withdraw from it. And if Lieutenant Udney meets with any reverse, Sylhet, it is felt, will be at once laid open to attack and pillage by the tribes who have for some time past given vent to expressions of determination to lay it under contribution. As we have foreseen from the first, the want of firmness displayed by the chief authority in Assam, in not taking active and decided measures for suppressing with a firm hand the first symptoms of disaffection, is now bearing its fruit. And unless the management of affairs be placed in the hands of some firm, energetic military man, long used to dealing with semi-wild tribes, such as the Abors, Nagas, and Cossiahs of Assam, we much fear that valuable lives will yet be sacrificed, and a state of anarchy and rebellion inaugurated which will cost men, money, and time to successfully suppress.—Englishman.

THE CHERRA POONJEE RAJAH.—According to the Englishman, "Ram Singh, Rajah of Cherra Poonjee, may be looked upon as the prime instigator of the movement in Assam. In 1857 this petty chieftain collected a large force of Kossiahs, Nagahs, and other tribes, who were subsequently joined by several mutineers of the native infantry regiments, with a view to assuming the sovereignty of the country. But prompt action on the part of the authorities at that time in power in Assam nipped in the bud the undeveloped intentions of the Cherra Rajah; and he was, at the time, glad to disband his following and promise for the future to discontinue the collection of any bodies of armed people. Of late, however, he has displayed symptoms of a desire again to try conclusions with the British authorities, and in October last had collected some four hundred armed men, part of whom were mutineers of the late Bengal army, and the rest the ill-disposed of the various wild tribes abounding in Assam. In that month he made a display of his force, detaching the same under command of his cousins Bin Singh and Ram Manick, to Byrond Poonjee, which they plundered, wounding three of the villagers, whom they took with them, bound, to Cherra village. Having committed this outrage, it appears that he waited to see what steps the authorities would take; and, pending their action, he located his forces at Bhologunge bazaar. Finding, however, that no notice was taken of this breach of the peace, he strengthened his party with the addition of some Munneeporees and laltials obtained from the zemindars in the plains, and the whole force, accompanied by his cousins Hajjim Manick and Ram Manick, and his nephew Sing Manick Rajah, again proceeded in the direction of Byrond Poonjee by the public road, passing through the British village Moosmai, and setting at defiance the small military guard at Mahadeo. On this occasion the force for three days encamped in the orange groves, the property of British subjects, where, not satisfied with plundering the trees of their fruit, they did very considerable damage to the entire property. Again the Cherra Rajah withdrew his people and awaited results; but finding, as before, that no notice was taken of his depredations, he set to work to organise expeditions for plundering on a large scale. The hill people, seeing with what impunity this petty chief has defied the British Government, not unnaturally look upon him as a rising man, and accept him at his own valuation, and readily listen to, and rely on, his assertions of his independence, and place confidence in his ability to maintain the position he has assumed. The present state of affairs in Cherra Poonjee, the Kossyah and Jynteah Hills, is, doubtless, owing to the absence of Major Rowlatt, the deputy commissioner of Cherra, who has been unavoidably detained for some three months past at Shillong, a place in the hills, which it is intended to erect into a station. It is unfortunate that no other officer should have been available for the duty of laying out this station and the road to it, for there can be no doubt but that, had Major Rowlatt been at Cherra, the disgraceful outrages committed on Byrond Poonjee could never have been perpetrated; nor would the impunity with which they have been enacted have afforded an incentive to the general rising of the hill tribes that is now taking place. The first step necessary to be taken is to punish with the utmost severity, even to deprivation of power and position, the prime mover of this disrespect to authority. This done, and efficient measures taken to put down the tribes now in arms and to read them a lesson not readily forgotten, we may hope for some degree of freedom from disturbances in the future."

DARJEELING IN DANGER.—Our disputes with the Bhootanese are getting more and more complicated, and appear likely, before long, to necessitate a similar expedition against them to that which was sent against Sikkim in the commencement of last year. For several years past they have constantly been committing depredations upon our territory, carrying off cattle, elephants, and even men, women, and children, into the interior; while to all the demands for restitution or reparation which have been addressed to the Deb Rajah or his subordinates, answers have been returned of a nature so evasive as to clearly prove, if not their complicity with the criminals, at least the absence of all intention on their part to endeavour to arrest and deliver them up to us, or to restore the stolen property. As early as 1857 it was determined to annex a portion of their territory lying to the west of the Teesta, known as the Fallacotta Mehal, in the hope of frightening them into compliance with our demands; but the mutiny for a time prevented the plan being put into execution. In 1860, however, the matter was again brought forward, and the annexation of the Mehal effected. The Fallacotta estate was given to the Bhootanese in 1774, after the expiration of the war which arose from their invasion of the territory of the Cooch Behar Rajah two years previously, and was confirmed to them in 1779, and remained in their possession till 1842. The Izaralar who farmed it at that time also held lands within our possessions, and he was in the habit of making predatory excursions into Bhootan, which the Bhootanese had to follow him back into our provinces to avenge. This state of affairs gave rise to constant disturbances; to put a stop to which, in 1842, our Government took the management of the Fallacotta estate into its own hands—guaranteeing, however, the payment to the Deb Rajah of whatever rent it yielded. Matters continued thus until, for the reasons we have stated, it was absorbed in the British territory in 1860. This measure, together with a full explanation of the causes which led to it, was announced to the Deb Rajah; but, though he was allowed to infer that, in the event of our demands being complied with, and our future relations with his Government placed on a satisfactory footing, it was not impossible that the revenue of the Mehal might be restored to him, he has, as yet, shown no symptoms of yielding. On the contrary, the latest intelligence we have received is to the effect that the Bhootanese are showing a disposition to collect the rent from the Izaralar by force, and the deputy magistrate of Titalyah has deemed it necessary to place guards at intervals along the banks of the Teesta to give notice of the approach of any armed force. The depredations of the Bhootanese have lately been so serious that the question of invading their territory, and enforcing the surrender of criminals and stolen property, as was done in the case of Sikkim, has been for some time under the consideration of the viceroy, with the alternative, however, of sending an embassy to the Deb Rajah's Court, similar to that under Captain Pemberton, the object of which was to obtain reparation for the outrages committed by the Bhootanese in Assam. Captain Pemberton's mission failed, and it is very unlikely that a similar course in the present instance would have any better result, unless the envoy were backed, as Mr. Eden was, by a considerable force. The Deb Rajah would, probably, pay no more attention to the remonstrances of an envoy than he has done to those of the Governor-general's agent on the N. E. frontier. . . . Since writing the above, we (Englishman) learn that Government is at length convinced that affairs in Bhootan are assuming a somewhat threatening complexion, and that it is, to say the least of it, impolitic to leave Darjeeling in the unprotected state described by our correspondents. To guard against possible eventualities, a wing (four hundred strong) of the 10th regiment N. I., and one hundred and fifty men of H.M.'s 39th, have been ordered to proceed from Dinapore to Darjeeling with all possible despatch. We further learn that the command of the force is to be vested in Lieutenant Colonel J. D. Macpherson, c.b., of the 10th regiment N.I.

COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—The thorough amalgamators at home, says the Englishman, are now approaching a very serious obstacle to their proceedings, but one from the removal of which they will not recoil, as they are determined that it, as well as every other prominent and distinguishing military institution of the Company's Government, shall be either swept away or remodelled into Royal shape. The Commissariat Department in India is destined, at no distant period, to undergo the latter process; and measures will soon be taken to commence its assimilation to the Royal Commissariat system by the introduction of officers and employes not belonging, as those now in it do, to the Indian armies. As far back as the commencement of the last China war, two years ago, evident symptoms of this coming change manifested themselves, in the return from Hong Kong of the Indian Commissariat officers who were sent by this Government in commissariat charge of the native portion of the expeditionary force, but were remanded to this country by peremptory orders from home. The Home Government was much encouraged in its determination to effect the change in the Commissariat Department of India to which we refer, by the fact that, after the remand of the Bengal commissariat officers, and their return to India, the commissariat arrangements and supplies for the native portion of the army were excellent and ample, although carried out by the Royal Commissariat Department; but, in congratulating themselves on this result of their proceedings, they willfully ignored the fact that all those arrangements and supplies were made and collected here by the Bengal commissariat officers, and that nothing but their distribution remained to be looked after by the Royal commissariat officers. We would remind the home amalgamators of these facts, and may add that, had the said arrangements and supplies been left, from the commencement, to Royal commissariat officers, the native portion of the China expeditionary force could never have taken the field, or, having gone on the campaign, would have starved and become disorganised. We do not say that the changes intended to be made in the Indian Commissariat Department cannot be carried out, and the whole institution be Royalised after the English model; but we do say that the process ought to be effected very gradually and cautiously indeed; and we would warn this Government against being persuaded that, in the instance of the China expeditionary force above referred to, any proof whatever was given of the possibility of suddenly carrying out the changes contemplated by the home authorities, without serious inconvenience, and the probability of loss and disaster. Gradually the civil element of metamorphosis may be introduced into the Indian Commissariat department, and the Royalised machine may work well in India; but there are many considerations which should warn the Government against carrying out a sweeping change through the agency of men who, though they may be excellent administrators and accountants, are utterly ignorant of India, and of everything in it. The change, to be safe, should commence from the bottom, by the entrance into the department of junior clerks; and not from the head; as is intended in some quarters.

INDIGO MACHINE.—Amongst the specifications of inventions lately filed, there is one which promises to be eminently useful to indigo planters. Mr. Edwin Gwyther, of the Minerva Foundry of Kidderpoor, has patented a machine for beating the liquid in indigo vats. The principle is the paddle, placed on a shaft running the whole length of the vats, which, worked by a double eccentric, gives a reciprocating motion to the paddles. The latter can be placed at any angle or at any depth, or the paddles of one vat can be stopped whilst others are working. The power required to work it is not great; and where coolies are found scarce, or difficult to retain at their work, this machine will be invaluable, as it will render the factories independent of two-thirds of the unsatisfactory labourers they are now obliged to employ and conciliate.

THE MAHARAJAH OF COOCH BEHAR intends shortly to visit Calcutta for the purpose of bidding adieu to the departing, and welcome the coming Viceroy. The Maharajah will be accompanied by a numerous following, comprising a goodly number of cavalry and elephants. The government will be administered during his absence by the two dowager Maharanees who acted as regents during his minority. A few months ago his Highness gained golden opinions from Government by arresting and delivering up to the Rajshahye authorities a person suspected to be a brother of the Nana Sahib; but circumstances have come to light which render it extremely likely that the surrender of this individual was merely intended as a blind, and that the Maharajah is harbouring far more important personages in his dominions than this man is likely to prove to be. Considerable difficulty appears to be found in tracing his identity, but the opinion in high quarters is that, if not a brother of the Nana, he is, at any rate, a person of consequence among the rebels.

SUTLEJ AND PUTTIALA CANAL.—It has been for some time in contemplation to construct a canal for traffic and irrigation purposes from the Sutlej river to Puttiala; and frequent and lengthy communications have taken place between the Government and the Maharajah on the subject. Satisfactory arrangements have at length been made, and the Maharajah has consented to pay a moiety of the expense. Orders have been issued to commence upon the work without delay. To this end we hear from the Punjab that Sir Robert Montgomery has directed Captain Crofton to execute a survey of the territories through which it will be most advantageous that the canal should run. This done, and the general levels taken, the work will be at once proceeded with. It is to be hoped that in this instance more attention will be paid to taking the levels, and in allowing for the silting up of the bed, and unavoidable accumulation of deposit than was the case in making the surveys for the Great Ganges canal; the absence of proper precautions in the first instance entailing, as they do, continual outlay to an extent which with but ordinary care might have been avoided.

COLONEL E. MARRIOTT.—The Governor-general appears determined that no one who was in any way concerned in the purchase of Government promissory notes at Lucknow shall escape him, if by any possibility he can lay his hand upon him. We hear that Colonel E. Marriott, of the late 57th N.I., has now fallen under his Lordship's displeasure, in consequence of his having been in some way connected with the transactions which took place at Lucknow, and which led to Major Carnegie's dismissal from Civil employ. A representation has been made to the Commander-in-Chief with a view to Colonel Marriott's being brought to trial before a court-martial, but his Excellency has decided that however improper or unseemly it may have been in a British officer to engage in, or allow himself to be mixed up in any way with transactions of the character in question, there would appear to be no grounds on which Colonel Marriott could be successfully prosecuted before a court-martial.

RELIGIOUS REFORMERS.—The Indian Mirror, describing the thirty-second anniversary of the Bramo Somaj, says Baboo Debender Nath Tagore's address was succeeded by "a chorus consisting of some four Brahmos, who sung some beautiful hymns, while one of them played on the harmonium." The writer speaks of "hundreds" as present. They retired to dinner. "So large a number of Brahmins and Sudras sitting promiscuously to dine was rather a new sight in Bengal, and it cannot but excite feelings of pleasure and admiration in the mind of every patriot and well-wisher of India." In the morning "a similar meeting, though on a smaller scale, was held in the female apartments of the Baboo, where the female members of his family were present. A lady of the Sen family, of Colootah, was present on the occasion, and dined with the ladies of the Tagore family, in spite of the opposition she had to meet from her male and female relatives. This, though a very insignificant movement, is yet an innovation in advance of the time, when we consider the position (in regard to caste) of both the Tagore and Sen families."

COTTON CULTIVATION.—The Nawab of Malir Koteloh and the Rajah Nubba have followed the example set them by the Rajah of Rewah, and have circulated among their people a notice pointing out the opportunity that now offers for the profitable extension of cotton cultivation, and urging upon the agricultural population within their respective territories the advantages to be derived from a more careful cultivation, and greater attention being paid to the picking and cleaning of the staple.

LOYALTY IN BOGRAH.—A meeting was held in the Bograh Public Library on the 1st February, under the auspices of Mr. T. P. Larkins, the magistrate; Baboo Ram Tarruck Roy, the Sudder Ameen of the station, presiding. It was unanimously resolved that mourning suited to native customs be observed throughout Bograh, and that addresses of condolence in English and Sanscrit be drawn up for presentation to her Majesty. Mr. Larkins was requested to forward the addresses. The meeting was well attended by both Europeans and natives, and a feeling of profound, respectful sympathy was manifested by all.

H. M.'S 75TH REGIMENT.—The ship Malabar has been taken up by the Government for the conveyance to England of the head-quarters and about four hundred men of H. M.'s 75th Regiment, and was to leave on the 20th February. The British ships Dartmouth and Salamanca have also been taken up for the same purpose.

COLONEL H. F. DUNSFORD, c.b., of the 32nd N. I., has been appointed by the Government to proceed immediately to Assam, in command of a detachment of his regiment from Barrackpore; and in the event of military operations against the turbulent tribes on the frontier being necessary, this officer will assume command of all the troops destined to act, and will conduct the hostilities.

THE CALCUTTA PUBLIC LIBRARY during 1861 circulated 10,562 volumes of general literature, 11,279 of periodicals, and 20,209 of novels. The volumes added during the year were 567 in number. There are 311 subscribers.

LANDHOLDERS' ASSOCIATION.—Mr. A. Walker has been elected Chairman, and Mr. D. C. Mackey, Deputy Chairman of the Landholders' Association.

LIEUT. COL. A. P. PHAYRE, the first Chief Commissioner of United British Burmah, took his departure from Calcutta on the 3rd February, in the steamer Burmah, for Rangoon, under a salute from the ramparts of Fort William. Immediately after his arrival in Rangoon the Chief Commissioner will commence the organisation of the new system of government and administration for the provinces committed to his able control.

THE SOUTH-EASTERN FRONTIER.—We are glad to hear that reassuring accounts have come in from the south-eastern frontier. Colonel Richardson, with his little force of a hundred men, made his way successfully to Jowai, which is fifty miles distant from Cherra, and, in the first instance, released the Jemadar's party of sixty men, whom he found stockaded and growing short of provisions, and then started for Jalloung, about two hours' march from Jowai, where the insurgent Jynteahs had made their stand. They had entrenched themselves in two positions—one at the summit of a hill about a thousand feet high, and the other midway up the ascent. The attack of the first stockade was stoutly contested, considering that but very few of the Jynteahs are in possession of muskets. The assailing party were but sixty-five strong, but they made up in pluck for scantiness of numbers, and scattering over the hill, halted in front of the gate of the stockade, took a short breath, and dashed at it. The Jynteahs resisted till a few Sepoys got inside, when they bolted into the jungle, abandoning the upper stockade without a struggle. Half-a-dozen of the Sepoys and a few coolies were hit by musket balls, but many were wounded by stones. The garrison of the stockade consisted of the most turbulent villagers in the district, who have thus received a lesson which we trust will be of service to themselves and their harassed neighbours in the plains. Lieutenant Udney had joined Colonel Richardson with a reinforcement of a hundred men, and as the Eurasian regiment have reached Sylhet from Dacca, all fears of damage to property in that quarter may be thoroughly quieted.—Hurkara, Feb. 8.

THE CIVIL SERVICE, agreeing to the compromise mentioned in our last, are unanimous. The Calcutta meeting of the 30th March adopted the memorial prepared by the committee. The Madras memorial, which in most respects it resembles, has already been sent in, and its prayer will be adopted, we believe, by the Bombay Service. But the minor presidencies are not so enthusiastic as to ask for a pension of £1,250, the only effect of which must be to stop promotion, while it induces the bad bargains of the State to cling to their salary to the last. Really good men will always remain in India beyond the minimum term of years, interested in their duties, and attracted by the hope of higher appointments and a greater reputation.

HUNTER MEMORIAL CHURCH.—The Friend of India has received an account of the laying of the foundation stone of the Hunter Memorial Church, Sealkote, on the 14th of December last. Almost all the residents in the station were there. In the absence of Mr. Prinsep, the Commissioner, the stone was laid by the Rev. W. Ferguson. He sketched the history of the mission of the Church of Scotland at Sealkote. Many years ago a Christian gentleman, whose name he could not give, had placed at the disposal of the Foreign Mission Committee a small sum of money to assist in opening a mission in the Punjab. The first missionary was the Rev. Thomas Hunter, who, with his wife and children, was cruelly murdered by the rebels in 1857. There are now two missionaries at work. Since the mutinies also the Sealkote Scottish Orphanage was founded for the orphan daughters of rebels. A similar institution for boys also has been begun. The church is to be a pretty Gothic edifice, having, in addition to the nave and transept, a tower containing a belfry placed at the north-east angle.

THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL arrived in Delhi on the 21st of January. The deputy-commissioner went out to meet her. The procession that came into the city consisted of first a Sowar on a camel, then a party of irregular Sowars, then an open carriage containing the Begum and the officers sent to meet her, then some more irregular cavalry, carriages, horses and footmen. Next day the brigade was paraded in her honour. The Begum rose up in her howdah, and thus addressed the brigadier:—"I have not words to express my admiration of what I have this morning witnessed, and I have been highly delighted with the attention shown to me. Praise, such as the troops deserve, I am unable to give; but a glance at the history of the past will show that the greatest warriors of India bore no comparison to the British soldier."

BURMAN MELA.—The Deputy Commissioner of Narsingpore reports to the Commissioner of the Jubbulpore division on the annual fair lately held at Burman, on the Nerbudda river. On the 12th of November the people commenced to arrive, and on the 18th the fair was at its height. There were at least two thousand shops of all kinds on the left bank of the river, occupying a space of nearly two miles. The traders, besides those of the district, came chiefly from Saugor, Jubbulpore, Hoshungabad, Bhopal, and even a few from Mirzapore. The business done was chiefly in cloths, of which about two-thirds were English fabrics. A great deal of business, too, was done in hoodies, or bills of exchange. The conduct of the people was most peaceful and orderly throughout.

SUICIDE OF A CONVICT.—William Lawson, the convict in the Calcutta gaol whose sentence to death was commuted to transportation for life, much against his will, has committed suicide by taking a large dose of opium, which he managed to conceal in the collar of his coat. He was formerly employed in the Patna opium godowns. The evidence at the coroner's inquest revealed a degree of carelessness in the discipline of the gaol and dieting of the European convicts, for which the legislature seems to be to blame more than the jailer. The latter is supplied with no rules, and is under no orders on the subject of dieting. The convicts are daily supplied with money, and purchase their food from the native menials. The Bengal Council is about to apply a remedy.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The most successful public society in India is the Agricultural, founded by Dr. Carey. It consists of 814 members. The society, during the past year, has complied with upwards of 120 applications for American and Egyptian cotton seed. Each applicant will communicate the results of the experiment, so that a large body of information on the culture of exotic cotton in Bengal will be available.

OUR COASTING STEAM NAVIGATION.—The Burmah Steam Navigation Company, which, we believe, is of Glasgow origin, has risen equal to the growing necessities of our coasting trade. Of its broad scheme for lines of steamers radiating from Calcutta along the coast of Southern Asia, from Singapore on the east to Kurrachee and the head of the Persian Gulf on the west, including Ceylon and every port whose trade demands steam communication, the first part, which refers to British Burmah, has been sanctioned by the Supreme Government. The company have arranged to run their steamers twice a month to Chittagong, Akyab, Kyauk Phyo (as required), Rangoon and Moulmein; also, once a month direct to Rangoon, thence to Tavoy, Mergui, Penang, Malacca, and Singapore, and once a month from Rangoon to Port Blair in connection with the direct steamer from Calcutta to Rangoon. These arrangements give three communications each month with Rangoon and Moulmein.—Friend of India.

ORIENTAL TRANSLATION FUND.—We are glad to see a proposal to revive the Oriental Translation Fund, which was established in 1828 by several Oriental scholars and others interested in Eastern literature "for the translation and publication of such works on Eastern history, science, and belles lettres as are inaccessible to the European public in MS. form and indigenous language." The committee have done wisely in reducing the amount of subscription from ten and five to five and three guineas for large and small paper copies of their publications, but the rate is still too high. The number of volumes already published is seventy, but many are now out of print.

THE BENGAL ASIATIC SOCIETY seems to be reviving. It now numbers 281 members, of whom 55 are in England. In 1859 there were only 180 members. The members who visited the museum—and, unlike Madras, they are bona fide—were, native males, 82,524, and females, 4,495; European males, 2,941, and females, 1,603; or an average of 251 per day. The society have asked

Sir C. Wood to continue the publication of the catalogues of the zoological collections in the late India-house Museum, and have again memorialised him to re-consider his refusal of a pension to the distinguished naturalist and curator of the society's museum, Mr. Blyth. Mr. A. Grote has been re-elected president. Colonel Thuillier, Baboo Rajendra Lal Mitra, and Dr. Oldham are vice-presidents. The society have received an additional grant of Rs. 200 per month for the museum.

CASTE PIETY.—The first case under the somewhat doubtful chapter of the Penal Code, "of Offences Relating to Religion," will come before the next Calcutta Sessions. Kasee and Buldeo, two natives, have been committed in the Calcutta Police Court, for insulting the mourners who were conveying the body of an old female of the Jeweller caste to the burning ghat, by uttering obscene language, indulging in obscene gestures, and abusing the idol Parisnath, the tutelary idol of the caste.

CAPTAIN E. DAVIDSON, officiating controller and examiner of public works accounts, has been appointed one of the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta, in succession to Lieut.-col. Thuillier, who resigned his seat at the board on the 31st of December last.

CALCUTTA TRADES ASSOCIATION.—At the annual meeting of the Calcutta Trades' Association, the master, F. Jennings, was unanimously re-elected. J. W. Browne, Esq., was elected senior warden, and J. B. Knight, Esq., junior warden. C. Lazarus, Esq., was re-elected treasurer.

(Signed) W. G. McIVOR,

Supt. Gov. Cinchona Plantations.

C. lancifolia above is commonly called C. condamina, and is the source of the pale bark (Cinchona pallida) of the London College. The success of the Dutch experiments in Java warrant the most sanguine hope of the naturalisation of these important trees in India, and, as our Neilgherry contemporary observes, of quinine soon becoming as common in India as fever. In June, 1857, the number of living Cinchona trees in Java amounted to about 300; at present they exceed 100,000, of which 98,688 have been reared from seeds produced in Java by the plants originally brought to that country. Not only have, then, the original cuttings grown up into trees and blossomed, but developed sound seed. This is a most important success. But a further result has been obtained. Although the original plants are still young, Cinchona alkaloids have been obtained from them and in quantity, state Messrs. Jungbuhn and De Verij, "beyond the most ardent expectations." The Dutch Government, we are happy to learn, has been most unreserved, and liberal in all its dealings with the Indian authorities in connection with the important experiments both are so zealously prosecuting.

COMMUNICATION BETWEEN CEYLON AND INDIA.

—The Madras Times says that Mr. Folkard, C.E., of Jaffna, recently communicated with the agent of the Great Southern of India Railway with reference to the practicability of running a small steamer between Point Peder, the extreme northern point of Ceylon, and Negapatam, a scheme on which he had been consulted by several opulent merchants and planters of Jaffna. He was of opinion that a small screw steamer of thirty tons and twelve-horse power could make the trip within the day, and it was the general opinion of the parties interested that there was sufficient traffic to ensure a good return upon a moderate outlay. A steamer of the above size can be built in Colombo and placed on the line for £1,200, and it was proposed to form a company subscribing £2,000 in shares of £50 to carry out the project; the projectors wished to ascertain whether the railway company would, in consideration of the advantage likely to be derived from the Ceylon traffic being placed in direct communication with an important station of the railway line, aid in the undertaking by taking half the number of shares required, supposing the remaining half were guaranteed by respectable firms and others in Ceylon. The agent considered that the establishment of such a means of communication would be a great advantage to the public as well as to the railway company, and strongly recommended that the sanction of Government should be obtained to the proposal. In handing up the papers to Government, the consulting engineer observed that the steam communication proposed would no doubt be attended with advantage to the public, especially to the planters of Ceylon, who are interested in drawing labour from this country. He did not think, however, that the scheme would be of much benefit to the railway company. The information at present is very general, but in the event of satisfactory data being given as to cost of working and possible returns, Col. Johnston thought the railway company would in all probability be induced to aid in the undertaking; but the question whether the agent should enter into any negotiation in carrying it out, was one which Government might probably desire him to refer to the railway board. In the conveyance of the mails, the proposed communication would be of advantage to the Governments of Madras and Ceylon. In reply, Government ordered that the agent should be instructed to refer the question to the Board of Directors of the Great Southern of India Railway.

TEAK.—Sir Charles Wood has sent out an order to the Indian Government, directing the establishment of two timber agencies for the British Government; one at Rangoon and one at Moulmein, for the primary purchase of the teak wood produced in the Eastern forests, and which is all brought to those ports or markets. Our Government is instructed to appoint two officers, civil or military, as superintendents of the Government depots of purchase and store at the above ports, with suitable establishments; and the order will be immediately carried out. Whilst wishing that England should, especially in the matters connected with war and defence, always command the market in which the produce of her own territories is sold, we much doubt if that end, in the matter now in question, will be attained by Government interference, to the exclusion of private enterprise and competition.

MADRAS MILITARY ORPHAN ASYLUM.—The Madras Observer states that the removal of the Madras Military Male Orphan Asylum has been negatived, and that the original proposal of the Ootacamund committee has been adopted. The Lawrence Asylum is to be limited to the moderate scheme that was originally contemplated, and to be located at Stonehouse, where buildings are to be erected both for the male and female branches. The former is to consist of two hundred boys, the latter of one hundred girls.

A SCANDALOUS EXHIBITION.—The disgraceful sight has been witnessed in the streets of Madras of two European females, respectably dressed, with tambourines in their hands and an organ-grinder at their heels. The Athenaeum most properly condemns the spectacle on the score of cruelty to the poor girls; and on the ground that such displays are inexpedient, as calculated to lower the European in the eyes of the natives. If the police cannot interfere, public opinion should hoot the scoundrel who exhibits the girls out of the town.

HYDERABAD.—After the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company had commenced their labours at Sunkasalah they ascertained that, as the River Toongabundra was as much the property of the Nizam as of the British Government, it was necessary they should not only obtain the sanction of his Highness's Government to their proceedings, but likewise get a grant from him of the land on the banks of the river on the Hyderabad shore sufficient for the required purposes. At the same time, it became apparent that grants of land would be requisite in the Capaul and Pangtur divisions of the Raichore Doab, to permit of the formation at Wullabapore of the desired reservoir, and of the ancient extending from Pangtur to Kur-nool. On a representation being made to the Nizam of the requirements of the company, and of the purposes to which it was intended to devote the land sought for, his Highness at once made a free gift of the lands to the company, and he further desired that no time should be lost in putting the representatives of the company in possession of them, that they might commence work without any unnecessary delay. Balcondah, a large and important town on the Hyderabad and Nagpore road, and situated to the south of Nirmul, has suffered severely from cholera for some time past—so severely, indeed, that a general exodus was about to take place, when it suddenly disappeared. The people remained, but they have now been attacked with jungle fever of an exceedingly virulent type. The survey party which had lately encamped on the plains just south of Balcondah have suffered much, and have lost several of their number. Their strength is said to have been so materially crippled as to render an augmentation of the party necessary before any further operations can be instituted.—Englishman.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Feb. 1.—The past fortnight has been somewhat eventful, both as regards China and Japan. In China matters are threatening to assume a very serious aspect, although it is to be hoped our fears may not be realised. By the last mail from the north we learn that grave doubts are entertained as to the safety of Shanghai. The Taiping rebels, encouraged, it would seem, by the capture of Ningpo and the fall of Hangchow, are now moving in the direction of Shanghai; they have driven back the feeble force of Imperial soldiers that was sent from the latter city to check their advance, and preparations are going on for the defence both of Shanghai proper and the important settlement adjacent to it held by foreigners. It is now officially published that we have "taken possession of Shanghai," so that the rebels, to whom this has been made known, will understand that, in attacking Shanghai, they make war against the allies. We quote what we believe to be a perfectly reliable piece of information in the following paragraph from the Shanghai Daily Shipping and Commercial News of 23rd January:—

"A proclamation in Chinese was posted over the city and settlement yesterday by the consuls of England and France, in reply to a message received by them from two rebel chiefs, named Liou and Ho, who intimated their intention of attacking Shanghai. The purport of the above-mentioned proclamation is to inform the said rebel chiefs, or other parties whom it may concern, that the city and settlement, with their suburbs, including Woosung, are at present in the possession of the Allied troops, and any persons attacking the same will do so at their peril. We are glad to see such decisive action on the parts of the representatives of our armed treaty Powers, and we have no doubt but that the rebel spies who infest our streets will have conveyed the intelligence to the enemy's camp before this. Should the insurgents dare to advance in the face of this, we hope our gallant troops will give them a warm reception."

This intelligence quite consists with the opinion we advanced a fortnight ago, that the rebel leaders at Nanking had been warned against attacking Shanghai. The anticipated act of war has not yet been committed, and if the rebels are wise, it never will be. The following extracts from the North China Herald indicate what movements are being made by them in the vicinity of Shanghai:—"In a communication from our shipping reporter at Woosung he verifies his statement as to the atrocities committed by the Taiping rebels, by referring to the party he accompanied. He adds that 'Another band of rebels appeared on the opposite side of Woosung yesterday morning. They are, however, a little more merciful than the others, and appear not to be molesting the country people to any great extent, beyond making them give up anything of value in their possession; but such is the panic produced by these people, that women and children rush to the water and prefer being drowned rather than fall into their hands. Directly the Custom-house people, with the Shanghai Times reporter and myself, saw the rebels, we took our boats as near to them as possible to try and save some of the wretched inhabitants who had escaped into the water and were drowning. Had we been a little sooner we might perhaps have saved several; but, as it is, we could only pick up a woman and her child alive.' Later news was to the following effect: "The rebels were yesterday reported as occupying Ko-ka Hong, a large township of about ten thousand inhabitants, situated about two miles inland from the battery on the south side of the river, between this and Woosung. Heavy firing was heard in that direction last night between ten and eleven p.m. The rebels are also said to have returned to the town of Koon Wan between this and Woosung."

The mail a fortnight hence will probably contain more certain intelligence as to the danger that threatens foreign interests at present.

The intelligence from Japan refers to the opening of Yeddo to foreign trade, which, according to treaty, should have taken place on the 1st ult.

Mr. Winchester, who was to go as consul to Hakodadi, has been ordered to Nagasaki pro tempore; he will be useful there.

From Pekin we have had no news during the past two weeks.

Matters at Ningpo are much as when we last wrote; foreigners are doing a slightly disreputable trade in fire arms, &c.

From the other ports there is no news of importance.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Feb. 17.—All over Ceylon we have experienced a fortnight of the most extraordinary weather for February. Usually one of our driest months, the first half of it in 1862 has been distinguished by copious rains, fogs, and even thunder and lightning. The rain has been general all over the coffee districts, and so violent on some of the higher ranges of hills as to lead to some anxiety about the early blossoms. We trust, however, that the result will be altogether good, and that the crop of 1862-63 will be really the bumper one anticipated. The planters will need it all, to make up for the deficiency in the crop now going forward. Some of our friends incline to the belief that the total export will not exceed 400,000 cwts. of both kinds. Our own inclination is to hope that the round 500,000—or within one-fifth of the average—will be made up; for, although crops have been two-thirds less than the estimate on many estates, we yet hear of very good out turns in some of the higher and wetter districts, especially where a good proportion of young coffee has come in to swell the total. Time will show.

Since the recent change in the French Navigation laws there seems no further temptation to take our coffee direct to France, and all but an insignificant proportion finds its way to London. Four ships have sailed during the fortnight, all for London. They took away 31,759 cwts. of coffee, in the proportion of 24,753 plantation to 7,006 native. This brings our total export since 1st October, 1861, up to 248,097 cwts., of which 183,616 were plantation and 63,081 native.

The Chamber of Commerce return being made up only to the 12th, does not include the cargo of the Finella. This vessel cleared on the 14th with coffee as follows:—Plantation, 7,248 cwt. native, 1,974 cwt.: total, 9,222 cwt. Of the whole quantity, only 6,000 were diverted from Britain to Australian ports and Mauritius. Not a cwt. has gone direct to a foreign port; and the tricolour flag, lately so familiar to us, is no longer seen in our roadstead. Our shipments are now 40,000 cwts. in advance of those for the same period in last season, and 20,000 in excess of the previous seasons. Plantation is strikingly in advance, being 185,000 against 159,000, 146,000, and 125,000. Native, too, is in advance of last season, but of last season only, the figures being 63,000 against 48,000, 74,000, and 97,000. The exports of cinnamon are fully up to the average, but the falling off in cocoanut oil remains most marked. Our shipments to date are less than half what they were at the corresponding period of last season. The figures are 37,000 cwts. against 76,000 cwts., 42,000, and 30,000. It really seems as if an increasing local demand for the products of the cocoanut tree were likely very seriously to affect the export of oil. The prospects of those who own cocoanut plantations commencing to yield seem so much the better. Nothing could be more favourable to a large yield of nuts than the late rains, and we expect that next year will be as favourable to cocoanut planters as to those engaged in the culture of coffee.—Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS.—The Straits Government Gazette of the 17th January announces that under instructions from the supreme Government, the Honourable the Governor has appointed the Honourable Lieutenant-Colonel R. Macpherson, Resident Councillor, Singapore, to be ex officio Secretary to the Government of the Straits Settlement, and Lieutenant M. Protheroe, Secretary and A.D.C. to the Governor, to be ex officio Deputy Secretary to the Government of the Straits Settlement.

SINGAPORE.—The revenue of Singapore for the official year 1860-61 amounted to Rs. 965,687, showing an increase over that of the previous year of Rs. 101,028. This revenue was derived from the following sources:—Land, Rs. 86,808; Excise, Rs. 746,591; Judicial, Rs. 21,010; General, Rs. 111,278. Total, Rs. 965,687. The expenditure during 1860-61 amounted to Rs. 633,178, being formed of:—Local charges, Rs. 576,847; Straits charges, Rs. 56,331. Total, Rs. 633,178. This does not include military, convict and miscellaneous charges, amounting for the whole Straits Settlement to Rs. 1,103,941. Amongst the local charges is a sum of nearly Rs. 300,000 for the purchase of land on which barracks have been built for European troops. From the returns of the trade of Singapore for the official year 1860-61, we find that the imports in the year ending 30th April, 1861, amounted to Rs. 58,126,880, showing an increase over those of the previous year of Rs. 1,012,995, but then the imports in 1859-60, were less than in 1858-59 by Rs. 9,580,703. The Exports in 1860-61 amounted to Rs. 41,878,748, showing a decrease compared with 1859-60 to the extent of Rs. 5,320,391.

CAMBODIA.—Disturbances in Cambodia have again broken out, worse than formerly. The Siamese Government intends to send a large naval and military expedition to Kampot, from whence it will act against the insurgents. The whole will be under the command of the first King's second son, Prince Krom Mun Visunarth Nibhadhorn.

DEATH OF THE SULTAN OF JOHORE.—His Highness Daing Ibrahim Sri Maharajah, Tomungong and Sovereign of Johore, expired at his residence, at Telloh Blangah, on the evening of the 31st of January, in the fifty-second year of his age. Daing Ibrahim displayed great prudence in his rule, and for the aid rendered by him in putting down piracy, which was then so very prevalent in the neighbourhood of Singapore, the late General Butterworth, on the 1st September, 1846, presented him with a Sword of State, in name of the Indian Government. The ceremony took place at Government House, in presence of a number of Malay chiefs, and made a great impression on the natives. The funeral of the deceased took place at Telloh Blangah, on the afternoon of the 1st Feb., on which occasion, in accordance with Malayan custom, Ungku Abubakar was proclaimed as his father's successor at the moment of lifting the coffin to convey it to the grave.—Singapore Free Press.

HORTICULTURE IN JAVA.—The facility with which foliage can be produced in a warm atmosphere, provided a supply of moisture be at command, is almost incredible. It is no exaggeration to affirm that there are parts of India where, at the commencement of the rainy season, if you cut a staff from the nearest tree, and, after your walk is over, stick it in the ground before you enter your bungalow, and leave it there, it will bud like Aaron's rod, and be provided with roots below and leaves above before six months are over. The facility with which the soil in these climates may be protected by aboriculture, and thus rendered fit for the germination and growth of economic seeds and crops which would otherwise be killed by the destructive impact of the sunbeam, is curiously shown by the cultivation of the Javanese. Say that it is some sort of bean or lentil which they wish to grow (for the highly nutritious value of this class of seeds is fully appreciated in the East),—they proceed to collect a supply of green sticks, as we should pea-sticks, though they from theirs lop off the branches. But instead of waiting till the crop has grown, and stands in need of support to carry it up, as we do with peas, they plant the sticks first, and in such good time before they sow their seeds, that by the moment the latter appear above ground the sticks have already struck root, and are covered with foliage. Thus do they protect the tender seedlings from the burning sun. But this is not all. While the seedlings are gaining strength and becoming fit to tolerate sunbeams, the cultivator puts silkworms upon the overhanging foliage; and these worms, merely in the enjoyment of their lives, gradually fold up the leafy curtains which shade the crop below, in their little but manifold stomachs, and convert the vegetable tissue into a crop of silk. The field or garden thus yields a crop of legumes and of silk at the same time! It is true that in order to obtain this double crop the sticks used for shade cannot be of any kind, but of such only as silkworms will thrive upon. Nor will the mulberry do, as might on first thoughts be supposed. In tropical climates cuttings of this tree form too many twigs and too few leaves to be useful either for shade or for silk. But the coral tree of India (Erythrina Indica) is excellently suited for taking the place of the mulberry for both purposes; and it has this advantage also, that its bark is so thick set with very sharp hooked spines that no vermin can climb it,

Amalgamation.—Questions, Answers, and Remarks thereon.

Fort William, Jan. 20.—No. 65.—In continuation of G.G.O., No. 827 of Sept. 17, 1861, the following paragraph of a military letter from the right hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 319, dated Aug. 10 last, is published for general information:—

Para. 33. "You have decided in paras. 76 and 77 of the G.O. that the rule respecting the limitation of tenure of certain staff appointments to five years shall have prospective effect for future incumbents of these appointments; and you have permitted all officers now holding such appointments to keep them for two years longer, irrespective of the periods that they severally have served. Should any officer have served up to the present time less than five years, you allow him to complete a full period of seven years. To these applications of the rule I have no objection."

No. 125.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 1,120 of the 6th December, 1861, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following observations by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India on answers given by the Government of India to questions connected with the late changes in the Indian army, and published in Government general orders Nos. 801 and 833 of the 16th and 17th September, 1861:—

Question 96. An officer is at home on two years' furlough in 1856, and ordered out in consequence of the mutiny in 1857, having ten months of his leave unexpired; can he, if he joins the staff corps, take this balance of furlough without losing his appointment?

Answer 96. Yes, he would be allowed the balance of his furlough, retaining his appointment.

Remarks 96. Approved; but add the words "to the staff corps."

Q. 97. An officer proceeds on 15 months' leave, retaining his appointment; he obtains 12 months' additional leave, and thereby forfeits his appointment. Is his absence of 15 months to be reckoned as staff service?

A. 97. Yes.

R. 97. See Despatch to India, No. 315 of Aug. 9, published in G.O. No. 824 of 1861.

Q. 99. Can an officer having entered the staff corps retire from the service and claim the extra £50 as pension offered in G.G.O., dated March 8 last, No. 79, provided he applies to retire before Oct. 1 next?

A. 99. Yes; but, as shown in the Despatch, No. 302, dated Aug. 2, 1861, published in G.O. No. 784, of Sept. 5, 1861, it is not the intention of her Majesty's Government that officers should enter the staff corps for the purpose of immediately retiring.

R. 99. See remark on question and answer No. 49, published in G.G.O. No. 960 of 1861.

Q. 102. Whether a lieutenant in a British regiment of foot, of eight years' service, who was appointed officiating assistant commissioner, Tenasserim and Martaban, on the 20th October, 1860, and confirmed in the appointment of second class extra assistant commissioner, Tenasserim province, in June, 1861, is eligible for the staff corps in India, and whether the service above-mentioned will count as service on the staff?

A. 102. This officer is eligible, at the discretion of Government, to join the staff corps on probation under paragraph 75 of the G.O. Having been confirmed in permanent employ, his previous temporary employment will count as staff service. See questions and answers 26 and 40. But as this officer held only temporary employment on the 18th of February last, he cannot be admitted into the staff corps previously to the 22nd Oct., 1861; after that date his claims will be considered.

R. 102. An officer entering the staff corps subsequent to the 22nd Oct., 1861, has not the privilege of counting previous staff service towards promotion.

REDUCTION OF THE NATIVE INFANTRY.

Jan. 28.—No. 10.—With reference to G.O. No. 43, of Jan. 24, the C. in C. directs that the reduction of the native infantry branch of the army be carried out in the following manner:—

1. Medical invaliding committees composed, if practicable, of one field officer and two medical officers of experience, will be immediately convened by officers commanding divisions at all stations of the army, for the examination of all native ranks (including non-combatants who are eligible for the pension establishment) of all regiments of native infantry, who are not in every respect fit for active service in the field. The proceedings of these committees are to be forwarded to army head quarters in due course; and pending their transmission, a nominal roll, showing rank, name, regimental number, date of enlistment and age when enlisted, of such of the men pronounced unfit by committees, as may have completed the prescribed service for pension, is to be at once forwarded to the adjutant general of the army, in order to their being transferred to the pension list. Men (combatants) of thirty-nine and fourteen years' full service, declared unfit by medical committees, will be pensioned; the former on the superior pension, the latter at the ordinary rate.

2. Such men as have not completed the prescribed service for pension, and may not be perfectly fit for active service, or who may be of bad character, are to be paid up and discharged at once by the local authorities; gratuity and travelling batta to those of the combatant ranks being issued at the rates below authorised.

3. All men (combatants) in the eight regiments to be reduced, of and under three years' service, who have no special claims for good service in the field, are to be at once paid up and discharged by the local authorities with the gratuity and travelling batta below authorised.

4. Rolls of men considered to have special claims, to be retained in the army on account of their services in the field, or other causes, will be forwarded to army head quarters for the final orders of the C. in C. Trans-mitting officers will be very careful that these rolls contain the necessary details and dates of the good services constituting claims to special consideration.

5. The gratuities referred to in the preceding paragraphs will be allowed to men of the combatant ranks according to the following scale:—

Men of under 3 years' service, 3 months nett pay of rank.

Men from 3 to 6 years' service, 6 months' nett pay of rank.

Men from 6 to 8 years' service, 9 months' nett pay of rank.

Men above 8 years' service, 12 months' nett pay of rank.

Service under age is not to be taken into account in calculating the gratuity.

In addition to the above, the travelling batta on discharge, authorised by paragraph 17, page 186 of the pay and audit regulations will be issued to the discharged combatant ranks.

6. All puckulies, 2nd tndals, regimental lascars, artificers, toties, choudries, and peons of the 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, 51st, and 52nd regts. N.I., who have not served the prescribed period, or are ineligible for pension, are to be at once discharged by commanding officers with gratuities as follows:—

For 1 year's service and under, 1 month's pay of grade.

For 2 years' service and less than 3, 2 months' pay of grade.

For 3 years' service and over, 3 months' pay of grade.

7. Discharge certificates are to be issued without reference to army head quarters to all men discharged under this order.

8. Officers commanding divisions will immediately communicate with each other and with the civil authorities as may be necessary regarding men absent on leave from regiments under their command, in order to such men being at once called in to the nearest military station and dealt with under the provisions of this order. Officers commanding regiments to which the men belong, will be held responsible that every information necessary to settle all claims be at once fully and clearly afforded to the authorities, who will have to dispose of these men.

9. The C. in C. expects that the instructions contained in this order will receive the strictest attention from all officers concerned, and that the measures ordered will be carried into effect as speedily as possible throughout the army.

10. As the arrangements are carried out in each regiment, officers comg. divisions will transmit by telegraph and post to the adjt. gen. of the army a numerical return exhibiting in detail the strength of all ranks remaining. Orders will then be issued for the completion of the native establishments by effective transfers from the regts. to be reduced. It is expected that the required return will in every case be transmitted within ten days from the date of receipt of this order at each station.

11. The provisions of this order are not to affect men present with regts. serving in Burmah and the Straits Settlements until their return to the Coast.

12. Supernumeraries remaining after regts. shall have been completed by transfers from the reduced regts. will be absorbed by casualties in ordinary course; but to prevent stagnation in promotion, one step will be given for every two vacancies in each of the grades of naigue, havildar, jemadar, and subadar until the supernumeraries shall be absorbed. On supernumeraries being absorbed, regts. are to be recruited to the authorised establishment.

13. Recruit and pension boys of the regts. to be reduced may take their discharge if they wish to do so, but without gratuity; those who may remain will be transferred to other regts. Boys in excess of the establishment of regts. will be borne as supernumeraries until vacancies occur for their reception on the fixed establishment, one being absorbed for every two vacancies.

14. The officers of the 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, 51st, and 52nd regts. of native infantry will rank in the corps with which they may be appd. to do duty according to the dates of their regtl. commissions, and will be entitled to the advantages of that rank in the com. of companies, &c., &c.

15. The European non-commissioned staff officers will be disposed of hereafter; in the meantime they will remain at their stations under the orders of their present commanding officers.

16. The position in their new regts. of the native ranks who may be transferred fr. the reduced regts. of N.I., is to be strictly regulated by their respective standings and services. Nominal rolls, registers, &c., of men transferred will be furnished by the officers commanding the corps ordered to be reduced to the regts. to which the men may be removed.

17. The regimental records of the reduced regts. are to be made over to the local ordnance department for transmission to the adjt. gen.'s office for deposit.

18. The colours are to be delivered into the local arsenals.

BRITISH BURMAH.

Foreign Depart., Fort William, Jan. 31.—General.

No. 212.—RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council has long felt the necessity for establishing, in the Burmese Provinces of British India, a central administration, vested with ample power, subject to the general authority of the Government of India, to direct the affairs of those provinces on a generally uniform system; to control the public expenditure in all departments; to exercise a close and watchful supervision over the proceedings of the local officers of every class, and to devise such measures as may be best calculated to promote the material welfare and moral advancement of the people.

Hitherto these provinces have been administered separately by three commissioners independent of each other, and subject to no local head. Two of them (Pegu and Tenasserim) are now in direct subordination to the Government of India, while the third (Arracan) formed, till recently, a portion of the Lieutenant governorship of Bengal.

They are all non-regulation provinces. Their revenue system is in principle essentially the same. It is founded on the system which prevailed under the Burmese Government, and the modifications adopted in each province, from time to time since it came under British rule, are due less to any variety in the conditions of the three provinces than to the differing views of the authorities by whom they have been successively administered, subject to no general and comprehensive review by one common authority. Almost the whole population, except at the principal seaport towns, either are Burmese, or belong to some other branch of the Indo-Chinese family, having no affinity with the inhabitants of Bengal. They have many characteristics in common, are accustomed to intercourse with each other, and together form a group of races sufficiently homogeneous to mark the propriety of combining them under one rule.

The principal seaports are already connected by an established periodical steam communication. All parts of the coast, from one to another, are easily accessible in decked vessels at all seasons of the year, and in open boats and canoes during a great part of it. Akyab, Prome, and Rangoon are joined by the electric telegraph wire, which will shortly be extended to Moulmein, and although the roads from one province to another, especially that between Arracan and Pegu, are at present difficult and tedious, yet communication by land is at all times practicable, and may be improved at a moderate cost. From all other parts of the British Indian empire these provinces are, from their geographical position, quite distinct, and, practically, can only be approached by sea, the attempt to connect Akyab with Chittagong by a road having been made, and after great expense abandoned.

The authority vested in the commissioners of the three provinces has been too limited to enable them to deal freely with any measure of importance, and indeed with many details, without reference to the Govt. either of India or of Bengal; and the control exercised by those Govts. over such distant possessions has been at times neither prompt nor effective; while projected measures of improvement have been sometimes delayed or rejected, and sometimes too hastily adopted, for want of the intervention of a local officer of high position and authority capable of weighing conflicting statements and opinions, and of presenting such measures, after full discussion with the local officers in each province, in a form in which their merits might be thoroughly comprehended and a confident opinion formed on them by the Govt. From the same cause many such measures, though adopted and found successful in one province, have not been extended to the others.

Some months ago Lieut. col. Bruce and Mr. Temple, who were deputed to inquire into the condition of Pegu and the adjoining provinces, and, in consultation with the commissioners, to devise the means of introducing a better and more economical system of administration, submitted their views on the subject in the reports which are now before the Governor general in Council. Their chief recommendations were that a chief commissioner should be set over the three provinces, aided by a secretary and a suitable establishment; that there should be three commissioners as at present—one in Pegu, another in the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, and a third in Arracan; that a judicial commissioner (a barrister) should be appointed not only to hear appeals from the divisional commissioners and to superintend the judicial administration of justice, but to preside as judge in local civil courts at the sea-port towns for the trial of commercial and other cases in which Europeans are concerned, and that the salaries of the deputy and assistant commissioners should be re-arranged, so as to provide more effectually for the promotion of those classes of officers, and to assimilate their position to that of officers of the same class in other parts of India.

With these recommendations were joined others for the re-organisation of the police, the appointment of an inspector of jails, and the reduction of civil, military, and marine establishments. These are subjects for separate consideration, and some of them have been already disposed of. The savings effected in marine and civil establishments alone amount to more than seven lakhs of rupees a-year, and the reduction in military charges is much greater.

The Governor general in Council, on a full consideration of the reports submitted by Lieut. col. Bruce and Mr. Temple, and of the correspondence which has passed with the Secretary of State for India, and with the local authorities regarding the establishment, at Moulmein and Rangoon, of courts for the better trial of suits in which the mercantile community are interested, and having in view the formation of a system of administration best adapted to the circumstances and wants of her Majesty's possessions in Burmah, is pleased to resolve as follows:—

That the three provinces now known as the Arracan division, the province of Pegu, and the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, shall be united under one chief civil officer to be styled the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah. This officer, whose headquarters will be ordinarily at Rangoon, will exercise powers similar to those now vested in the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and will be in charge, as the agent of the Governor general, of the foreign relations of the British Government with the Court of Ava and other neighbouring States on the eastern frontier. He will also exercise the powers of Judicial Commissioner for the general superintendence of the administration of justice and for hearing appeals from the divisional commissioners. His salary will be Rs. 50,000 a-year, including all travelling expenses; and he will have a secretary on a salary of Rs. 9,600 a-year, with an allowance for travelling expenses, i.e., Rs. 5 a-day when absent on duty from the headquarters of the Chief Commissioner of Rangoon. If absent at sea with the Chief Commissioner on duty, the secretary will submit a Contingent Bill for actual expenses, and will draw no fixed travelling allowances while on board-ship; and with an establishment not exceeding in respect to cost, that now entertained for the Commissioner of Pegu. The Chief Commissioner will submit an early report on the strength and expense of the establishment actually required.

That the province of British Burmah shall comprise three divisions, each under a separate Commissioner, to be styled the Pegu, Tenasserim, and Arracan divisions. The limits of these divisions will at first correspond with those of the existing Commissionerships, but may be altered hereafter. Each Commissioner will receive a salary of Rs. 30,000 a-year, including all travelling expenses. The establishments of the Commissioners, of the Moulmein and Akyab divisions will be the same as those now attached to the Commissioners of the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, and of Arracan respectively. The Commissioner of Pegu will be authorised to entertain an office establishment at a cost not exceeding Rs. 1,000 a month, the exact strength and cost thereof to be fixed by the Chief Commissioner, subject to the sanction of the Government of India.

That, in place of the present deputy and assistant Commissioners, there shall be appointed for the whole province of British Burmah:—

|--|------------|
| 2 Deputy Commissioners of the 1st Class, at 1,500 ...  | Rs. 36,000 |
| 3 Ditto, ditto, ditto, 2nd Class, at 1,200 ...         | 43,200     |
| 5 Ditto, ditto, ditto, 3rd Class, at 1,000 ...         | 60,000     |
| 5 Ditto, ditto, ditto, 4th Class, at 800 ...           | 48,000     |
| 5 Assistant Commissioners of the 1st Class, at 700 ... | 42,000     |
| 3 Ditto, ditto, ditto, 2nd Class, at 600 ...           | 21,600     |
| 6 Ditto, ditto, ditto, 3rd Class, at 500 ...           | 36,000     |
| Costing altogether Rs. 2,86,800 a-year.                |            |

That, instead of a judicial Commissioner for the whole province, as proposed in the reports, whose ordinary business can well be undertaken by the Chief Commissioner, and who, as judge of a special court, sitting at the head-quarters of each division, could not possibly dispose of the causes arising at each place in a manner that would satisfy the suitors or be consistent with the prompt and regular administration of justice, there shall be established at Rangoon and Moulmein a court, to be presided over by a barrister or advocate of not less than five years' standing, with full powers of civil and criminal jurisdiction, analogous to those now exercised by the Records of Prince of Wales' Island, and Singapore, with the exception of the power to try cases in which European British subjects are charged with capital offence. This part of the scheme must be delayed until a law can be passed to constitute these courts; and in the meanwhile the additional dep. Comrs. employed at Rangoon for the disp. of civil and judicial business will be retained.

With the abovenamed exception, the new system will take effect from the date on which this resolution is published at Rangoon.

THE DISTURBANCES IN SYLHET.

Landholders' and Commercial Association,
Calcutta, Feb. 1, 1862.
To C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

SIR,—The committee of the association regret to learn, from reliable sources, and from information furnished from their own members, that serious fears are entertained at Sylhet of an attack on that station by the Hill Tribes, which may lead to disastrous consequences, especially to the few Europeans settled in that district.

The committee are also informed that a similar uneasy feeling exists in Cachar, and that since Munneepore has been left without a resident agent of the Governor-general, that frontier has been in a disturbed state, and that other hill tribes are evincing signs of being ready to take advantage of any commotions that may arise in these localities.

* N.B.—This includes the town magistrates of Rangoon, Moulmein, and Akyab, who will be maintained on their present rate of pay—i. e., Rs. 600 per mensem.

The committee cannot help feeling apprehension that the Ferazees, who are so numerous in the Eastern districts of Bengal, may avail of this state of things to join those who have succeeded in refusing payment of rents—the leading or favourite doctrine of that sect; and though the committee do not doubt his Honour the Lieut. gov. is taking such steps as he may deem necessary to put down the present disturbances, it would be satisfactory to the committee to learn that a sufficient military force had been despatched to quell any general outbreak, which they cannot but consider imminent if such precautionary measures are not adopted.

The object of the committee in addressing you is to obtain such information as will put a stop to the various rumours now current on the subject.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) W. F. FERGUSON, Secretary.

From the Secretary to the Government of Bengal to W. F. Ferguson, Esq., Secretary Landholders' and Commercial Association.

Dated Fort William, Feb. 3, 1862.

SIR,—I am directed by the Lieut. gov. to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 1st instant, and, in reply, to inform you that on receipt of the first intimation of disturbance on the Sylhet borders a party of the Eurasian regiment was sent up to Sylhet from Dacca by steam, and that the Lieut. gov. put himself into communication with the Govt. of India, military department, in consequence of which a wing of a regiment, as he is reliably informed, will leave the presidency for Sylhet to-day.

The Lieutenant governor has been in correspondence with the Government of India for a considerable time past regarding the requirements of Assam, Sylhet, Cachar, and Eastern Bengal generally, in respect of troops, and he will immediately communicate to the association any decision on the subject of which he may be informed.

The information received up to this time by Govt. is, that some Cossyahs have risen in arms, and have interrupted communication between Sylhet and Cherra, threatening the plains, into which, however, it does not appear that they have made any incursion by the last accounts. A telegram from Dacca just received, with the last report from Sylhet, is to the effect that Col. Richardson, who commands the Cherra, is said to have destroyed a stockade at a place called Goolong—not, however, without some loss.

A murderous attack of Kookies from the side of Independent Tipperah upon the people of a village on the opposite or southern side of the Sylhet Valley has also been reported by telegram from Dacca; but as no further outrages in that quarter have been reported, it seems probable that this is one of those single murderous attacks upon border villages which these savages have been in the habit of making from time to time.

The connection in point of time between this outrage and the rising in the Cossyah hills is without doubt accidental.

The Lieutenant governor has no information leading him to doubt that the Ferazees are perfectly quiet and well-disposed at present, and the same is to be said of the plains of Eastern Bengal generally.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
(Signed) W. BELL.
For. Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE came before the Supreme Court of Bombay on the 21st of January. The Court was crowded. The defendant, editor of the Satya Prakash, was prepared to show that the statements in the article were true. The plaintiff was willing to accept merely an apology. Witnesses were then examined. The revelations made by one of them, Gopaldas Maddass, are of a most startling and most revolting character. There are sixty or seventy Maharajahs in the whole of India. About four years ago the Maharajahs closed their temples for eight days to compel the people to sign a document to the effect that they would do their utmost to prevent the Maharajahs from being called as witnesses in Courts of justice. Witness said, "I believe it to be a sin of the gravest character to neglect worshipping the Maharajah, as incarnations of the Deity," with the body as well as the spirit of the worshipper. In the temples in Bombay, on marriages and other occasions, dancing and singing go on. Prostitutes are invited to the party, and dance in the temple. It is the practice with the devotees to drink the dirty water which is wrung out of the Maharajahs' clothes after bathing and that in which they have washed their feet. Such are the confessions made by the head Mahajun of the Banian caste. The trial was adjourned after hearing his evidence.

GRANTS IN PERPETUITY.

THE experiment of associating native princes and noblemen with the Government of the country has at length been fairly introduced, and with every prospect of happy results. Though totally unfit to receive representative institutions in accordance with our constitutional notions, the people of India must be strangely unlike any other nation on the earth if they do not derive some benefit from having their own mouth-pieces in the Legislative Councils of the different Presidencies, and especially in that presided over by the Governor-general in person. It is plain, however, that a very long time must elapse before they can be trusted, even for their own advantage, to possess a subordinate assembly or Parliament chosen by themselves. On the very first occasion on which the native members of the Viceroy's Council took part in the discussion, a marked difference of opinion was expressed on a subject which might confidently have been relied upon to command unanimity of feeling. It appears that a Rissaldar of Murray's Jat Horse, having greatly distinguished himself during the late mutinies, had been rewarded with the grant of a house and village, but his family being at the time in embarrassed circumstances, the creditors had suddenly come down upon this property and appropriated it to the liquidation of their claims. Upon this, the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces, naturally impressed with the belief that the intentions of the Government in conferring the estate in question upon the gallant and meritorious soldier had been thwarted and rendered void, requested Sir Bartle Frere to bring in a Bill empowering the Government to make inalienable grants of land to individuals who had deserved well of the State. In this country there can be no doubt as to the soundness of the principle and the expediency of the practice. As Lord Canning very justly remarked, it is very important that the memory of noble deeds should be perpetuated through future generations. In some cases, indeed, minor services may be sufficiently recompensed by a pecuniary donation, but whenever land is bestowed it should be understood that the merit of the grantee has been so exceptional as to be recorded as a worthy exemplar to those who are to be born hereafter. Two distinguished instances occur in our own history. With the estate of Blenheim is inseparably associated the fame of the illustrious victories of the Duke of Marlborough, while Strathfieldsaye and Apsley House represent the gratitude of England for the preservation of her own independence and the liberation of Europe from the yoke of Imperial France. In all countries the possession of landed property is an object of envy and desire, but nowhere is it more highly valued than in India. A sonorous title and an inalienable estate constitute nobility, and so anxious are the natives to transmit their name to posterity that there are few privileges to which they attach greater importance than to the right of adoption. The recognition of this right by the Supreme Government has tended more than any one other act to reconcile the subject princes and chiefs to the British supremacy. It might, therefore, have been fairly assumed that the native members of the Calcutta Council would unanimously have supported any measure having for its object to secure the inalienability of estates conferred pro honoris causa. And yet both Rajah Dinkur Rao and Rajah Deo Narain Singh objected that the value of such gifts would be impaired if the recipients were not at liberty to do with them as they pleased. Readily admitting the undoubted right of a donor to make what stipulations he chose, they still argued that the wishes of the grantees ought to be consulted, as the reward was, after all, an acknowledgment of services by which it had been earned. The Maharajah of Puttiala, however, took a wider and more generous view of the question. Strictly speaking, every man is bound to do his duty simply because it is his duty, and the State is only called upon to pay the stipulated wages for such due performance of a previously undertaken engagement. But the experience of all ages has shown the advantage of honouring exceptional merit in an exceptional manner, and of rendering eternal the memory of great and virtuous actions. This is best done by the bestowal of hereditary and immoveable property, which shall transmit from generation to generation the name of the citizen whom his rulers have delighted to distinguish from among his fellows, and thus in some measure bind his descendants to the imitation of his noble deeds. Such grants, therefore, said the Maharajah, should be absolute and inalienable, and coupled with the right of primogeniture. He would even exempt them from all legal process, but on this point Mr. Ritchie's recommendation is decidedly preferable. While saving such estates from the grasp of the usurer, Mr. Ritchie very properly declines to encourage the spendthrift to incur any debts which he could not be compelled to discharge. These lands should, consequently, be held liable during the lifetime of the dissolute descendant of a chivalrous ancestor, and the proceeds applied to cover the just claims of lawful creditors. In like manner there should be no objection to the holder of the grant letting it on lease for the term of his natural existence, or making any other use of it likely to benefit himself without injuring his successors. Probably some such modifications will be introduced into the Bill by the Select Committee to which it has been referred, but the principle, we trust, will be maintained and established as law.

SIR HUGH ROSE AND COLONEL TRAVERS.

THE refusal of the Commander-in-Chief in India to invest Colonel Travers with the Victoria Cross has naturally excited both surprise and indignation among the officers of the Indian army. We desire to speak of Sir Hugh Rose with the respect due not only to his age and personal heroism in the field, but also to the activity, earnestness, and impartiality he has displayed in the exercise of his present exalted and honourable functions. The post he now holds was the just reward of his admirable conduct during the sepoy rebellion, and could not have been more worthily or advantageously bestowed. At the same time it is impossible to deny that the gallant veteran occasionally displays a waywardness and arbitrary capriciousness that may perhaps be attributed to the effects of sun-stroke, but which are neither seemly nor convenient in a Commander-in-Chief. One of his latest exhibitions of temper, which he probably mistakes for a stern uncompromising sense of duty, has been also one of the most unfortunate and least excusable. It is still within the recollection of all men that when the Bheels and Holkar's artillery mutinied at Indore, in July, 1857, the greatest confusion and even a panic prevailed among the Europeans, disconcerted and taken unawares by the suddenness of the attack. At this critical moment Colonel Travers gathered together five resolute men, and placing himself at their head, made a furious charge upon the enemy's guns, and so astonished the mutineers that they desisted from rapine and slaughter to oppose their daring foe. The time thus gained enabled the scattered and trembling Europeans to take shelter in the Residency, whence they finally retreated in good order, under the guidance of Colonel Durand. It surely can be no matter of surprise that such a dashing exploit, such devoted self-sacrifice, should have inspired those whom it rescued from a miserable death with feelings of admiration and gratitude, or that the latter should spontaneously have recommended their heroic benefactor for the coveted distinction of the Victoria Cross. This recommendation was endorsed and forwarded by Colonel Durand, though he did not himself actually witness the incidents of the charge. He saw, indeed, the noble half-dozen ride forth on their desperate mission, and he also saw them return covered with their own and their chargers' blood. A stable, however, intervened between the Residency and the enemy's guns, so that he was not, strictly speaking, a spectator of the momentary capture of the battery. This circumstance he happened to mention to Sir Hugh Rose, not by way of impairing the force of his testimony to Colonel Travers' memorable deed of valour, but with a view to give that officer the entire credit of conceiving and executing a charge almost unrivalled in the military annals of the country. Sir Hugh, however, instantly jumped at the ungenerous conclusion that the former recital of Colonel Travers' exploit had been exaggerated, and that his claim to the Victoria Cross was not sufficiently substantiated. Even had this been the case, it would have been better to have obeyed her Majesty's positive command, and to have taken care for the future to be more certain of the grounds on which such claims are advanced. Colonel Travers, indeed, can well afford to dispense with any outward badge of distinction so long as he remains in India, where his reputation is too well established to need the aid of any such symbols. But that is no reason for treating him with harshness and injustice, and wounding his feelings in a manner so peculiarly offensive. It may be doubted, indeed, if Sir Hugh Rose was authorised to decline carrying out the orders of his superiors; orders, too, that emanated from the highest personage in the land. Be that as it may, he is every way bound to make the only reparation in his power, with the least possible delay, and by a hearty expression of regret atone for his inconsiderate hastiness of judgment. The following correspondence, for which we are indebted to the Delhi Gazette, places the whole question in the clearest light, and leaves no loop-hole for hesitation:—

My Lord,—I am averse to addressing your lordship direct, for I know how very valuable every moment of time must be to you; but as the subject regarding which I am about to write has already been before Government, and an official reply has been received, I think it more respectful to your lordship to write direct, in this form, than through the usual official channel.

My object is to endeavour to obtain a reconsideration of the order conveyed in the Secretary of Government's letter, No. 372, of date 28th January, 1858.

Colonel Durand, in his letter No. 41 D, of date 20th August, 1857, did not, I think, do full justice to Colonel Travers in the description which he gave of that officer's charge on Holkar's guns, when the Residency was attacked in July, 1857.

From his statement the charge, though dashing and daring, would appear to have been made without any specific object, and without the prospect of such advantage as alone would justify so rash a proceeding. But the real facts of the case are that the assault on the Residency was a complete surprise to our people, and Holkar's soldiers were scattered about slaying women and children unopposed, owing to the suddenness of the attack having paralysed the efforts of the Europeans and such natives as were well disposed to us.

At such a moment to find themselves assaulted by those whom they believed to be at their mercy caused a complete revulsion in the minds of our assailants. The panic under which our people were labouring was transferred for a moment to their assailants, and the latter, quitting the slaughter, for the purpose of which they had dispersed, rushed towards their guns, and collected round them for their protection. They could not know for the moment whether Colonel Travers was accompanied by many or by few in his desperate charge.

The consequences of this reaction were that many Europeans were enabled to escape from actual slaughter, and our own faithful Bhopal artillery gained time to move their guns, and, with a few of the Bheel and other infantry, to fall in for their support.

I have before me letters from five of the officers who were present. [Major Ludlow, Madras engineers; Captain Cobbe, Madras artillery; Colonel Stockley, Bombay infantry; Colonel Thompson, Bhopal agency; Dr. Rice, civil assistant surgeon, Saugor.] The first records his opinion "that the charge cowed the mutineers and checked the advance of their guns on the Residency before our two guns could be brought into action. Had they then advanced, which your charge alone prevented, I am firmly convinced that our guns would never have been brought into action at all. The Residency would have been closely invested by the mutineers, and not one of the many Europeans who did not escape would have been left alive. To your charge, under Providence, we all owe our lives."

The second officer states, that "time was gained by the charge to such an extent that many people were able to reach the Residency who would most certainly have been cut off."

He dwells most strongly upon the advantage of time being gained to enable our artillery to take up a favourable position for action. Colonel Stockley writes:—

"That the attack made on the Residency was so sudden that the diversion caused by the charge was of the utmost moment, both as to enabling our guns to get into action and affording time for the Europeans to seek shelter in the Residency." He mentions that the enemy's guns did not reopen their fire for some time after the charge, and ere they could reopen, our own guns were in position.

Dr. Thompson also points out that a considerable pause took place in the enemy's fire after the charge, and mentions Dr. Knapp, Residency surgeon, as one of the Europeans who was enabled to escape owing to the reaction caused by the charge.

Dr. Rice states that he attributes his own escape to the same cause, and that without the reaction he would not have been able to have reached the Residency.

I hope your lordship will think that the opinion of the above officers proves that the advantages gained were sufficient to justify the risk, even though Colonel Travers in charging knew that he was followed only by five men.

His own horse was shot in three places, and his accoutrements shot through or cut in various parts. Each of the five men who rode with him into the enemy's battery returned with one or more wounds on their own persons or on their horses. If your lordship considers that I have shown sufficient cause, I beg I may be permitted to make another reference officially, and I may add I am guided solely by a sense of duty, for I never met Colonel Travers until he returned from furlough a short time since.

I do not think your lordship will need any apology from me for the trouble I have given in this matter, as I know it is your earnest desire to reward handsomely those who serve her Majesty with such remarkable gallantry as Colonel Travers displayed.—I remain, my lord, your lordship's most obedient humble servant,

Adjutant general's Office, Head Quarters, Allahabad, Nov. 2, 1861.

Sir,—The day before yesterday Colonel Durand, when in conversation with the Commander in Chief, introduced the subject of the act of bravery for which you were to receive the Victoria Cross, and after detailing all the circumstances of the affair, informed Sir Hugh Rose that he, Colonel Durand, had not himself seen the charge (the act of bravery for which you were recommended), but that he had heard it from yourself and one or two of the sowers who accompanied you. Sir Hugh Rose, when recommending for higher approval your claim for the Victoria Cross, supported, as far as he remembers, mainly, if not solely, by Colonel Durand's statement, was convinced that that officer had witnessed the act of bravery himself. But it now appears, from Colonel Durand's statement, that the evidence was not such as is required by the statutes of the order to substantiate a claim to the Victoria Cross. Under these circumstances, unless other conclusive evidence, besides Colonel Durand's, has been produced, the Commander-in-Chief regrets extremely to say he will be obliged to make further reference to higher authority on the subject.—I am, &c.,

(No. 2.)

To the Adjutant-general.

Nov. 2, 1861.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this day's date, and which has caused me great pain.

I beg to observe the Victoria Cross was not awarded me solely upon Colonel Durand's recommendation of me, in so much as that officer's recommendation was not entertained until supported by the written testimony of the undermentioned officers who were present on the occasion, viz:—

Colonel Stockley, Bombay army, then commanding Malwa Bheel corps; Major Ludlow, Madras engineers; Captain Cobbe, Madras artillery; Dr. C. Thompson, Bhopal contingent—now at Schore—and Dr. Rice, who is, I believe, now at Saugor.

These officers have distinctly stated that lives, more or less in number, were saved, and other important advantages gained, by the charge upon Holkar's battery.

Before proceeding further, I must state that Col. Durand's recommendation was not entertained in the first instance because it was considered he had not shown sufficiently that the statutes of the order had been fully complied with; but at the time he did not know whether the Victoria Cross was open to officers of the Indian army, as will be seen by a reference to his recommendation, which is in the hands of the Military Secretary to his Excellency the Commander in Chief.

Had I thought it possible that any circumstance could now raise the slightest doubt of the validity of my claim to the Victoria Cross, in the mind of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, I should have brought from Goona the letters written by these officers, upon whose testimony, in addition to that of Colonel Durand, this distinction was conferred upon me.

After my conversation with you this morning, I wrote to Colonel Durand, a copy of whose reply I beg to enclose herewith, which I trust his Excellency will consider satisfactory; as that officer, instead of being, as the Commander-in-Chief has been induced to suppose, three miles from the scene of action, was actually on the field, and not above 150 yards from the spot where the enemy's battery was posted, although a stable concealed the actual conflict from his view; but as will be seen from his letter now forwarded, he both saw me advancing to, and returning from the charge.

From your letter now under acknowledgment, I am inclined to believe that his Excellency, without any document before him, has in mind Colonel Durand's recommendation as first considered, and not when coupled with the written testimony of five other officers present in the field, because it was upon the unanimous and strongly-expressed opinion of all six that the Victoria Cross was conferred upon me.

In conclusion, I beg to state, in justice to myself, that when I informed Colonel Durand of the conduct of the men, and what took place in the charge, I had no thought whatever of the Cross, as may readily be supposed when the heavy responsibilities of my position as commander are considered, and death to all Europeans (including many women and children) entrusted to my charge seemed almost if not quite inevitable, and it was not until after many months, a year, I believe, that I even heard, and then accidentally through a third party, that I had been recommended for this prized distinction, and I can state with equal distinctness, that I never in any way whatever even hinted to Colonel Durand that I hoped he would recommend me for the Cross.—I have, &c., Commanding Central India Horse.

Allahabad, Nov. 2, 1861.

My Dear Travers,—I am, as you will very easily understand, quite grieved that his Excellency the Commander in Chief should have inferred from what I said that I was three miles from the spot of your most gallant conduct, that conduct for which I recommended you for the Victoria Cross, and for which I certainly should not have recommended you had I been otherwise than in a position to be satisfied that you fully deserved it.

I think the misapprehension may, however, have arisen from my anxiety to give you the full and entire credit of what you did. I mentioned that I was not at the actual spot where your charge was made, at the time you made it, but that I knew what took place from yourself, from those with you, and (might have added) from Holkar's own opposing troops. My purpose was to show that whilst I was organising the defence of the Residency, you on the other side of a block of buildings, which intercepted my view, namely, the stable square of the Residency, on your own judgment, and without any share of the credit being due to myself, or to anyone else, charged Holkar's guns, for a while held them, and were only driven back from them by the fire of the infantry companies in support of the guns, for opposition to such a body, from yourself and the five who followed you, and shared in your charge, was of course out of the question. I saw you go and I saw you come back, covered with blood from your wounded horse, and you then helped me in trying to rally and form the Sikh horse, at the foot of the Residency, and throughout that bitter day you were ever calm, and exerting yourself to the uttermost to show a front and keep together our disheartened men. I cannot say how grieved I am, that what I intended as that which should redound to your credit should have been so much a cause of misapprehension.—Yours ever truly,

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CRYING WANT OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—There seems to be a spell against the construction of ordinary roads throughout India, available for the farmer from his homestead to some substantial way at all seasons of the year to a neighbouring or remote market.

The late venerable chairman, Mr. St. George Tucker, of the late East India Company, told the proprietors of East India Stock in meeting assembled as far back as 1840, that he had been advocating the formation of roads throughout India for the previous twenty years, but it seems without effect.

All the famines that have occurred in that country within the present century may be ascribed to the want of means of cheap conveyance for food; while many of the military expeditions have been retarded and enormous expenses incurred in conducting them for want of roads. It was shown in evidence before Mr. Bright's Cotton Committee of the House of Commons that during the rainy season of 1823 so impracticable was it to traverse the country, even by pack bullocks, that the same description of grain that was then selling in Candeish at five shillings a quarter fetched in Aurungabad, only fifty miles off, thirty-four shillings a quarter, and that eighty or ninety miles further, at Poona, it could scarcely be had at less than sixty or seventy shillings. So, in the late famine in the N.W. Provinces, in the absence of roads and carriage, Colonel Baird Smith reported that a very short distance made the greatest difference, and that what could be had at one rupee at one place could hardly be obtained for four-and-a-half rupees within thirty miles.

The same want of conveyance in the scarcity of 1837 in the very same locality caused the death of half a million of inhabitants, so that thirty-two years had passed, and yet scarcely any practicable and substantial roads available at all seasons have been yet constructed. Some twenty years since the cotton traffic in the Deccan was so impeded for want of cart roads, that an English company at Bombay offered to construct them, and to be remunerated by a moderate toll, to be levied wherever the Government pleased, and at a rate to be fixed by Government itself in conjunction with the company. But the very idea of tolls was repudiated, and it was thought better that there should be no roads, than that the people should pay for their use. We shall see how this principle has been since adhered to. The incessant appeals made in the Court of Proprietors to their representatives on the subject of roads were treated with worse than indifference, because it was invariably stated that the roads were sufficiently good for the description of conveyance used by the natives in the dry weather; and in the wet weather they never travelled. These statements were quoted both from civil servants in the Deccan and in Guzerat, which, though they satisfied the Hon. Court they did not prevent similar repeated appeals from some of the less credulous and more rational of the Proprietors. The Indian authorities had so perverted the practice of tolls on high roads by the native Governments, (which were levied in bulk on cattle and carts) by converting this mode of revenue (applicable to the repair and protection of high-ways) into ad valorem duties which required the examination of all goods at every custom-house, that in the end the Government found it necessary to abolish them altogether, after having converted them into internal ad valorem duties. But though the native system was objectionable in the shape in which the tolls were levied, it might have been modified, and the proceeds made available for promoting the internal communications of the country. But as I have before stated, it was deemed better to have no roads at all than to tax them, even on the principle adopted in almost every civilised State in the world. No doubt it would be better that all traffic should be relieved from taxation; but to be without roads, except those available for pack-cattle alone, and then only in certain seasons of the year, is to impose a heavier infliction on commerce and on the prosperity of the country than would arise from a moderate taxation. To show how this want of conveyance has affected the public purse, and has retarded military operations on different occasions in India, it is only necessary to state two or three cases. The first is the memorable and melancholy one of the surgeons and artillery officers required in the first Punjab campaign to be sent to the field, when, according to the statement of an "Old Post-master" (now better known for promoting the traffic up the Indus and the telegraph through Asia Minor to Karatchee), the most speedy and effective mode of conveyance left for the Government to pursue, in the absence of one high-road, was by despatching them at the rate of two per diem, in palankeens conveyed on men's shoulders, a distance of fourteen hundred miles, and which demanded the services of upwards of seven thousand men; so that not more than one-third of the officers reached the camp before the war was at an end. Again, Sir John Malcolm, when Governor of Bombay, ventured (without the authority of the Home Government) to render the Bore Ghat, or pass up the mountain towards Poona, available for wheel carriages, and showed that its construction cost less than the conveyance of military stores on pack-bullocks during a single campaign of the Mahratta war of 1817, and that the slight tolls levied, which were most willingly paid, proved sufficient to keep the road in repair. I might quote numerous instances of similar kinds, but really to address an English public on the necessity of good roads is a mere repetition of platitudes with which every squatter in the back settlements of America or Australia is familiar. While on the subject of military stores, I may mention another instance, namely, that of the engineer who has been so many years employed in improving the navigation and the irrigation of the Godavery, who states, in a letter addressed to the Secretary of State for India, from Hertford, dated just three years ago, that the saving to the Government in the conveyance of military stores alone by rendering the Godavery navigable throughout the year would in a very few years cover the whole expense required to effect that object. That excellent officer, who has visited most, if not all, the navigable rivers in Europe and North America, shows that many of those have been alone rendered available for traffic by the formation of lateral canals and locks and the removal of obstructions; and we need go no farther than England for similar examples, nor even beyond the River Thames, to prove that without such adjuncts and appliances we could have no water carriage even so far as Windsor. Now, though this project for opening the Godavery has been approved of by the local government for several years, I am not aware that any sanction has been yet given to commence a work that, had it been begun when first recommended by the Government, would now be conveying a vast traffic in cotton, at a cheap and expeditious rate, down to the port of Coringa, on the eastern coast of the Peninsula; and would also return with cargoes of salt, military stores, and European goods into the heart of that extensive region.

Following the railway mania in England in 1847, the country became alive to the want of internal communication in India, and both the cotton interest of Lancashire and the railway power in the House of Commons prevailed, in not only sanctioning, but also in according a guarantee of five per cent. dividend on all sums sanctioned by the Government to be expended in railway construction. But India contains 153,000 square miles more than the continent of Europe, and it seems to have been overlooked that to provide adequate conveyance over an area of 1,355,107 square miles, and to satisfy the wants of a population of 180,000,000 of an intelligent, ingenious, and industrious population, by means of railroads alone, was a gigantic and impracticable task, which, even if the expense could be borne, would require, at least, a century to fulfil. What is now felt to be requisite to develop the resources of this magnificent country and interesting dense population are the means of immediate and cheap conveyance from the farm-yard to the neighbouring or remote market, which can only be obtained by the construction of cheap roads on which the farmer or the manufacturer can convey his goods by his own cart and cattle. Five and twenty years have elapsed, hundreds of millions have been expended, a great experiment has been made in a country like this, full of wealth, enterprise, and ingenuity; and this novel mode of conveyance, though of incalculable benefit to a rich country like England, previously provided with private and public ordinary roads leading to every farmyard, has been found neither so profitable nor convenient as to warrant their extension to the supersession of common roads. The railway project of India has hitherto been a heavy burden on the national revenue. More than six millions of tribute money has already been paid, and when they are completed, an annual demand of the people's money, to the extent of three millions, will be made; and yet the Government has hitherto been unable to spare, or unwilling to borrow, enough to construct ordinary roads, or permit others to make them, on the usual condition of those who use them to pay for the convenience. Seeing how completely the railways have failed in providing adequately for the traffic of the country, the Governor-general has lately sanctioned the formation of ordinary roads by private individuals. These, if properly constructed and extensively spread throughout India, will provide in a great measure for its most essential wants in the shape of inland traffic. Good substantial metal roads, eighteen feet wide, with gutters and cross drains, were made by the late unfortunate Rajah of Sattara, with strict economy, but with well-paid labour, at the rate of £150 a mile, and I believe, with a similar system, they could be constructed in most parts of India, where no rivers or mountains intervene, at a rate of £300, whereas the bare roads, without gutters or cross drains, in England are calculated to cost £2456 per mile. The roads above alluded to were made principally by the application of the unskilled labour of the peasantry of the villages or townships they passed through, formed into bands of fifty or a hundred labourers, supervised and aided by artificers at the rate of 10 per cent. The latter were retained in permanent pay all the year, while the labourers were only paid when employed. The facility and rapidity with which such roads were constructed by the number of workmen available, is shown by the fact that about thirty-five miles of road, partly over a mountain four or five hundred feet high, were finished in six months. The road that had hitherto been available for pack cattle only, was soon thronged with carts, and the consolidated tolls, though not increased, I understand not only very soon served to pay for the road, but also added a considerable surplus to this branch of revenue. It has erroneously been supposed that good roads could not be carried over the black cotton soil of India, which is so extensive; but every one who has lived in the Deccan, where it is almost universal, must have experienced in the construction of wells throughout that country that this rich soil does not lie more than a few feet below the surface, and that underneath it lies a stratum of the decomposed trap a foot or so in thickness, below which is the solid rock, so that the material actually lies under one's feet, and requires nothing but quarrying to form a solid surface, and is always at hand for repairs.

It is difficult to imagine how the prosperity of India has been retarded by this indifference to its internal communication by the Government. All sorts of excuses have been made in order to shirk the question, as if it were brought forward for some private or personal benefit, ignoring altogether the similarity of India with all other civilised nations. But when pressed by an interested English public, the Government not only give way, but promote the object to the benefit of English shareholders at the expense of the Indian people; making the whole nation pay for the advantage derived only by a few, instead of confining the tax to those who are alone able to enjoy the benefit of the rail. Scarcely is the offer of the Governor-general made to receive tenders for the construction of good metal roads available for private conveyances, than a company is advertised in London for the purpose of feeding the railway traffic by means of tramways and locomotives to be propelled by horses. Something of the kind is much wanted to improve the railway traffic; but if high roads for private conveyances, or bye roads leading to them from every township, are to be transferred to a tramway monopoly, the great desideratum of the country will be evaded, and India will still be in the position of all Europe with its railways, and no ordinary roads for the agriculturist or the manufacturer to carry his goods to market. Let us by all means have simple roads at once, leaving the expensive and dilatory construction of railways and tramways to our posterity when they will pay and can be rendered available for every township throughout the land.

Had the voice of those who have been struggling to obtain this object been attended to twenty years ago the question of cotton would long since have been settled, and while we should have been independent of America, the East would have been supplying all Europe with the article cheaper than the West, and the shackles of the slave would have fallen from his feet. Good cotton from New Orleans seed, properly cleaned and fit for the English market, selling at the American price, has been imported into Liverpool from India at 3d. per pound, and may be again imported at the same price. Neither Alabama nor New Orleans, with slave labour, can compete with that. But this state of things cannot exist without cheap internal communication, either by land or by water to the sea coast. J.B.

Oriental Club, March 8, 1862.

[While fully agreeing with our much respected correspondent as to the necessity of supplying India with good common roads, we cannot see any necessity for leaving to our posterity the task of constructing tramways. It might have been better to have deferred the construction of the great military railroads for at least another generation, but as public opinion at home succeeded in over-riding the arguments of experienced Anglo-Indians, the only thing now to be done is to endeavour to make those railroads profitable, and that can most surely be done by means of tramways and cheap lines of rail. As to India supplanting America as a cotton growing country, we have the misfortune to differ entirely from our correspondent. No doubt any quantity can be obtained, but the quality is decidedly inferior.—Ed. A. I. M.]

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 10.

INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA COMPANY.

Colonel SYKES rose to ask the Secretary of State for India whether he had taken shares in the Indus Steam Flotilla Company on account of the Indian Government, in part payment of the price of vessels; and whether he had guaranteed 5 per cent. upon £167,000 to be raised as additional capital to complete the payments to the Government, and for other purposes? The hon. and gallant member explained that he put his question in consequence of a public notification that had been issued by the directors of the company to which it referred. The company had bought a number of vessels from the Indian Government for the purpose of plying upon the Indus, and the arrangement between them and the Government appeared to be that the Secretary of State for India was to take shares for the purchase money. But that was not all. The Secretary of State for India had given the company a guarantee of 5 per cent. upon about £500,000 of its capital out of the revenues of India; yet up to the present moment the company had not completed its undertaking. On the other hand, another body of capitalists, called the Oriental Steam Navigation Company, was formed in 1856 for the navigation of the inland waters of India. They resolved to begin with the Godavery, and they applied to the East India Company for a guarantee. The Court of Directors refused to comply with their request, but ultimately agreed to give them a subsidy of £5,000 per annum for ten years, provided they fulfilled their undertaking. They could not for a time carry out the conditions of their contract, but by dint of persevering efforts they were enabled last year to obtain their first subsidy. They had now several steamers on the Indus, and were placing others on the Ganges. They had also offered to buy the steamers and barges belonging to the Government for £45,000, but the Government refused to let them have the barges, in which it was usual in India to carry the baggage, in tow of the steamers. The Oriental Steam Navigation complained—and apparently not without reason—that the advantages which had been denied to them had been granted to their rivals. He, therefore, desired to put his question to the right hon. gentleman, who, he hoped, would be able to state that the whole transaction was a myth.

Sir C. Wood was not about to follow his hon. and gallant friend into the general question of guarantees. He quite admitted that, in the abstract, they were not in accordance with Free Trade principles; but there were peculiar circumstances connected with those railway companies in India. Besides this, he found certain guarantees referred to by his hon. and gallant friend in existence at the time he had the honour of entering on the duties of the office which he now filled, and he had had no option in the matter. Coming to his hon. and gallant friend's questions, and taking the last first, he had to reply that the Government had not guaranteed 5 per cent. upon £167,000, to be raised as additional capital for the purposes stated. No such proposition had been made to the India-office. With regard to the first question, the Government were bound to see those companies through some way or other; because as they had guaranteed 5 per cent. to the shareholders, it was their interest to forward the undertaking, as the only mode of saving themselves from the payment of interest. If the companies could not pay interest out of revenue, the Government would be called on. In this particular case, the Government of Bombay arranged to sell certain vessels to the company, not having any further occasion for them themselves. Before they made the agreement for this sale another company had been communicated with, but declined to say whether they would purchase the boats unless they had a previous loan of them for six months. Under those circumstances the sale to the Steam Flotilla and Punjab Railway Company took place; and, on the whole, the Government thought that the best security they could obtain were shares, by accepting which they had put themselves in the position of shareholders of the company.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 13.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH SERVICE OF INDIA.

Sir C. WOOD (in answer to Mr. WHITE) said he believed there had been some recent complaints from India of deficiencies in the working of the electric telegraph, mainly owing to the employment of native signallers. Representations having been made to the Indian Government, a committee was appointed, and the result had been that the department had been reorganised. With regard to any particular appointments, he must remind the hon. gentleman that they were all made in India. The Home Government did not interfere with the appointments made in India, unless some special ground was shown for its interposition. He had not the least reason to suppose that any improper appointments had been made over the heads of qualified servants. With regard to two of the officers in question, he did not believe that two persons better qualified could be found either in the Indian or any other service. Two other officers had been for some time at the head of departments. Looking to the anxiety of the Indian Government to put this service on a proper footing, he had no reason to suppose that any improper appointments had been made.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 14.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE wished to inquire the intentions of the Government as to the future prospects and position of the officers of the Indian navy.

Sir C. WOOD said it was impossible to state, in answer to the questions of the hon. gentleman, what were the intentions of the Government in regard to the Indian navy. Instructions had been sent to the Government of India with reference to the Indian navy, but they had not been complied with, the Indian Government having taken a different view of the matter. The Home Government would have to answer the letter received from the Indian Government, and if the hon. gentleman would postpone the motion he had placed on the paper for the correspondence until that letter was sent, there would be no objection, at the end, to lay the whole correspondence on the table. That would be the only complete answer that could be given to the question of the hon. gentleman.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Sir M. FARQUHAR said that an official statement had been made that the Government of Bengal, finding they had more cavalry regiments than they required, had determined to send home the Queen's Bays. The Home Government, it was stated, thereupon wrote to give the Indian Government authority, instead of sending home an old regiment to be reduced, to reduce the youngest cavalry regiment which had been formed out of the local European cavalry regiments. That regiment was the 21st Hussars. He was unwilling to trouble the House on the subject, but that House had constituted itself a court of appeal on the late Indian army. By the 56th section of the Act of 1858, it was enacted that the pay, privileges, allowances, and promotion of the Indian army were to be in the same position as when the Indian army was under the Indian Government. Not satisfied even with that provision, the House manifested its determination to see that justice was done to the officers of the Indian army by accepting a clause proposed by his right hon. friend (Mr. Henley) in the Bill for amalgamating the Indian with the Royal army, which repeated the guarantee given by the Act of 1858. Lord Derby stated at that time that the expectations of the officers of the Indian army ought to be considered, and the right hon. gentleman (Sir C. Wood) assured the House that no substantial alteration would be made in the position of the officers of the Indian army. Before the rebellion there were ten regiments of native cavalry. Several of the officers were murdered, but those who escaped did their duty bravely. Upon the suppression of the mutiny, it was determined to have native cavalry regiments no longer; and, after various changes of mind on the part of the Government, there appeared in the Calcutta Gazette of the 22nd of April last a General Order, issued by the Government of India, upon the authority of the Home Government, in which the whole scheme of the amalgamation of the Indian and British armies was clearly laid down. In that order it was declared that no alteration should be made in the position of the officers or men without their consent, and they were invited to volunteer into the new regiments under the general conditions of service of her Majesty's army. The same power which had created a regiment could, of course, reduce it; and, therefore, if there were more regiments in India than were required, it was competent to the Indian Government to propose that those regiments should not be retained in that country. It could not be supposed that the officers would have volunteered if they had supposed that within ten months of the time when the General Order was issued, it should have been stated by the Secretary for India in that House, that if the Indian Government did not require a cavalry regiment, they had his authority to reduce it whenever they pleased. Now, the question he had to put was, what was to be the position of the officers if they were to be thus reduced? Were they to be restored to the position in which they were before they volunteered, and to be in the local service of the Government, or were they to be sent home and put on half-pay?

After a few remarks to the same purport from Mr. ADAM, Colonel SYKES, and Mr. VANSITTART, Sir CHARLES WOOD replied that he regretted as much as any one could do that there should be any uncertainty in the position of the officers. He should, however, be permitted to observe that the uncertainty arose in a great measure from the consideration which the Government had endeavoured to give to their position by the creation of retirements, with a view to mitigate the hardship which he readily admitted to have been incurred by some officers in consequence of the amalgamation, and also of the reduction of the army in India which was at present going on. But it would have been quite as competent to the Court of Directors to have made this reduction as it was for her Majesty's Government; and, undoubtedly, if they had done so, nobody would have been right in maintaining that the native army should not be reduced. But if by a reduction made in that army some hardship should be entailed on the officers—it was the inevitable consequence of reduction. Now, with regard to this particular question, he stated on a former occasion under what circumstances it had arisen. Those circumstances were certainly in no degree due to the conduct pursued by the Home Government. The first demand of the Indian Government was for a much larger number of regiments than the India-office thought sufficient; and, if that Government had changed its opinion so far as not only to come down to what the India-office sanctioned, but even below it, that was not the fault of the authorities at home. The first consideration, of course, was, what was the force required for India; and beyond that it would be unfair to impose on the revenues of that country the maintenance of large bodies of men. Then the question was, what was to be done with the regiments which were, in the opinion of the Government of India, unnecessary? This was not his opinion or the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief; but it was not for him to force on the Government of India the maintenance of regiments of cavalry which they thought unnecessary. The hon. gentleman had asked what would be the position of certain officers to whom he had referred. Those officers had volunteered for general service, and they were at present in the Indian service. Supposing the Government of India determined not to form the regiment, then their services in a regiment of the line would not be wanted, and they would remain, as they were at present, officers of the Indian army, to be employed accordingly as the Government of India could best provide employment for them. They were, therefore, neither better nor worse off than their brethren in the Indian army. He did not know what the feeling of the Indian Government might be, but he was inclined to think, from what he had heard, that they had changed their opinion as to the number of regiments requisite in Bengal, and that the regiment would be formed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Foreign Office, Dec. 20.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint William Raymond Gilling, Esq., now H.M.'s Consul at Amoy, to be H.M.'s Consul at Hankow. The Queen has also been graciously pleased to appoint James Mongan, Esq., to be H.M.'s Consul at Tien-tsin.

INDIA.—Mr. Simpson, the photographer who gave to the public such vivid sketches of the Crimean campaign, has for the last three years been in India, taking 250 sketches of the important cities and the beautiful scenery of our Eastern Empire. Having, with the assistance of his Excellency Lord Canning, completed his task, Mr. Simpson is returning with his valuable collection, which we understand is to be dedicated (by command) to her Majesty.

GOVERNMENT GUARANTEES.—On a question in the House of Commons on Monday night concerning the Indus Steam Flotilla Company, and the subject of guarantees, Sir Charles Wood is reported to have observed that "he quite admitted that guarantees in the abstract were not in accordance with free trade principles." In connection with this, it is necessary to remark that the financial public have long had to complain that the members of the Government usually mix up the subject of guarantees with points that have no real bearing upon it, and refuse to deal with it on those simple grounds on which alone consideration can be claimed. Free trade principles are not involved in the matter either one way or the other. If an individual or a company seeks a guarantee or subsidy for some enterprise of purely commercial character, the Government, of course, have nothing to do but to reply that it is not within their power to make presents out of the public purse to any class of people whatever. But if the Government want a service performed for themselves—that is to say, for the nation—they must not seek to stimulate capitalists to run the risk of executing it without offering them an adequate remuneration. The promise of this remuneration is what is termed a guarantee, and free trade is no more concerned in it than when a man undertakes to pay a labourer his wages after a week's service. Unquestionably, the guarantee system has been used to facilitate many unsound transactions, but its abuse must not be confounded with its use, especially as it is only through its agency that great undertakings, which may be of vast importance to the safety of the kingdom and its general advancement, but wholly without any solid recommendations as regards the prospect of profit to individuals, are likely to be accomplished. —Times City Article.

FOREIGN OFFICE, MARCH 11.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. John F. Capelle as Consul at Rangoon for his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway.

INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY.—It is stated that Mr. Wilson has entered into an engagement with a company about to be brought out for laying down light rails, to be worked by locomotive power, on the road from Nulhatee to Moorshehabad, which has been conceded to him by the Government of India for that purpose. Mr. Wilson proceeds to India immediately to commence this work, and to complete negotiations for other similar concessions from the Government. This gentleman has written to a contemporary to contradict the statement that he was about to lay down merely a tramway.

RED SEA TELEGRAPH.—Intelligence has been received by the Telegraph to India Company that the new station at Jubal Island, in the Red Sea, is open, and ready for messages. The Postmaster-general has given permission for the mail steamers to receive and deliver telegraphic despatches at Jubal, on their passage up and down the Red Sea, by which means a saving of from two to three days will be effected in the communication with the East.

COTTON TRADE WITH INDIA.—A short tabular return which has been laid before Parliament shows, side by side, how our imports of cotton wool from India have been increasing of late, and our exports of cotton goods thither decreasing. In 1859 we took 1,717,240 cwt. of cotton wool from India, and sent thither cotton goods and yarn of the value of £14,713,812; in 1860 we took 1,822,689 cwt. of the raw material, but the cotton exports to India fell to £12,425,730; and in 1861 we took 3,295,004 cwt. of cotton wool from India, but only sent thither cottons and yarns to the value of £11,618,350. Still this export compares well with that of six years before, which was only of the value of £6,458,086. There was a sudden increase to the extent of more than £4,000,000 in 1858, and again in 1859 an increase of above £3,000,000 more, the export of manufactured cotton goods rising from £3,786,471 in 1857 to £12,167,498 in 1859, and the cotton twist and yarn from £1,147,379 to £2,546,314.

DEATH OF COL. CRAWFORD, C.B.—We have to announce the death of Colonel William Thomas Crawford, C.B., late brigadier-general commanding the troops at Hong Kong. The gallant deceased entered the army in 1833, served in India from September, 1857, to January, 1858, and, as brigadier, commanded the artillery at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, and also the artillery attached to the Commander-in-chief's forces at the battle of Cawnpore, on the 6th of December, for which he was mentioned in despatches, made a Companion of the Bath, and received the medal and clasp. He attained the rank of colonel in 1858.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffuseness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT & PILLS.—

TO THE HOPELESS.—These potent remedies have claims paramount to all other medicines or applications for the cure of ulcers, sores, wounds, and skin diseases generally. A most remarkable instance of the curative virtues possessed by Holloway's remedies has recently been furnished by a needle-maker of Studley, whose body and legs were sorely afflicted by malignant ulcers. He got worse under the best surgical treatment, but was soon eased, and shortly cured, by these healing and purifying preparations. They closed the wounds and cleansed the system. One solitary trial is sufficient to prove to the most sceptical the superior value of Holloway's medicaments, which rouse, excite, quicken, and stimulate the feeble nerves and languid circulation.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 27th February brings unfavourable news of the state of affairs on the north-eastern frontier of Bengal. Emboldened by the smallness of the detachments that were at first sent against them, the Khasiahs have poured down from their hills in greater numbers, and created an intense feeling of alarm throughout Sylhet. Reinforcements, however, have been forwarded in all haste to the disturbed districts, and no doubt Colonel Durnford will speedily sweep the barbarians back into their mountain recesses. The real difficulty will begin when the military operations terminate. Punishment for the present outbreak is not the only object to be attained. The consideration of the highest importance is the prevention of similar aggressions for the future. To this end it will probably be necessary to establish a cordon of posts to restrain the depredations of these restless tribes, and compel them to desist from violence, and acquire habits of order and industry.

The Bheels to the west and south of Burmawee are also up in arms, and likely to give trouble. It was in taming these untutored savages that Sir James Outram laid the foundation of his distinguished career, and showed of what genuine stuff he was made. A small body of troops has been despatched to suppress this movement at its commencement, but everything will depend upon the personal character of the commanding officer. The actual fighting will be the least part of the business, though the Bheels are no despicable foes. But the only hope of reclaiming the wild indigenous tribes of Hindostan is by largely recruiting among them, and appointing officers of real force of character to dwell among them and teach them the acts of peace.

The financial position of the Indian empire is most satisfactory. On the 31st of January the Treasury Cash Balances amounted to £18,400,000, showing an increase during that month of very nearly a million and a half. The Licence-tax has consequently been abolished, and the fifty lakhs collected on account are to be returned to the contributors. The removal of this unpopular impost will be highly acceptable to the immense trading community, though it will probably encourage them to agitate against the Income-tax also. Mr. Laing, we rejoice to learn, has been able to return to his post, with his health greatly improved.

The Saugor territory has again been made over to the Madras Government, and will compensate for the transfer of North Canara to the Bombay Presidency. Colonel Turner and Mr. Hope, after receiving charge of the latter district, have returned to Bombay.

The Commander-in-Chief, Sir Hugh Rose, with characteristic energy, has inspected the entire line of the North-West frontier, travelling at the rate of fifty miles a-day. It is said that Dost Mahomed proposes to confer with his Excellency at Peshawur. The death of that aged prince will probably cut out some work for Sir Hugh's successor, if not for himself.

Lord Canning is making preparations for his early departure from India, and may fairly exclaim on terminating his administration: Exegi monumentum ære perennius. Sir George Clerk is likewise on the point of closing his long and honourable connection with Indian Government, and is expected to leave Bombay by the mail of the 27th of March. His successor will be Sir Henry Bartle Frere, and not Sir J. P. Grant, as the Times of India erroneously affirms.

Large supplies of cotton were daily arriving in Bombay, and a specimen of gold dust has also been received from Dharwar. There really seems to be some reason to believe that gold abounds in that district, though we may expect that every possible obstacle will be placed in the way of its successful working. The last thing the Indian Government would desire would be an invasion by hordes of gold-diggers.

Both Surat and Poona have suffered severely from fires—the destruction of property at each place being estimated at nearly £10,000. Indeed, fires have been suspiciously frequent in several parts of India. During the hot season they are looked for as a matter of course, but in the months of January and February they are usually of rare occurrence.

Last night, in the House of Commons, on the motion of Sir J. Elphinstone, a select committee was appointed to inquire into and report on the practicability of shortening the voyage to her Majesty's possessions in Madras, Bengal, and Burmah, by facilitating the passage through the obstruction known as Adam's-bridge, and thereby avoiding the circumnavigation of Ceylon.

The next mails from Calcutta and China, via Marseilles, are not expected to be distributed in London until about the 31st inst., owing to the detention of the outward mails, caused by the mishap to the Ceylon.

OUTWARD CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.

The Eurine, from Marseilles on the 14th inst., arrived at Malta on the 17th at 2 A.M., and left at 10 A.M. for Alexandria.

The Ceylon, with the Southampton portion of the mails, reached Malta on the 18th at 4 A.M., and left at noon for Alexandria.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The Red Sea and India Telegraph Company has received the following telegram:—"THE OFFICER IN CHARGE AT JUBAL TO C. L. PEEL, Esq., LONDON.

"March 19 (Noon).

"The Odin has just passed Jubal, having on board the Japanese Commissioners. Odin reports Shanghai closely invested by rebels. Lord Elgin arrived at Calcutta on the 1st of March."

BENGAL.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

The Calcutta Gazette announces "that Lient. Colonel E. K. Elliot, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, is permitted to proceed to Bombay, and has obtained the usual leave of absence for this purpose preparatory to obtaining leave to Europe under medical certificate." Thus, within a few short weeks after the consolidation of Nagpore, and the Saugor, and Nerbudda Territories into the Central Provinces, their head is forced to abandon his post, before the new arrangements are made, or the uniform administration of the united territory is even initiated. Colonel Elliot's physical weakness was well known to all except, evidently, Lord Canning, for the Governor-general could never have, at so early a stage, imperilled the prosperity of the new provinces by an appointment which was so soon to be reversed. England looks to the fine rich loam of Central India for its cotton. The hopes of all Indian thinkers and philanthropists are fixed on an improvement in the staple and an increase in the export of cotton, as the key to matchless wealth and progress. The people inhabiting a country which had hardly recovered from the raids of the Mahratas, the oppression of the Bhonslas, and the exactions of our own short-sighted revenue officers, had begun to share in the general prosperity of our peasantry, when the mutiny once more swept over them and prostrated them to the earth. And now, just as they have a chance of good government, not only is all India astonished by the appointment of a little-minded valetudinarian to govern them; but their astonishment is increased by seeing him forced to leave an appointment on which he had only just entered. Had he been the ablest ruler India has ever seen, the announcement in the Gazette might have been disastrous. As it is, it is not only well that he has gone, but that he has gone so soon. His successor will have a great work to do, and it is right that he should do it from the beginning. The Commission needs light from the outside. At the same time we trust that, in justice to that successor, whoever he may be, Colonel Elliot has left his report behind him. We fear he has not.

We would ask if it is yet too late to administer justice to five millions of people in their own vernacular, instead of in a foreign tongue? If Hindostani is to be used, why not talk English? the people are quite as familiar with one as the other. The people of the assigned districts of Berar speak Mahratti as well as those of Nagpore and in all their courts nothing is used but their own vernacular. Not only is Mahratti the official language of the whole of Berar, but so anxious are the authorities of the Assigned Districts to act on the principle, which is utterly ignored in the Nagpore province, that, in the small portion of the assigned country now restored where Canarese is spoken, that language was always employed. The longer we watch the results of the amalgamation of Nagpore with Saugor, the more reason we see to regret that our Resident at Hyderabad did not induce the Nizam to allow Berar to be incorporated with Nagpore. Berar has a much greater affinity for Nagpore than the Saugor and Nerbudda territory. The latter is an entirely heterogeneous addition, while the people of Berar are of one language, race and interest with those of Berar. But above all, according to the present arrangement, the great cotton field is broken up under different administrations, one part being subject to the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, another to our Resident at Hyderabad. Their conflicting jurisdictions will clash, especially in so important a question as that of roads. The same geographical and political laws which after centuries of dispute united England and Scotland, will operate in the case of Berar and Nagpore. The sooner the union is accomplished the better, for it will ultimately be forced on our Government and the Nizam, as the attention of a cotton-seeking public is directed to the district. No one has urged it more strongly than Lord Canning himself, but he unfortunately tolerates disobedience on the part of his subordinates, where his predecessor, to whom we owe both Berar and Nagpore, would have enforced instant compliance.

But prosperity will be delayed in the Central Provinces till the railway unites their two capitals, Jubbulpore and Nagpore, with the coast. The position of the line at present is this: by the end of this working season the main line from Bombay up the Thull Ghaut will be open to Bhosawul. There is the junction, from which one branch runs to Oomrawutee, 134 miles, and on to Nagpore, 128 miles more. A good deal of the earthwork on this branch is completed. The engineer is able and earnest, and the contractors, Messrs. Lee and Watson, are energetic. But there is such a want of labour, that ever recurring difficulty in India, that it is not expected the line will be open to Oomrawutee for two years, and to Nagpore for three. The prospect is still less hopeful on the main Calcutta line of 335 miles from Bhosawul to Jubbulpore. A branch line, by the Baglee Ghaut, will connect Indore with the trunk railway. If money is wanted, no expense should be spared to open the line to Oomrawutee, at least in a year. Meanwhile, we have this consolation, that Bhosawul is on the edge of the cotton districts. Roads should be made to it from all points at once. Why not try tram-roads for the next season's crop?—Friend of China.

THE ASSAM RAIDS AND THE NEW POLICE.

The Cossya revolt on the north-eastern frontier has been checked by Major Richardson, who relieved the party of 60 sepoy besieged in the Jowai stockade, 50 miles from Cherrapoonjee, and on the 26th January carried the stockaded village of Jalong, on the top of a hill 1,000 feet high. Four of our sepoys were badly wounded by musketry, and several received severe bruises from the stones which the savages rolled down from above on the besiegers. Jalong is the strongest of the stockaded posts, of which several remained to be taken at the date of the last despatch. The raid of the Cossyas has ruined the Christian converts of Cherrapoonjee. On the advance of the insurgents, all the native Christians found refuge in the stockade, except one, whom they carried off to Jalong on his refusal to join them. One poor fellow writes from Jowai to the missionary—"Sleep is out of the question, and we are without either food or drink. We do not expect to live much longer. To write this note I feel is more than I can do, but I wish to let you know the state in which we are, that your prayers may ascend in our behalf." When Major Richardson relieved the party, he describes them as "straitened for food and worn out with constant watchfulness." On the night of the 24th Jan. the mob, numbering some 4,000 savages, burned down the little chapel, the mission-house, and the houses of the converts, because they had shown their loyalty by helping the sepoys. Some seventy Christians have thus been deprived of their all. Their houses, crops, cattle and clothing were burned or driven off before their eyes.

The increased force we have sent will be sufficient to secure quiet, and then the work of civilisation must begin. We are told the Lieutenant-governor is in no way responsible for the defenceless state in which, notwithstanding repeated warnings, this revolt has found Assam. Those who hold this opinion overlook the fact that the preliminary to all the arrangements of Colonel Balfour and Mr. Laing for the military defence of India is a decision as to the strength of the trained constabulary necessary for each province. That settled, as it has been in every part of India except Bengal, the number and cost of the sepoy and European army follow. This applies with special force to a country like Eastern Bengal, where all that is wanted is a body of police who will do for Assam what the "Peelers" have done for Ireland. Had Mr. Grant obeyed the orders of the Supreme Government for the embodiment of this force fifteen months ago, we are warranted in saying that the military strength necessary for Assam would have been at once fixed on, and he himself would probably have been as jubilant over the successes of the new force as Mr. Edmonstone is, though the latter stuck to his military police with a pertinacity only second to Mr. Grant's. Until this constabulary question is settled—and the committee's report has been before Mr. Grant for months—no permanent arrangements will be made for the military defence of the North Eastern frontier.—Friend of India.

THE COOLIES AND THEIR COUNTRY.

The emigration evil is reaching such a height, and the real facts have been hitherto so overlaid by misrepresentations, that definite action on the part of Government is required. The very first day that the Imperial Legislature sat in public, Mr. Ritchie introduced a Bill providing that the Emperor of the French shall be at liberty to revive the slave trade on the Mozambique coast, if the Governor-general thinks fit to protect injured coolies by stopping their emigration to the French colonies. The so-called protection on our part of our most ignorant native subjects thus becomes a farce, for if a revival of the slave trade is the penalty of our exercising this right, we will rather wink at oppression. We know that there is not a member of the Legislature, from the Governor-general downwards, who does not secretly hate the measure he is told to vote for, and who does not submit to the humiliating necessity of registering the decrees of the Emperor of the French with as bad a grace as to the Mysore grant. We do not expect them to pause in passing this Bill, any more than to rescind all the Acts permitting emigration to the seven colonies whose agents prow about the villages of Bengal. But we ask the executive no longer to shut their eyes to the facts which we have derived from witnesses so trustworthy as the Rev. Drs. Duff and Mullens, who have just returned from a tour over the plateau of Chota Nagpore. If Government think settlers prejudiced witnesses, they may give credence to the statements of the most devoted and intelligent of our missionaries, supported as the facts are by the evidence of their own high officials.

During the two years ending May last 30,513 natives of Bengal left Calcutta, two-thirds for the Mauritius and the rest for the West India colonies. Of these the greater number were Coles—hence the name coolies—the aborigines of the hills which stretch from Rajmahal on the Ganges to the frontiers of Nagpore in Central India. Bengalis proper, seldom emigrate. So many men, women, and children—ignorant, and therefore fearing an unknown country; timid, and consequently unwilling to encounter the perils of the sea; with more than the Maori's love of land and so hating to exile themselves from their ancestral soil—would not leave for a distant colony if they were happy at home. Taking the Coles as the chief emigrating race, let us ask the question, why do they leave? If we turn to their country we find that in Chota Nagpore, which is a plateau some 3,000 feet above the sea to the south of the Trunk Road at Burhee, and in Singhbhum and Palamow, they number with the allied indigenes some half a million. This is the source of the emigration supply. The people are devil worshippers, practice the arts of witchcraft, and live and believe just like the most degraded tribes of Central Africa. It was not till 1833 that we finally reduced the wild tribes under our administration, being forced thereto by a series of disturbances the previous year. We found naked savages feeding on garbage, murdering children and witches, and worshipping devils, but withal having a basis of simple truth and unsophisticated honesty in their character. Up to 1857 we seemed to have made them a race of industrious and half civilised peasantry. In 1856, the Berlin missionaries, who had been planted for five years among them, found their labours suddenly followed by a wide-spread desire for Christian baptism. At Ranchee, the chief station, a church was built. The movement became as remarkable as that of the Karens of Burmah, and the missionary world rang with the news of "thousands" of savages converted as their brother Shanars of Tinnevely had been. There has been exaggeration regarding the missionary success, but the facts are remarkable enough. On the plateau of Chota Nagpore alone, which is nearly a square of fifty miles, there are 250 villages more or less Christianised, and 2,500 persons have been baptised since the mission began. The Mutiny in 1857 led the Coles to believe that our power was extinct, and they at once returned to their old trade of witch-killing. The magistrate thus describes the scene:—"Whole families were put an end to in some instances. The destroyers issuing forth in the dark, and commencing with the wizard and his household, went from house to house, and before the morning dawn they had succeeded in extinguishing, as they supposed, the whole race." The relapse into barbarism was arrested by the restoration of order, and the upward progress of the Coles at this moment affords another instance of the civilising influences of our rule, like that of the Sonthals and Karens. Major Dalton, the Commissioner, is beloved by the natives. He sits with them at the Lutheran service in their church, and his subordinates emulate his example in their paternal care of the people.

Yet this is the tribe which the prowling native agent of the colonies enters, these are the men who by lies and bribes are induced to emigrate. The wiles of what the last Bengal report justly calls the "unscrupulous native recruiters," however, would not be effectual if other causes did not exist. The Cole so loves his land that cases occur in which the grand-children of emigrants, born in the colonies, return and claim their ancestors' patches of ground in our courts. It was the character of our revenue laws that made the Coles rise in 1857. They love Major Dalton, but they hate a system of administration which will not in all cases secure their land for them justly or unjustly. Yet they emigrate, and the "heimweh" seizes them as it does the reckless Celt or the mountain-reared Teuton. The cause is found in the oppression of their zemindars. The Rajah of the plateau not only himself squeezes the sponge, but, his ancestor having managed to introduce a drop of Rajpoot blood into the stock, he considers himself a Hindoo, and surrounds himself with subtle Bengalis who oust the savage Coles. He oppresses the ticcadars, or small talookdars, they crush the cultivators, and progress is impossible. In despair the Cole abandons the home of his fathers, but looks forward to his return, and when he dies in the far colony leaves his land as a heritage to his children's children, and tells them to return and claim it. In this state of despair the "unscrupulous native recruiter" finds him, the ten or fifteen glittering rupees tempt him, and he sells himself, deluded by a lie. So many Coles have gone to the Mauritius, and so many comparatively have returned, that they are familiar with "Maurich," as they call it. There are seven colonies bidding for victims, and the agents of all tell the Cole he will be sent to the Mauritius. Hoping to see friends who have preceded him the Cole consents, and finds himself in Bourbon, under a different Government, or in far Trinidad. Not unfrequently members of families are separated, and all the horrors of the slave mart are repeated on British soil. But, we are told, the emigrants who return come loaded with money, and civilised by contact with our colonial institutions and Christianity. How this can be so we see not when the Indian Government, in its tender regard for the ryots it sells into quasi-slavery, will not allow the colonial authorities to educate their children because it is not in the bond. The Mauritius inspector of schools complains of this in his last report. To convince themselves that it is not so, Government had better ask Major Dalton, the commissioner. He has often interfered to prevent the native slave-dealers from deluding the people. He will tell the authorities that the Cole who returns with money from the colonies is squeezed of three-fourths of it by his zemindar, and spends the rest in riot, living like a beast till it is done, and then returning to earn more. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin?"

The emigration of the Coles is thus due to only one cause, our inability to govern their country. In Chota Nagpore there are all the materials for making a prosperous people—soil, climate, a simple though degraded race, missionaries, and conscientious officials, but our system of administration permits gross oppression. So far as this special case is concerned Major Dalton should be empowered to introduce changes such as those by which Mr. Yule civilised Sonthalism. Besides this our remedy is plain. It will not interfere with the free will of the Coles, though we might raise the plea that they are ignorant babes who should be protected even against their own will. Nor will it clash with the wishes of the English authorities, who have made a convention with Louis Napoleon, and wish to repeat it in the case of the Spanish slavers of Cuba, nor with those of the colonial governors, who have induced our Legislature to pass so many Acts. Cut off the supply. Allow no coolie to leave India who cannot present a certificate that he and the "unscrupulous native recruiter" have appeared before a magistrate, who is satisfied that there is no delusion on the part of the victim. It is too late to check the evil in Calcutta. The salary of the protector of emigrants, for this end at least, is thrown away. If, being properly governed, the Coles or any other race will emigrate, this plan will secure their doing so intelligently. If the choice of Bourbon, Mauritius, Assam, or Pegu be placed before them, it is most probable they will not prefer the first. And in any case, brother will not be separated from brother, nor father from son. But England must first be satisfied that she is not driving her own dark children from her bosom by misgovernment.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DELHI MEMORIAL MONUMENT is to be constructed on a spot near the Fagan Battery, just above the Sammy House. It is a magnificent situation, and when completed "the memorial" standing some twenty feet high, will be a conspicuous and interesting object in the landscape, to travellers by road and rail. In a few weeks Delhi will be lighted with gas, St. James' Church being the first building so illuminated.

NATIVE SURGERY.—Meer Ushruddin Ally, Sub-Assistant Surgeon and Lecturer on the Practice of Physic in the Agra Medical College School, has published a "Handbook of Midwifery" in Oordoo. The development of native ability in the profession of medicine promises to be quite as remarkable as in law.

LAHORE GOVERNMENT SCHOOL.—The annual distribution of prizes and scholarships of the Lahore Government School took place on the 25th January. In the absence of Sir Robert Montgomery, Mr. McLeod presided. The school, which consists of two departments, contains about 150 scholars. The upper department of sixty boys contains almost every youth of rank in Lahore, as well as a few from the surrounding districts. Most of these boys seek education for its own sake. The lower department contains about ninety scholars, who pay eight annas a month each. The progress of the boys was satisfactory, but not so much so as that of the upper department. The Arnold Medal, struck in memory of the late Mr. M. D. Arnold, the first Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab, was not ready, but when received from England it would be bestowed on F. S. Jamalooddeen, the first boy in the school.

MODEL TRUSTEES.—The Oudh Gazette states that the authorities and trustees who have charge of the estate of the late General Martin have granted an extra thousand rupees a month to the Lucknow College which bears his name. The same should be done in Calcutta. We are convinced that an inquiry into the extent and value of his estate, would allow of its yielding much larger sums for the extension of education to a poorer class of Christian boys and girls.

CAPTAIN A. P. ORR, Talookdar of Mithowlee, is appointed Honorary Assistant Commissioner. He is vested with the powers of a Subordinate Magistrate of the First Class, and of a Deputy Collector within his own estates, and the estates of Captain William Hearsey, Mrs. Rose, and Rae Toolaram.

THE INDIGO PLANTERS AND THEIR MALICIOUSERS.—During the height of the Indigo controversy the Hindoo Patriot charged Mr. A. Hills, of Kishnagur, with having carried off and violated a native woman named Hurromoney. The Missionaries, Messrs. Long and Bonwetsch, had brought similar charges of a vague character in which no names were mentioned, and the plaintiff was the more anxious in this case to have the truth known. He brought a suit against the printer and editor for defamation of character before Baboo Tarrucknath Sen, Principal Sudder Ameen of the 21-Pergunnahs, and laid the damages at Rs. 10,000. Mr. Bell, the barrister, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Montrou for the defendants. Finally, the following apology was agreed to:—"The defendants withdraw the whole of the charges contained in the articles complained of, offering, so far as the personal charge of rape is concerned, the amplest apology; as to the residue of the charges, admitting that they were erroneous, but not that they were published maliciously. A verdict to be entered for the plaintiff with nominal damages, but costs to be paid to the plaintiff upon the amount of suit as brought."

THE HOOGHLY.—Mr. Longridge, the Mutlah Railway Engineer, lately read a valuable paper on the Hooghly and the Mutlah before the Institution of Civil Engineers. He divided the Hooghly into three sections—the part in which navigation is not dangerous, from Calcutta to Fulta-house, a distance of about thirty-four miles, with an average high water width of 1,300 yards; it consists of a series of deep but narrow channels; that in which the James and Mary sand has caused a permanent decrease of depth from Fulta house to Culpee, a distance of twenty-four miles, the high-water width widening out from one mile to two and three-quarter miles. The third is from Culpee to the Sandheads, a distance of thirty-seven miles; the river widens out from two and three-quarter miles at Culpee, to seventeen miles at Saugor Point. This section contains many dangerous places and shows a "serious shoaling of the water, and a prolongation seawards of the tails of the sands below, to an extent of not less than six miles, within the last fifty years." Mr. Longridge estimates that the quantity of fresh water passing into the Hooghly from the Ganges through the Nuddea rivers is upwards of 60,000 million cubic yards per annum; and the opinion has been stated that the amount brought down by the Damoodah and Roopnarain rivers is at least equal to that from the Nuddea rivers. Also, that as the great bulk of this fresh water passes down during the inundations, when the rivers of Bengal are highly charged with sediment, not less than 30,000,000 cubic yards of solid matter are carried down each year into the river and sea channels of the Hooghly below Calcutta, and an equal quantity from the Damoodah and Roopnarain rivers, so that 78,000,000 cubic yards of solid earth are probably deposited yearly in the Hooghly and its estuary. On the seacoast of the Delta there are eight openings, each of which has in turn probably served as the chief mouth of the Ganges. Of these, the Hooghly is the most westerly, and the Mutlah—the third from the west—is about forty miles to the eastward of the Hooghly.

DEATH OF MR. HAY TWEEDDALE STEWART.—Death has just removed a good and noteworthy old man from among us. At the Oriental Club, at Cheltenham, Bath, Asia Minor, and all the other haunts of the old Indian tribes, there will be real sorrow among the few left who knew him in his prime, when they hear that Hay Tweeddale Stewart, formerly of Mirzapore, and for the last ten or twelve years Collector of Tolls at Jungypore, is no more. He died on Thursday evening, February 15th, at the age of sixty-seven years, after a continuous residence in this country of upwards of forty-six years. He was the chief among the men by whose energy Mirzapore rose from its native insignificance to become for a time the great depot of the trade of Central India, his fortunes rising with it, and sharing, to some extent, its decline, when the competition of America stole away the once great Indian cotton trade, the signal for the revival of which he lived to see. Hay Tweeddale Stewart was the only lineal male descendant of the Stewarts of Appin, and we have heard that he got his name in the following manner:—His father, Allan Stewart, lived in the Island of Shuna, in Appin, at the time that his youngest child Hay was born, and the Marquis of Tweeddale was the proprietor of a great portion of the lands which would have been Allan's own had they still belonged to the Appin family. Allan proposed to the marquis that the child should be called by the latter's name, and asked his lordship to come to the baptism, and stand sponsor for the child. To this the marquis agreed; but Allan, who was a furious Jacobite, so much so that he could not bear to hear the sound of "George," neglected to ask the marquis's name until the christening party were met, and the clergyman ready to perform the ceremony. Allan then asked what was the name, and, to his horror, the marquis gave him the hated "George!" Allan started, and exclaimed, "George! George!! George!!! There shall never be a George in my family, if the child should never be baptised!" It was then agreed to call the child by the marquis's surname, Hay, and Tweeddale was added to make the name full.—Englishman.

MR. MACKINTOSH BALFOUR.—An address and testimonial were presented on February the 7th to Mackintosh Balfour, Esq., by the European and native members of the Calcutta branch of the Agra and United Service Bank, on the occasion of his leaving India for London to assume the general management of the bank. The testimonial consisted of an elegant silver epergne, manufactured by Messrs. Hamilton and Co., and bearing a suitable inscription. The presenter alluded earnestly to the great personal esteem entertained towards Mr. Balfour by all those with whom he had been associated, and the unvarying urbanity and courtesy shown by him in all his business relations. Mr. Balfour, in reply, feelingly acknowledged the hearty co-operation he had received in the performance of his arduous duties, and alluded to the importance of maintaining a spirit of mutual esteem and cordiality in order to the successful conduct of business. He expressed his high gratification, and said that the occasion was one of which he should ever be proud.

THE EX-KING OF OUDH.—The state of indebtedness of the ex-King of Oudh has been forced upon the notice of the Viceroy, and a representation has been made by the Governor-general in Council to his Majesty, pointing out to him the ruin to himself and family which must result from a continuance of the reckless course of extravagance pursued by him, urging upon him the necessity of immediate retrenchment, and delicately suggesting to him the natural results of disregard on his part to the advice tendered. We should have little hope of the advice being followed, or of the slightest heed being paid to the friendly warning given, were it not for the intimation with which the Viceroy winds up his message, that, taking into consideration the extreme liberality of the allowance made to the ex-King, the Government will not in any way interfere to extricate him from the difficulties he is fast encompassing himself with. It is just possible the warning may have some effect, but it would have been far better to have commanded reform and to have insisted upon the disbanding of the ruffianly hordes assembled at Garden Reach, and who are the main cause of the straits to which his ex-Majesty of Oudh is fast being reduced.

COL. P. HARRIS, formerly of the 70th N.I. and lately commanding the 101st Foot—1st Bengal Fusiliers—at Mooltan, is brought upon the strength of the Brigade establishments, and ordered down to succeed to the Barrackpore command, in the room of Brigadier J. Macdonald, who is about to proceed to Europe on furlough.

LIEUT.-COL. D. REID, of the Artillery, and at present third-class superintending engineer of the Assam circle, has been appointed to succeed Capt. W. S. Trevor, of the Engineers, as garrison engineer, Fort William, and directed to join without delay; Captain W. E. Marshall officiating until his arrival.

COAL.—Along correspondence in the official supplement of the Gazette, which some precis writer might have reduced to a paragraph, shows that Sir C. Wood sanctions the decision of the Supreme Council, that as a matter of policy it will be wise in the Government to relinquish its right to derive a revenue from coal in unsettled estates being private property, or to include in any future settlement of the land revenue of any such estate the produce of coal mines as an asset thereof.

WASTE LANDS IN THE DEHRA DHON.—The Superintendent of Dehra Dhoon publishes in The Hills a rough estimate of the waste lands there. There are available to the public 46,956 acres, and reserved as forest land for the State 141,790 acres. A visit from Dr. Cleghorn, now reporting on the whole subject of forest tracts in North India, would decide if it is necessary to reserve this large area. In three months the whole will be fully examined, and the result accurately known.

MYSTERIOUS.—A detachment, consisting of a battery of Artillery, a Wing of H.M.'s 13th Light Infantry, and Native Infantry details, has been ordered from Morar, under command of Lieut.-Colonel Knatchbull on service; they march on Monday. It would be premature at present to mention publicly their destination, as the mention of it might defeat, at any rate would not further, the object in view. These things, however, are generally pretty well known in the bazaars; still it is as well to be on the safe side. The Rajah of Dholpoor has been at Agra for some time. His camp is now pitched at Shahgunje. He will remain there until an inquiry now being conducted under the order of Major-general Lawrence, Governor-general's Agent in Rajpootana, into disputes that have arisen in his territories, has been concluded, and the orders of Government passed thereon.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SAUGOR COMMAND.—In consequence of the Saugor and Nerbudda territories being again occupied by Madras troops, Brigadier Travers, just appointed to the command there, will of course have to vacate his post in favour of a Madras officer. We hope to see some energetic and experienced officer appointed as Brigadier to the command of our South-eastern frontier, which in future ought never to be without a vigilant eye, and a strong hand to watch and keep in order the turbulent savages whose inroads are a slur upon our government, and a disgrace to our boasted military powers.

LIEUT.-COL. W. F. NUTHALL.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has conferred upon Lieut.-Col. W. F. Nuthall, lately commanding the Pegu Light Infantry, which he raised, the command of the 3rd regiment of N.I., now at Seetapore, in Oudh. This appointment has been made in recognition of Lieut.-Col. Nuthall's past services and energetic character, which his Excellency expresses himself glad in being able to reward. Lieut.-Col. Nuthall is one of the officers who was included in Sir Charles Wood's intended list of retirements and pensions; but not feeling inclined to relinquish the military career he declined to go. He has never seen his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; had no interest whatever with him; only applied to him for employment about the beginning of the month; and got an answer and an appointment by return of post.

VAN AMBURGH OUTDONE.—"An aged Faqeer," says a native paper, "has now been residing in a mosque of his own construction at Phoolgoaria, near Dacca, for some considerable time. Phoolgoaria is a dense jungle, the abode of numbers of wild and ferocious animals. But the Faqeer has so tamed them, and possesses such an influence over them, that it would not be amiss to call him a supernatural being. We have been told by friends on whom we can rely that tigers, snakes, alligators, and other animals are entirely under his command. He also swallows poison every day, and possesses wonderful powers." We should say so, swallowing poison daily being by no means a natural accomplishment. This holy and highly gifted being is, we understand, in receipt of a good income, Rs. 100 per month, from the neighbouring Zemindars, which, as in duty bound, he distributes to the poor of his locality.

SIR HUGH ROSS.—A very agreeable contrast (says the Delhi Gazette) is afforded by our present Commander-in-Chief's way of doing business compared with that of his predecessors. He is expected at Mooltan on the 23rd Feb. He started on the 1st from Peshawur for Kohat via Cheerat, to which place he went for the purpose of inspecting the locality selected as a sanatorium for British troops. He stayed at Kohat a day, inspected the Punjab troops stationed there, and then continued his trip, accompanied by Brigadier-general Chamberlain and Staff, Captain Strutt, A. D. C., Lieutenant-colonel Sarel, Deputy-adjutant-general of Cavalry, and Major Roberts of the Quarter-master-general's department. His route lay through Bunnoo, Dera Ismael Khan, to Dera Ghazee Khan, and he inspected the troops of all arms belonging to the Punjab Irregular force, at all the stations on his way, and expressed himself highly satisfied with their efficiency. And when our readers know that he has been doing this, riding fifty miles a day, they will agree that he has displayed an amount of energy and vigour to which we have been altogether unaccustomed in our Commanders-in-chief of late years. Meantime, the flying camp, which is accompanied by Colonel Gawler, Captain Ellis, A. D. C., the Military Secretary, and the Chief's medical adviser, goes by quiet marches to Ferozepore and thence to Umballa. At the latter place it is expected his Excellency will stay some days inspecting the troops and brigading. The bulk of the camp is going down by slow marches to Mooltan, at which place it will be about the 27th.

THE NANA'S SUPPOSED BROTHER.—We (Englishman) had intimation the other day that the Rajah of Kooch Behar had applied to Government for permission to visit Calcutta with a considerable retinue, composed of a rabble of horse, foot, and artillery. It is not usual in the present day for native potentates, of even more importance than the Kooch Behar Rajah, to move through the British territories with an armed force; the prestige of the British name and power being considered sufficient to secure to all visitors immunity from attack. At the same time that we heard of the proposed advent of the Rajah of Kooch Behar, we were likewise informed that he had arrested and sent into the authorities at Rajshaye a reputed younger brother of the infamous Nana Sahib of Bithoor. Having performed an act of such loyalty and fealty to the British Government, he was not unnaturally anxious to make the most of it, and, in the hope that this evidence of good feeling and loyalty on his part might secure for him some honourable distinction or material advantage, he purposed paying a visit to the seat of the British Government. We have now, however, a clue to the conduct of the Rajah in both instances, which shows that conduct to have been far more in accordance with our preconceived opinions of his loyalty to the British Government than the ostensible causes for the recorded action and intention. It appears that the prisoner sent in to the Rajshaye authorities was no stranger to the Kooch Behar Rajah, nor was a knowledge of any offence he might have committed against the British Government or people newly acquired by him. The man forwarded to Rajshaye as a brother of the Nana's, appears, from his own account, to be a native of Rajdamnee Armithee Saegur, a village in the Zillah of Sultanpore, in Oudh, by name Subdial Dhoby. He is described as a man of evidently good birth, of somewhat haughty mien, of a fair complexion, well made, and with remarkably small hands and feet. He had been residing for some time in Kooch Behar with a man of the name of Juddonauth, having arrived there from Calcutta, where he had been staying in the Burra bazaar with Konjall, the mahajun or banker of the Ranchee Rajah. During his residence in Kooch Behar, on the occasion of a visit paid by him to a temple, he met with one Dokul Assidee, whom he had previously known, during his residence in Sultanpore, to be a servant of the Nana of Bithoor. It at once struck him that the only cause for his being in Kooch Behar must be the presence there also of the Nana. The recognition appeared to be mutual, and in the course of conversation Dokul Assidee admitted that his master was a guest of the Kooch Behar Rajah. Subdial Dhoby expressing a desire to see a man so hated as was the Nana, he and Dokul proceeded to the Rajah's residence, and a man was there pointed out to him as the Nana, who he described as being of a fair complexion, with marked features and black hair, and tall, with a head large and disproportioned to his height and size. On questioning Dokul as to how the Nana had reached Kooch Behar, he heard that he had escaped from Nepal along the Terai, and on his nearing the territories of the Rajah he had sent Dokul to him to inform him of his presence. The Rajah at once organized a Shikar party, previously sending into Bhootan to purloin some elephants, which were seized and taken to the Nana and his followers. Mounted on these, the Nana and his people met the Kooch Behar Rajah, and the former accompanied him to his residence, the Rajah reporting to the Government his intended expedition, his return, and the results in the asserted capture of four elephants, which elephants his own people had purloined from the Bhootanese. Fearing, however, that the truth might become known to the Government, and being either aware of the fact, or having some suspicion that the man representing himself to be Subdial Dhoby had been implicated in some act of rebellion against the British Government, and with the evident desire of rendering the capture of more importance, he caused his arrest, and, loading him with fetters of silver, sent him in to the Commissioner of Rajshaye, where his silver fetters were removed under the orders of the Magistrate and returned to the Rajah, irons being substituted for them. This man is evidently of some note, but who or what he is, is as yet undecided. We do not credit his story about the Nana's presence in the Kooch Behar territory, though he supports it with certain references which are capable of investigation. In the meantime, further suspicions have been excited against the Kooch Behar Rajah from the fact that not long since a man passed through Rajshaye who represented himself as being on his way to Calcutta to present a petition to the Governor-General; he applied to the Rajah of Diggoputtee for an interview, but Prosonauth Roy very wisely referred him to the Magistrate; the man immediately disappeared and was traced to Kooch Behar. It has subsequently transpired that he was a Shahzadah of the House of Delhi, and it is believed that he is one with the individual now representing himself to be Subdial Dhoby.

ASSAM.—The advance of civilisation in Assam is being followed by the same results there as in every country in which the white man has placed his foot. As the white man advances, the man of darker hue retires, occasionally spurred on to resist an invasion which is fast depriving him of the lands he and his people have held for centuries. The half-naked savage collects his forces, and endeavours to recover what he has lost, but his white opponent is too powerful, and rapidly acquires so firm a footing on the soil he has usurped, that he defies all the efforts of the dispossessed. Defeated, and hopeless of successfully opposing the advance of those whose progress, however slow it may be, is nevertheless certain, the Kookies have gradually withdrawn further and further into their hills, until at length they are well nigh dispossessed of all they once owned. Work they will not for the stranger, and the very land on which they once raised the scanty crops necessary for their support is now occupied by the tea plantations of the European. They are well nigh driven to extremities: remain as they are they cannot. If they turn south and direct their course into distant mountain ranges in that quarter, they will be placing themselves within the power of their traditional enemies the Sooshais, and this they fear to do. If they elect to remain on what is left to them of the soil of their birth-place, they must work in the planters' fields for the means of support. They are averse to. They hate the European with a cordial hatred, and nothing but absolute starvation or the prospect of acquiring the ardent spirits he sometimes pays them in, and under which they forget their real or imaginary wrongs, will ever induce them to perform an hour's work for him. There is then but one alternative: for them to leave their loved mountains, and settling in the peaceful plain, to devote their energies to the cultivation of the soil. As mountaineers the idea of the husbandman's calling is distasteful in the extreme. And yet it is but a choice of evils. If their fear of the Sooshais is such as to deter their wandering in that direction, they must either take up with the planter and labour on his estates for hire, or else, taking land of the Government, settle in the plains to agricultural pursuits. In following the latter course they have the example set them by the hill tribes to the eastward, who, from being like themselves an unsettled, nomadic race, have taken up farms in the low country, and having possessed themselves of cattle, ploughs, and homesteads, are rapidly becoming industriously thrifty tillers of the soil. If they do this they will not only benefit themselves but the country, whereas at the present time they are as mischievous as a swarm of locusts, causing destruction to valuable timber and making periodical raids into the plains, ravaging and destroying everything falling in their way. At the present time they are far from agreeable neighbours, but they are fast being reduced to such straits that the Government might with advantage step in, and possibly, by offering them land in the plains on somewhat easy terms, transform a restless nomad race into a quiet useful agricultural people. It is worth the experiment. At present they are entirely useless, but are destructive; with judicious treatment they are capable of being made the reverse.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA ADDRESS OF CONDOLENCE.—On Monday, the 10th February, a meeting was held in the Town-hall for the adoption of an address to her Majesty the Queen on the occasion of the loss she, her subjects, and the country at large had experienced in the removal from his sphere of usefulness of H.R.H. the Prince Consort, in which her faithful and loyal subjects of all classes and creeds in India offered their sincere and heartfelt condolence to their Queen in her affliction. The meeting was largely attended, and was addressed by the Archdeacon, the Hon. W. Ritchie, Mr. Bullen, and others. The address adopted was as follows:—"To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty. May it please your Majesty. We your Majesty's loyal subjects, European and Native residents of Calcutta, crave leave to lay before your Royal presence this expression of our heartfelt sorrow for the irreparable loss which your Majesty, the Royal family, and the whole Empire have sustained by the death of your Majesty's late illustrious Consort. Though we are placed at a distance from the scene of the labours of the departed Prince, we yield to none of your Majesty's subjects in the sincerity of our appreciation of his exalted character, and the depth of our sympathy in your Majesty's bereavement. It is our earnest prayer that your Majesty may long be spared to rule over us, and that your Majesty's reign may, notwithstanding this great calamity, continue to be blessed as it has hitherto been."

DR. HAYES, in medical charge of the convict settlement at Port Blair, has fallen under the displeasure of Government, and has received a severe admonition from the Governor-general in Council. It appears that, sometime since, a convict was found, under somewhat suspicious circumstances, dead in his hut. Suspicion appeared to attach to another convict, but no evidence of the crime was obtainable. Under these circumstances, and, we imagine, under a decided impression of the man's guilt, the gaol surgeon adopted the highly objectionable plan of endeavouring to extort confession by threats. The fact of his having done so became known to the Government, which has resulted in Dr. Hayes being informed of the Governor-general's displeasure at his conduct, and he has been warned that practices which have been in England condemned cannot be resorted to in India, and that any attempt on the part of an officer of the Government to elicit confession of crime, or complicity, by using any undue influence over the suspected individual, is not only inadvisable but highly reprehensible. The conduct of the convicts is said to be particularly good, and their general health has improved very much under the able treatment of Dr. Hayes. As the means for clearing the large Andaman are matured, and the work is put in progress, it is anticipated that the Andamanese may be rendered useful. They are becoming more reconciled to our being in their vicinity, while they have an evident dread of us. They are becoming convinced that punishment only follows on overt acts of their own; and that they, provided they give no cause for the reverse, are invariably well treated. It is believed that the Andamans may be made valuable for the growth of spices.—Englishman.

DARJEELING.—In consequence of information received by the Officiating Superintendent at Darjeeling, two strong guards have been moved into the station, and one of twenty-five rank and file sent down to the Runjeet river on the 6th Feb. The European invalid and effective men have all had arms and ammunition issued to them. The Darjeeling authorities, notwithstanding the confidence they effect to repose in the Sikkim Rajah, appear to have considered it advisable to detach a party to watch the fords of the Runjeet. It is scarcely likely that the Bhootanese will ascend to Darjeeling, but it is quite possible, if not checked by the presence of troops, that they may make a descent upon Titalyah, Rungpore, Punkabaria and other unguarded places in the plains, and carry off with them all they can lay hands on. The Englishman's Darjeeling correspondent, writing on the 7th February, considers it surprising that no notice had been taken of an application made for troops some ten days previous. In all probability troops are now in position in the localities most requiring their presence, as we know that orders were telegraphed to Dinapore on the 6th Feb., to lose no time in despatching the wing of the 10th and a party of the 38th in the required direction. It will be highly desirable to have Titalyah well watched for some time to come, for during next month the annual fair will take place, and as it is usually much resorted to, the temptation offered by the loot obtainable by a successful raid may prove more than the Bhootanese may be able to withstand. To prevent anything of the kind, troops should be quartered in and about the place in sufficient numbers to render the success of such a proceeding on the part of the Bhootanese impossible. It was feared that the daks to and from Darjeeling, Titalyah, and Rungpore might be stopped, and supplies cut off; but should this have taken place the advance of troops from Dinapore would ere this have reopened the road. From the same source we learn that Mamba Soobah, the murderer of Lieutenant Whish, is with the Bhootanese in some responsible position, and is supposed to be the prime mover and conductor of the present movement. He was at one time employed in the office of the Superintendent of Darjeeling, and was dismissed therefrom, but was subsequently re-instated. During the famine in 1860, after having possessed himself of a goodly armament of guns and rifles purchased in the station, he took his departure for Bhootan, without previously intimating his intention of so doing. Since then he has been resident in that country.

DALHOUSIE.—The Lahore Chronicle contains a short account of the present state of the station of Dalhousie. A good road has been constructed from Puthankote, and a road from Umritsur to that point is under construction. When this is completed the whole distance may be traversed in dak gharies. Houses are springing up. At present the station is simply a civil outpost. An assistant commissioner is stationed there during the season, to conduct a branch treasury and attend to other duties. "An agreeable mode of descending from Dalhousie to the plains is to embark on the rafts of timber on the Ravee and float down to Madhopore, which is five miles from Puthankote, and is the head-quarters of the Barea Doab Canal. Ladies and children have travelled safely in this manner."

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The Landholders' and Commercial Association have lately addressed the Government of Bengal on the subject of coolie emigration, pointing out the great drain upon the labouring population which the large annual exodus of coolies causes, and predicting that, when many of the large tracts of country now lying waste are cleared, as it is probable they soon will be under the operation of the liberal rules for the sale of such lands recently promulgated by Lord Canning, serious inconvenience will be felt for want of hands to cultivate them. The Association justly remark that from the encouragement afforded to coolie emigration by the Home Government, it would appear that an impression prevailed with them that India was overpopulated. In proof that such is not the fact, they adduce the serious difficulty felt by the few planters of Sylhet, Cachar, and Assam in procuring labourers for their gardens, a difficulty constantly increasing in proportion as a larger amount of land is brought under cultivation. It is to be feared that the representations of the Association will fail in effect. The manner in which coolie emigration is conducted has lately been undergoing a searching investigation, both by a committee appointed by the Bengal Government, and a special commissioner deputed by the Mauritius Government for the purpose, with a view to the removal of the abuses which have hitherto existed in the recruitment of coolies. Frequent instances have occurred in which a batch of coolies, who had been recruited for one colony, have been decoyed away before they could be safely housed in the depot by recruiting agents in the employ of another. To remedy this evil it is proposed that all recruiting agents shall be registered by the magistrate of the district in which they act, and that they shall wear a badge indicative of the colony in the employ of which they are. By this means they will be easily recognisable, and the magistrates of the district in which coolie recruitment is carried on are to be invested with power to punish any malpractices on their part by fine, or imprisonment, or both. Before despatching them to Calcutta, the recruiting agent will be required to bring the coolies he has collected before the magistrate, by whom a list will be made and transmitted to the protector of emigrants and to the agent of the colony to which they intend going. Numerous other minor suggestions have been made for ensuring the comfort of the coolie during his stay in the depot and during his voyage, which, if carried into effect, will result in securing to him much better proportionate treatment than is enjoyed by our European troops; not the least ridiculous point being that a much greater number of the latter will be, and in fact now are, allowed to be embarked on board our largest ships, than of the former. Some alterations were contemplated in the existing arrangements for the medical supervision of the coolies during their stay in the depôts, and for their examination before embarkation. At present each colony employs its own medical officer for this purpose: the Lieutenant-governor wished to dispense with these and to appoint one medical officer to be attached to the protector's office to perform the whole duty. The emigration agents, however, have shown so strong an objection to this measure that it will in all probability be abandoned. Apart from the natural desire of each colony to have its own medical officer, inasmuch as if there were only one surgeon, he might frequently be wanted at two or three different depôts at once, it is more than doubtful whether one individual would exercise efficient medical supervision over all the emigration depôts, which are widely distant from each other. The adoption of all these measures for the better regulation of emigration betokens little intention on the part of Government to discourage it, and that it has now become too rooted an institution to be easily done away with, or even contracted in its operations, without serious result to the prosperity of those of our colonies which have learnt to depend on India for their labour. The yielding of permission to the French to attract labour to their colonies from India was a great, and at present irremediable, error. It arose of course from the erroneous impression which the Landholders' Association attribute to Government, viz., that India was overpopulated; but once given it cannot well be withdrawn without giving grave offence to the French Government.

AMALGAMATION OF THE MEDICAL SERVICES.—The authorities have delegated to the Indian Government the accomplishment of two objects which must be attained before the amalgamation can be accomplished—those objects being, first, to get 180 of the senior Indian medical officers out of the way; and, second, to wind up and abolish the Medical Retiring Funds. These objects effected, the Indian medical officers will be taken over by the Horse Guards and the Director-general of the Army Medical Department in England, and fused into the Royal medical list; but with this, the real amalgamation of the two services, the Indian Government will have nothing whatever to do. All the ranks, grades, rates of pay, and conditions of promotion, &c., for the amalgamated services will be arranged in England, and cannot possibly appear before the end of the year; the measure which the Indian Government is about to bring forward being simply and nothing more than a scheme to pension off a hundred and eighty medical officers from the list of the three presidencies, and wind up the retiring funds, so as to make the real amalgamation possible for the home authorities.

THE ANDAMANS.—Letters from Port Blair, of recent date, advise us of unusual mortality among the convicts in that settlement, owing, it is said, to over employment; the strength of the convicts, upon the diet allowed, not being sufficient to enable them to stand any excessive tax upon it. Of late more than ordinary exertion has been required in the procuring and manufacture of material for building purposes. In Viper Island the mortality has been greater than on the Mainland, owing possibly to the greater exposure of the victims. While the male portion of the convict community has been subject to this loss the health of the female portion has been particularly good. They are employed chiefly on comparatively light work, such as grinding wheat, preparing soojie and flour, and in making soorkee. The conduct of the entire convict population is described as good. The Andamans have commenced exporting timber, a supply having been forwarded for use in the arsenal of Fort William; of its quality we are as yet ignorant, but as the Islands are known to possess forests of very valuable timber, we imagine that care has been taken in the selection of the specimens forwarded. Salt is likewise being successfully manufactured for the use of the settlement; indeed, Captain Haughton appears indefatigable in his endeavours to find profitable employment for the people under his charge, and to render the settlement as light a charge as possible on the imperial resources. The Governor-general we hear has approved of the manufacture of salt, and while acknowledging the value the timber may prove, has prohibited any excessive employment of the convicts.—Eng. Lishman.

MEERUT, Feb. 20.—All the troops composing this garrison had a grand review yesterday under Major-general Wheeler, which was a very imposing sight. I suppose you have heard that we are about to lose Mr. Sapte, Mr. Turnbull, and Mr. Williams, all three "big wigs" of the old School of Civil Servants. Doctor Corbyn and Doctor Cutcliffe will also go home immediately. Colonel Hammond, of the Artillery, has already left, and a number of other old residents contemplate leaving very soon, disgusted with the country. Mr. Forbes has arrived and relieved Mr. Sapte, but the successors to Messrs. Williams and Turnbull are unknown just now. Mr. Bickers, our very energetic Deputy-collector, has been promoted, and leaves as soon as Mr. G. Billings, Deputy-collector for Allypurr, arrives. Mr. Bickers was a very popular and meritorious servant of the Government, and his departure is much regretted. Doctor Stewart, from Roorkee, takes the place of Doctor Cutcliffe, and Doctor Hope, from Boolundshahur, will get the Meerut Central Jail.

CACHAR TEA PLANTATIONS.—So favourable a season as the present has hardly, if ever, been known before. In November a flood occurred, which laid the whole country under water, and thoroughly saturated the soil, which the October sun had well nigh baked to the consistency of a sun-dried brick. This caused the young plants to thrive amazingly, while those already in full bearing acquired renewed vigour, and deferred for a time putting on the yellow appearance peculiar to the tea plant when deprived of its needful supply of water. Since then occasional showers and heavy dews have kept up the healthy condition of the gardens, making the yield unusually large, and giving to the young plants a vitality which is showing itself in the early appearance of the buds that betoken an abundant crop. The young plants may, indeed, be said to be a season in advance of the usual growth, and will next year, in many instances, yield a crop which, under ordinary circumstances, could not have been expected for another year. So great is the confidence felt in the success of tea planting in Cachar, that upwards of fifty new grants of land have been applied for, and in many instances the applicants will have to wait some time ere they obtain them, the number of persons qualified to survey and classify land in Cachar being exceedingly limited. Cachar, it appears, is not exempt from the vexatious and dishonest practices of contractors so prevalent in Bengal. The Bengalee has carried with him into those remote parts his predilection for obtaining the largest amount of money at the smallest expenditure of labour to himself, which, in Bengal, has aroused the entire planting class. Tea planters complain that it is with difficulty, even with the strictest supervision, that they can obtain even half the work contracted and paid for. No matter what the work be, whether clearing jungle, building houses, preparing land for the reception of seed or seedlings, it is all the same; unless constantly watched and kept to their work, the people employed will execute their work so imperfectly as to entail no inconsiderable loss and ultimate expense on the planter. The labour of the manager of an estate is constant, and he is for ever subject to the annoyance of knowing himself to be cheated without the power of avoiding it. To such a pass has the advance system now reached, that without an advance no work can be obtained; and with it, the chances are ten to one against getting what has been contracted for.

CAPTAIN H. LEWIS, late Master Attendant and Naval Storekeeper at Rangoon, has been offered the command of the steamer Bentinck, whose fittings for a floating hospital at Kedgerie are fast approaching towards completion. The pay of the appointment has not yet been settled; and in these days of retrenchment and economy, people will not accept appointments with uncertain remuneration, depending upon the liberality of the Government to settle the allowances afterwards. The command of the new hospital-ship will be a position of irksome banishment, and if it requires any peculiar qualification and capacity, ought to be fairly paid. The same may be said of the medical appointments to the ship, which ought to carry with them rates of pay at least equal to similar appointments in military hospitals on shore.

MR. JOSEPH GRAHAM has been confirmed in his appointment of Standing-Counsel for the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.

CEDANT ARMA TOGÆ.—Sir Hugh Rose, in a General Order, requests officers commanding stations, &c., to bear in mind that the claims of the civil power to take up and investigate cases of non-military crimes of which native soldiers may be accused, or be suspected, are paramount, and that commanding officers are bound to surrender all natives accused, or suspected of such crimes, on the requisition of the police or magisterial authorities, who may have taken up the investigation of the crime in the course of the duties entrusted to them.

THE 8TH IRREGULAR CAVALRY, which was ordered to Cawnpore to relieve the 17th, has been stopped in the Punjab, and its march for the present countermanded.

IMPORTATION OF SALT.—The Harkaru notes "the great increase in the importation of salt from Great Britain to Indian ports during the past year. It appears that in 1859 there was exported 33,215 tons; 1860, 120,000 tons; 1861, 170,000 tons; or in the last year the quantity exported was five times greater than in the first period, with a proportionate diminution in England in the cost of freight. In 1859 and 1860, the rate averaged 35 shillings to 48 shillings per ton, whilst in 1861 it fell as low as 22 shillings."

THE MAHA RAJAH OF PATEEALAH, with upwards of 200 followers, proceeded to Saugor on Thursday, Feb. 13, for the purpose of performing certain religious ablutions at that holy place. The Railway Company's steamer Hourah was taken up by the Maha Rajah for the above-mentioned trip at the rate of 400 rupees per diem.

THE OUTRAM MEMORIAL.—The Government of India have not been backward at an opportunity for showing their appreciation of the services of Sir James Outram; and they have with graceful liberality presented to the Equestrian Statue Committee the necessary amount of gun metal for casting the statue which is intended to adorn Calcutta as a monument of those great actions which help to save India. The metal is, we hear, safe on board the Blenheim, and we trust that it will not be long before we hail its re-appearance in the similitude of him whose name will ever be beloved and revered by all Englishmen in India as a gallant soldier and a true gentleman.

FIRES.—There have been several suspicious fires in the North-West Provinces and at Gwalior of late. On the 19th January Lieutenant Shelly, at Meerut, had his house burnt down over his head. A few days afterwards a barrack, in which some officers were residing, at Morar, Gwalior, was burnt down; and on the evening of the 14th the European Infantry Mess House, at Cawnpore, was burnt down. The 46th Regiment of Foot had just taken possession, and were about to give a house-warming dinner, at the same time a farewell dinner to the departing Wing of the 54th Foot, but the flames burst forth as the guests were arriving. The cause of these fires does not seem to have been exactly ascertained, and it certainly has a suspicious look about it that they should have all happened about the same time, though at distant stations. Several other fires, at Cawnpore, Bareilly, and Fyzabad, had preceded this by a few weeks only.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting on the 17th Feb. raised the rates one per cent. all round, except on bills drawn on local banks, the rate for which is increased one-half per cent. only. We notice that the margin on loans on Government securities is considerably reduced. A new feature is observable in the Bank's ordinary statement of assets and liabilities, viz., an account for the General Treasury, the balance of which is in course of being transferred daily. This accounts for the large increase in the Bank's cash balance, but it is not available for banking purposes. After the 1st March next an amended form of account of the Bank's assets and liabilities will be issued. We are further informed that the directors have appointed the following gentlemen from the head office to be agents for the Banks, viz.:—Mr. George W. Moultrie at Mirzapore; Mr. Thomas Deyson at Patna; and Mr. William E. Carberry at Benares. Arrangements are being made to commence operations in those cities upon the 1st of March.

"THE GLORIOUS UNIFORM."—The attention of military officers at the Presidency has been emphatically called to G.O.C.C., dated February 12, 1859, by the general commanding the Presidency division, and it is probable, from the character of the latter officer, that the order in question will be enforced. It is to the effect that all officers frequenting or appearing in places of public resort, shall do so in uniform; and in the division order now issued it is explained, that by "places of public resort" is meant all public parties, public rides and promenades, and attendance at public religious worship. This order will, perhaps, create a little commotion and discussion at first; but there is room to question whether it has appeared before it is required, and provoked. The general aversion to military glare and uniform when off duty which prevails amongst British officers, in such strong contrast with those of the Continental armies, undoubtedly gives an air of calm, quiescent dignity to the well-known bravery of the former when occasion calls for its display; but, on the other hand, it is certain that the habit of repudiating the military dress may be carried too far, and that, as a rule, it is so in the British army in India. Foreign military officers visiting this country, knowing by what a vast military force it is held in grasp, invariably express surprise at the invisibility of the officers, as officers, and imagining that they pass a hybrid existence between occasional military duty and general civil employment, estimate their efficiency, and our power, accordingly. If a French, or Austrian, or Prussian general officer were to visit our promenade in the Auckland Gardens of an evening, and feeling surprised at the absence of anything like the due proportion of military uniforms and officers which he expected to see in the throng, were to ask for an explanation of the fact, he would indeed be surprised to hear that in our places of public resort the officers were concealed in, and represented by, pork-pies, wide-awakes, and beavers; frock and shooting coats, lounge, zephyr, and other paletots; trowsers of fifty different patterns, and boots of so many different descriptions, that it would take half a column to enumerate their castes and peculiarities; the whole set off with neckties of every colour under the sun, and some of them with, apparently, all mixed. We (Englishman) do not, when drawing this true and matter-of-fact picture, by any means desire that our officers should be inconvenienced and irritated by the eternal military uniform system of the French, Austrian, or Prussian armies; but we would like to see a medium discipline enforced in our service, and the exhibition which we have above attempted to describe put an end to here and elsewhere. General Showers has a high ideal of the honour and dignity of his profession, and is desirous of infusing the same estimate of it into the hearts of all officers under his influence and command; and his order now noticed is, we suppose, intended as a corrective to habits of dressing and appearing in public, which certainly convey the idea that British officers are ashamed of the "glorious uniform," and are determined to avoid wearing it whenever they can possibly do so. That this practice exists, every person in Calcutta knows; it should be corrected, and, to a certain extent, put an end to. The military strength and power of England should not, in any respect, be kept invisible and in the background, especially in India; and the habit of officers appearing ashamed of her uniform, whether they are so or not, is in this instance justly subjected to vigilant correction by authority. No interference whatever can, of course, be attempted, or contemplated, with private parties or private life; the order applies solely to officers appearing at places of public assembly and resort, where we shall now no more see officers appearing in varieties of dress and costume, such as conceal their honourable profession and confound them with any other class of society. Swords are to be worn with the uniform by officers appearing in public.

THE INDIAN POST-OFFICE.—The expenses of the Indian Post-office are increasing faster than the income. The receipt 1860-61 were 41,97,000 rupees, and in 1861-62 are estimated at 42,90,000 rupees, showing an improvement of only 93,000 rupees, while the disbursements this year are 54,73,000 rupees against 52,00,000 rupees in 1861, showing an increase of 2,74,000 rupees.

OUR EUROPEAN CONVICTS.—The long-vexed question of a gaol for European convicts in a healthy climate in India has been at last decided by a compromise between Madras and Bengal. The small Neigherry penitentiary at Jackatalla has room for only twenty-eight convicts from Bengal; and the larger prison, so long promised, will not, we believe, be built. Instead of this Bengal will have its own penitentiary on the breezy plateau of Hazareebagh, to the south of the Grand Trunk road at Burhee. The presence of a European regiment there will render the place secure, and the progress of tea planting, with the necessity for building a regular station, may give the convicts employment, and lead to the tentative introduction of the ticket-of-leave system. Should these two penitentiaries, a few years hence, be proved to have succeeded, we see not why the same plan should not be tried on the Andaman Islands, when made more healthy by being cleared of jungle, or on Curlew Island. The colony of Western Australia clamours for more English convicts. Though out of place on the continent of India, they might be well disposed of for our benefit as well as their own, on one of the islands in the bay.—Friend of India.

TREASURES OF THE DEEP.—As a sircar to Messrs. Whitney Brothers was returning to the shore from the ship Coringa, he saw an earthen pot, with the mouth covered over with a plate, entangled in the mooring chains of the vessel. Having, like the generality of his people, a horror of causing, or permitting the death, when avoidable, of any living creature, he had it taken on board his dinghee, when carefully and cautiously removing the plate in anticipation of seeing a snake issue therefrom, his astonishment was considerable at finding a living male child contained within the gurrak. He at once made the circumstances known to the officer of the ship, and Captain Kaley had the child taken on board and tended. Of the parentage of the child, there was of course no evidence, nor means of arriving at any.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.—Sir Robert Montgomery's visit to Calcutta has not borne the fruits he expected. It may true that the Punjab should not be debited with the cost of the three European regiments posted for sanitary and imperial purposes in its three hill stations. But Sir Robert is convinced that the irregular frontier force is far too costly, and that it may be reduced almost to the scale of 1856. It will probably be placed under the Commander-in-chief, and this important military training-school will be thus opened to the whole Indian army. We do not cry down the military expenditure of the Punjab any more than we complain of the cost of Malta and Gibraltar. But it must be confessed that of late the North-West frontier has shown a tendency to become to the empire rather what the Cape is to England, than either of those strongholds. It must not, however, be forgotten that Dost Mahomed's life cannot be calculated on for a day.—Friend of India.

A MISSING ATTORNEY.—"Some time back," says the Indian Empire, "there were unpleasant reports about the town, and in the newspapers, touching the disappearance of an attorney of the Supreme Court. It was generally known that the party alluded to was Mr. Thomas Buckland. We much regret to say that the time that has elapsed has not brought about an extrication from his difficulties, and a warrant was applied for and granted on a charge of forging and uttering a bill of exchange for Rs. 5,000. The prosecutor is also an attorney of the Supreme Court."

THE SANAWUR LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—The Court of Enquiry appointed by the Commander-in-Chief for the Lawrence Military Asylum at Sanawur, was nominated at the request of the Rev. W. J. Parker, the Principal, under the belief that a searching investigation into the state of the Institution, and the details of its management, was a thing to be welcomed.

COLONEL MACPHERSON, now commanding the 10th N. I., and formerly Sir John Lawrence's Military Secretary, is likely to be appointed Commissary-general of Bengal.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DILETTANTISM.—The Governor of Madras has the reputation of being a scientific dilettante. A medical officer in Pegu was recently employed to collect shells for him. The Godavery works are of no importance, but the empire will perish unless we know the longitude of Beypore. Accordingly the Madras astronomer has been instructed to find the cost of ascertaining the longitude of various points on the coast of India and along the line of railway, with reference to the Madras Observatory. On the West Coast, Bombay, Beypore, and Trevandrum are to be fixed. The latter station has been named with reference to the Observatory there established by the Rajah, and the aid of Mr. Brown, who is in charge, might, with the permission of His Highness, be obtained in furthering the object, when the line of telegraph has been carried down to Trevandrum. At present it stops at Cochin, on the East Coast, Calcutta, Cocanada, and Negapatam. —Friend of India.

THE JACKATALLA JAIL.—The Englishman's Ootacamund correspondent mentions the completion of the jail at Jackatalla. It may be in the recollection of our readers that Sir Charles Jackson called upon the Government for information on the subject of the jail on the Neilgherry Hills, and for an explanation as to the reason of their non-completion; as under the guarantee that proper provision should be made for them many prisoners had been sentenced to penal servitude in India, who, but for the assurance on the part of Government that accommodation would be provided for them in a jail on the Hills, would have been sentenced to transportation; the result being that the prisoners were subjected to bodily suffering, tending to serious curtailment of life from an incarceration in the Calcutta jail, such as was never contemplated or intended. The jail now completed will, we fear, hardly supply the space required to relieve the jail here—the entire, or nearly so, of the accommodation being required for penal servitude men sentenced by the Madras judges.

THE CINCHONA EXPERIMENT.—At the close of 1861 there were 8,013 Cinchona plants in the Ootacamund Garden. Mr. McIvor, the gardener, reports that the thickness of the plants is very remarkable, being in some instances nearly one-fifth of an inch, and in the smaller stems the average thickness of the bark considerably exceeds that of the wood. This fact Dr. Anderson would not credit, until it was demonstrated to him. The reason why the bark is so unusually thick, is the presence of a large number of healthy leaves exposed to bright light, which leaves, in forming the bark, throw back into it a large quantity of highly elaborated matter. The collection of plants from Java, received from Dr. Anderson, added to the stock 48 of the valuable Calisaya and four of the valuable and to us new species Lancifolia, also about 250 of the valueless species known as Lucumaeifolia of the Dutch and recently named Pahadicana by Howard. The Dutch plants were in good condition, but weak, having evidently been grown without sufficient light.

COTTON IN BURMAH.—Cotton still continues to flow into our port from the upper country. Last week another large boat load arrived with 280 bales on board. As each bale is estimated to weigh twenty-five viss, this would give seven thousand viss, according to Burmese weight. Turned into British weight, it amounts to about eleven tons and eight hundred weight. A place called Meen Chan, about 100 miles below the capital, seems at present to be the great cotton depot of the Burmese kingdom. In that cotton district the seed is said to be sown in the months of Wabso and Wahgoun, July and August, and in the months of Tauthalin and Thedin-Kyoot, September and October the following year, the crops are ready to be gathered. Formerly, all this cotton now brought down to Rangoon for export was carried into the Chinese province of Yunnan, with which there was once a very extensive trade. It was conveyed in large flat-bottom boats, as high up the Irrawaddy river as they could ascend; when it was transferred to the backs of mules, and thus taken across the mountains into China. For some five or six years past, this overland trade with Yunnan has been entirely suspended. A sort of internecine war has been waging there between rival Mahomedan sects, and the Chinese Government appear to be impotent for its suppression. A few years ago the Chinese were good customers of the Burmese, and maintained a brisk trade with the capital. Usually the Chinese caravans, composed of one or two hundred mules, would reach the royal city in the month of December, and after disposing of their goods, purchase or obtain by barter, cotton, salt and other articles, with which they returned. Unfortunately, nearly all communication is now stopped between Burmah and China. How the Chinese contrive to do without the supplies of cotton formerly furnished them from Burmah is a question of difficult solution.—Rangoon Times.

THE MADRAS ARMY.—The following is a table of the Madras army classified according to the creeds of its members:—

|                     | Native Commissioned officers. | Non-commissioned officers, drummers, rank and file. |
|---------------------|-------------------------------|---|
| Christians          | 15                            | 2,885   |
| Indo-Britons        | —                             | 1,304   |
| Mussulmans          | 795                           | 20,406  |
| Brahmins & Rajpoots | 101                           | 2,282   |
| Mahrattas           | 16                            | 1,265   |
| Telingas or Gentoos | 296                           | 11,621  |
| Tamils              | 123                           | 6,968   |
| Other Castes        | 17                            | 4,294   |

Our Serampore contemporary, to whom we are indebted for the foregoing analysis, says that "the Christians are for the most part Roman Catholics, but even that, low as is their Roman Catholicism, is some gain spiritually and a vast gain politically. The number of native Protestants is very small. The enlistment of papists dates back as far as the first formation of our sepoy corps, to a time when we had battalions of 'Topasses,' as men of that class were then called. They were enlisted, not from any views of policy, but simply because they were to be had, and the general commixture of castes originated in the same manner." The Friend then goes on:—"The number of Christian natives and East Indians is thus 4,189, or nearly twice the strength of Brahmans and Rajpoots. This is in itself a small army. The Roman Catholics go by the name of Romans as frequently as by that of Christians."

DEATH OF C. M. TEED, ESQ., MASTER IN EQUITY OF H. M. SUPREME COURT.—With feelings of deep regret we have to announce the death of the above named gentleman, which sad event, the result of a fit of apoplexy, took place rather suddenly, at his chamber in the Court House, on Tuesday night, Feb. 4th. Mr. Teed had been for two or three years in infirm health, but a short visit to Europe in 1860 greatly renovated him, and since his return last year he has been able regularly to discharge the duties of his office. He had come down from the Red Hills in the forenoon of Tuesday, for the purpose of transacting business, in which he was engaged when the fatal seizure occurred. Medical assistance was immediately summoned, and several of our ablest practitioners used their utmost endeavours to rally him from the attack, but all their skill was vain. He soon sank into a state of unconsciousness, which lasted until his death, about eleven o'clock at night. His funeral took place in St. Mary's Burial Ground last evening, and was attended by the Judges, all the legal profession in both its branches, and a great number of the principal residents of Madras. The late gentleman, who was a barrister of Lincoln's-inn, came to this country and was admitted to the local bar, of which he was the father, in 1828. Subsequently he became Clerk of the Crown, and eventually Master in Equity and Administrator-general. Although never remarkable for forensic oratory, Mr. Teed was universally admitted to be a sound and accomplished lawyer, more particularly in equity practice, and his opinions were always received, both by the Court and the profession, with very great respect. He dies deeply lamented by a wide circle of attached friends.—Athenæum and Statesman.

THE SAUGOR TERRITORY, made over ten years ago by the Madras Government to that of Bengal, again changes masters, reverting to Madras; and orders have suddenly been issued for its immediate reoccupation by troops from that Presidency. For this purpose the 4th Madras Native Light Cavalry and 29th N.I., stationed at Kamptee, were directed, by telegram, to prepare to march, with the least possible delay, to Saugor, and were to have commenced their move on the 4th, to cross the Nerbudda, and relieve the Bengal troops at Saugor, consisting of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, 24th and 25th Punjabees, and 39th N.I. The Jubbulpore district is, it appears, also to be reoccupied by Madras troops, which are to march immediately from Hoshingabad for that station. These important changes have been for some time resolved upon; but the Madras Government, which sent the telegraphic orders for carrying them out direct from the Presidency without communicating them to the Chief Commissioner of Nagpore, or the other officials concerned, has taken a very sudden initiative, as if rejoiced at again getting possession of those beautiful provinces. The reason of the transfer is a purely military one; the Saugor and Nerbudda territories being restored to the Madras Government with a view of liberating the Bengal troops now stationed there for duty in the North-West provinces of this Presidency. The change will, however, be attended with an increase of expenditure, not very desirable at the present time, and which, moreover, will be permanent; as, whenever Madras troops cross, and serve to the North of the river Nerbudda, they receive an allowance of extra batta, known as "rice-money." The Bengal troops now about to be relieved will quit their favorite stations with extreme regret, which will not be diminished by the fact that they will have to march for Upper India in the hot weather, and probably to far distant cantonments.—Englishman.

INDIAN SLATES.—Dr. Oldham, in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, draws attention to the fact that India has no "true slates," such as those of Wales in common use in England. He considers the Kurnool slates referred to by Lieutenant Beckley and the Madras Government entirely unfitted for sloping roofs. He recommends the officers of Engineers to make inquiries on the subject, such as those experiments on the stone and timber of the Gwalior territory carried out by Colonel A. Cunningham and published at Roorkee. Next to slates India seems to be most destitute of lime, except in Sylhet.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHIPMENTS OF OPIUM.—The P. and O. Co.'s steamer Behar, Captain G. S. Brooks, which left Bombay harbour on the 14th February for China, &c., carried on board six hundred and sixty eight and a half chests of Malwa Opium, and the merchant steamer Lancefield, Captain Hutchinson, on the morning of the 16th took on board one thousand one hundred and twenty-one chests.

A LONG VOYAGE.—The ship Maria Grey arrived at Muscat on the 11th February, after a long and very tedious passage of nearly five months from Aden. It is said that the crew and passengers suffered very much in consequence of want of proper nourishment. She left Muscat for Bombay on the 14th, having replenished stores and filled up water.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—A branch of the Bank of Bombay was established on the 17th February at Poona, of which Mr. W. F. Hunter has been appointed agent. Similar branches are to be established at Kurrachee, Surat, Ahmedabad (or Dhollera), and Belgaum (or Sholapoor). Mr. William Wilson, late secretary to the Colaba Press Company, has been offered the appointment of agent of one of these branches.

ANNEXATION OF SIND TO THE PUNJAB.—We have reason to believe that the day is not far distant when the long-pending question of annexing Sind to the Punjab will be conclusively settled. This subject is under discussion in the Council Hall of Bombay, and has at last been moulded into some shape so as to bring it into operation at the proper time. The final result will be known on the next vacancy occurring in the Bombay Council—an event now looming in the horizon on the retirement of the Honourable Mr. Reeves, and the appointment of Mr. Inverarity in his place. Sind, it is believed, will be governed by a chief commissioner under the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, as proposed by the Honourable Mr. Ricketts, late commissioner for the revision of civil establishments. This move will place our long-despised province in the position she is destined to hold, in a political, military, and commercial point of view; and we hail with much pleasure the important changes now in prospect as the beginning of a more liberal and successful administration of a country the resources of which lie undeveloped for want of sufficient facilities and encouragement of the enterprising capitalists who have entered the field of speculation, sanguine in their expectation of reaping a golden harvest by a judicious expenditure of time and money.—Our Paper (Kurrachee).

FIRE AT SURAT.—Another of those calamitous fires which have so often visited Surat, has again occurred in that part of the city which is most densely inhabited and called Nanpoora, on the night of the 15th Feb. The cause of the conflagration is attributed to firing of crackers by some Mahomedan boys. About a hundred houses, shops and huts have been destroyed by this fire, the value of the property damaged being estimated at a lakh of rupees.

APPOINTMENTS.—Colonel H. J. Margary, of the Royal Engineers, has been appointed to do duty in the Poona division of the army. Consequent on the retirement of Colonel Swanson, Major Shaw is confirmed in the appointments of Examiner of Commissariat Accounts and Superintendent of Army Clothing; and Major Leckie in that of Agent for Clothing the Army.

THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON BOYS goes home by the steamer of the 27th February, on fifteen months' sick leave. The Rev. H. H. Brereton is to officiate as chaplain of Kirkee during the absence of Mr. Boys.

THE PAPER CURRENCY.—The Bombay Chamber of Commerce has addressed Government on the subject of the omission from the Government notes, about to be issued by the Paper Currency Commissioners, of the designation and value of such notes in the characters of any of the native languages known in this Presidency. The Government declines to make any addition to the legend of the notes.

DR. ROOKE has withdrawn his resignation of the service, and will go home on sick leave.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. DAVID McLAREN, I.N.—An address was presented, on the 25th of February, to Mr. David McLaren, on the occasion of his retiring, through ill health, from the office of Chief Engineer and Inspector of Machinery, I.N., by the engineers and engineer establishment.

BOMBAY VOLUNTEERS.—At a meeting of the members of the Bombay Volunteers, held on the 19th of February, in the Exchange Rooms, Mr. W. S. Sillar, captain of the corps, was unanimously elected commanding officer of the rifles, in the place of Major Curtis, resigned.

MR. GEORGE SCOTT, who has been nominated successor to Mr. Gibbs as Special Commissioner for Income Tax for the town and island of Bombay took the oaths of his office on the 26th February. Mr. E. W. Ravenscroft, of the Civil Service, has been appointed Sub-Collector of Broach; and Mr. William Tracey, Assistant-Surveyor to the Municipal Commissioners, Clerk of the Municipality, in place of Mr. Briggs, resigned. Mr. L. H. Bayley, of the Bombay bar, has been appointed to the office called a Deputy Secretaryship to Government, but which is, in fact, that of Clerk to the Council. Mr. Bayley has not been long in Bombay, but he is of twelve years' standing at the bar; and in this respect may be considered to have a claim to the office superior to that of any other member of the local bar qualified and likely to accept it.

THE BHEELS OF BURWANEE.—Advices have been received at Mhow from Burwanee, to the south of the Nerbudda river, that the Bheels to the west and south-west of that place had broken into insurrection. The road from Agra to Bombay, by the rising of these people, is rendered unsafe, and the officer commanding at Mhow has directed a party consisting of a hundred rank and file to proceed to the Khull Ghat on the Nerbudda, on the road from Mhow to Teekree. The country inhabited by the Bheels to the westward of Burwanee is seldom quiet for long together. It was in an expedition against these people that Outram first distinguished himself, and since then several of the best soldiers of the Western Presidency have from time to time been called upon to exercise their skill and powers of endurance in bringing these refractory mountaineers to a sense of the superiority of the British Government, and of the danger they run by defying its power. For some years these people were kept in comparative quiet by an officer of the Nizam's service, a Captain T. H. Bullock; he understood their language and their peculiar organisation, and by constantly moving about among them, listening to their grievances, real or imaginary; by always showing an inclination to redress their wrongs, and by sometimes succeeding in doing so, he contrived to prevent their breaking into insurrection. He was subsequently removed to an appointment in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, since which the Bheels have known no quiet. They are, no doubt, a difficult race to manage, but kindness, patience, and firmness combined have, and will again, effect it; and were the Government to appoint a permanent commissioner amongst them with defined powers, such as would enable him to act on all occasions without waiting for reference to the seat of Government, with powers to re-organise the Bheel Corps, we have little doubt that an end would be put to the constant risings among these people; provided always the commissioner selected were a man possessing the requisite qualities—a knowledge of the Bheel language, of a kindly disposition, with temper, patience, and firmness.—Englishman.

FREIGHTS.

To London £2. 13s. 6d. to £3.
To Liverpool, £2. 10s. to £3. 5s.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Feb. 27).—Cotton.—Our market for this staple has varied little during the fortnight, and the purchases of new Cotton do not exceed 15,000 shipment bales. The quietness prevailing during the fortnight is in part to be attributed to the very large business done in the previous fortnight, and also to the absence of any news from the Home markets of a decided nature. New Oomrawuttee is beginning to arrive in moderate quantities. Of Broach and Dholera, however, the parcels which have as yet come to hand are very small.

New Oomrawuttee ... 1,600 Candies at Rs. 194 to 198
" do, Akote ... 300 " " 197 to 198
" Barsee ... 400 " " 192 to 195 the former without selection.

Dholera ... 125 " " 194 to 196
The following contracts have been made for new Cotton to arrive in March and April:—
Oomrawuttee ... 800 Candies at Rs. 198 1/2 to 184 1/2
Broach ... 1,750 " " 194 to 195
Dholera ... 2,350 " " 182 to 183

In old Cotton few purchases have taken place. Of Compta 375 candies were bought at Rs. 174 to 175, and of Hinglung-hote 125 candies at Rs. 187 1/2. Latterly few transactions in cotton have taken place, as both buyers and sellers await the arrival of mail of 3rd, now due, as a guide to their future course of action. Wool.—There is now a very active demand for this article, and prices are again higher. Purchases on an extensive scale have taken place during the fortnight.

Coffee.—Our market is free of stocks, both of Barbare and Mocha, which are much sought after. Of Malabar stocks are moderate, and prices about 9 annas per maund lower. Seeds.—Of Linseed the arrivals are not large lately, prices, however, have declined 2 annas since the arrival of last mail from England. The only purchase reported is that of 5,000 cwts. at Rs. 54 to arrive in May. Rapeseed.—There are no purchases reported in either yellow or brown descriptions. Teelseed is scarce, and has advanced 8 annas since our last. Pepper has receded in value since our last. The stock of Malabar is about 3,000 bundles, and of Bhutcola about 250 bundles.

IMPORTS.—(Bombay, Feb. 27).—Our import market has been more active during the past fortnight, and an average business has been done in most instances at unchanged rates; for various makes, however, which are not in active request, holders have submitted to a further concession in price. In the native bazaar there is a slight increase of demand for Piece Goods, which we hope will become more marked after the Hoolie holidays; but as stocks are accumulating fast in consequence of the recent heavy arrivals, we do not think that the improvement in demand then anticipated will be accompanied by any material advances in rates, unless we have very exciting news from home, as holders will be anxious to realise their large stocks before the season closes.

FURLOUGHS:—STAFF SURG. WOODWARD.

Fort William, Feb. 8.—The foll. paras. of a mily. letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, of Dec. 31, 1861, are published for general information and guidance:—

In a G.O., Queen's British troops, dated Aug. 3, 1859, I find that Staff surg. Woodward was granted leave of abs. to Europe under the new furlough rules; and in a communication received from this officer, since his arrival in this country, it is stated that he received from the Govt. of Bombay an advance of 3 months' pay and Indian allowance on quitting India.

Staff surgs. are not entitled to the same advantages with respect to furlough as officers belonging to regiments serving in India. When a staff surg. leaves India he ceases to belong to the Indian establishment, and his place is filled up; under such circumstances he can have no claim to Indian allowances for a date subsequent to that of his quitting India.

In fact, Lord Stanley's despatch to the Govt. of India, dated 9th Feb., 1859, No. 41, transmitted a communication from the director general, army medical department, in which he stated "that no staff medical officer has any claim for Indian allowances after embarkation for this country; for, if this course be not pursued, it might happen that the Govt. of India would be involved in the payment of a larger medical staff than has been agreed on."

Previously to the introduction of the new furlough rules, it was optional with officers to take or refuse an advance of six months' furlough-pay on quitting India. On the introduction of the new rules it was stated [despatch to India, 20th Sept., 1854, No. 24, para. 15] that advances of pay and allowances under them might be made in India from three months, and that furlough-pay might continue to be issued in advance for six months when required.

Notwithstanding these instructions, it appears that, in Bengal and Madras, advances of pay and allowances have been in some cases made for six months. This should be interdicted for the future. This rule applies equally to H.M.'s British officers.

TABLE MONEY AT SEA.

With the view of ensuring the more speedy recovery of that portion of the table-money which, under existing regulations, is recoverable from officers proceeding by sea, at the public expense, from any Indian port to another port in India, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that the officer granting the free passage shall be required, when notifying the same to the applicant, to warn him in writing that certificates of the dates of his embarkation and disembarkation, signed by the commander of the vessel, and countersigned by the officers of the marine or qmr. gen.'s department, as the case may be, at both ports if possible, but at all events at the port of disembarkation, must be appended to the bill in which his pay is next drawn. The officer granting the free passage will also give notice of the same to the controller of military finance, for communication to the proper paymaster, who will be responsible for recovering whatever portion of the table-money may be debitable to the officer from the period that he was messed on board, and who will disallow his pay and allowances until the certificates above-mentioned are presented.

OFFICERS' ALLOWANCE.

From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, Financial Dept., to the Offg. Civil Paymaster, N.W.P.

Fort William, Council Chamber, Jan. 23, 1862. Financial Department.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 158-426, dated 8th inst., and in reply to state that you were right in considering that the Rule* prescribed in the Financial Resolution of June 25 last, is only applicable in the case of an officer holding a permanent appointment, and officiating at the same time in another superior to his own. An officer holding a subordinate charge is not entitled to any additional allowance.—I have, &c.,

C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

Pay Examiners' Duties.

In modification of G.O. by the Gov. gen., No. 1,320 of 1858, the following rules will henceforth be observed:—

The pay examiners, after auditing the paymaster's disbursements, will transmit to him memoranda of objectionable charges.

On the back will be entered the following docket: Forwarded to , to be returned at earliest convenience, and at latest within one month from date of receipt, with such reply as he may have to offer.

The reply is to be entered in the column for the purpose.

A further retrenchment statement shall not be issued, the final disposal of the objection being entered in the original memorandum.

Objections explained to the satisfaction of the pay examiners shall be withdrawn, the claim in question being then admitted, will be entered in the paymaster's accounts as a new charge.

Objections admitted by officers shall immediately be recovered from them by paymasters without further reference.

Objections not answered within one month from date of receipt (which is to be noted on the memorandum by the receiver) will then become recoverable, unless the cause of delay be satisfactorily explained.

It must be understood that the original memorandum will pass from hand to hand until at last it becomes a record in the pay examiner's office, if the disallowance be objected to; or in the paymaster's, if it be admitted by the officer concerned; paymasters will therefore be relieved from the duty of preparing copies or abstracts of the memoranda.

From any decision of the pay examiners an appeal may be made to the controller of military finance, who will, if he thinks fit, submit it through the military finance department, for the final orders of Government.

* A military officer in civil employ, holding a permanent appointment, who is called upon to perform the duties of another or second officer, shall be allowed to receive a moiety of the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating, in addition to the full salary of his own appointment, provided that no extra expense be entailed on Government.

Monthly Allowances.

No. 1,158 of 1861.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that, from Jan. 1 inclusive, i.e., beginning with the pay for that month, the monthly diets and travelling allowance or table money, whenever admissible, on account of the following officers and establishments, which hitherto have been wholly or partially disbursed in the commissariat department, shall be disbursed entirely in the pay department, viz:—

I. European, commissioned, warrant, and non-commissioned officers employed in the commissariat department.

2. Office establishments of commissariat officers.

3. Warrant officers and hospital apprentices in the subordinate medical department, and hospital writers.

4. Conservancy establishments under barrack-masters and quarter-masters.

5. Chowkeydars over empty barracks.

II. Commissariat officers will draw in one pay abstract the entire emoluments of themselves and of the warrant and non-commissioned officers and office establishments under them.

III. The pay and allowances of subordinate medical officers and of hospital writers will be drawn in the same pay abstract with the emoluments of the medical officers under whom they may be serving.

IV. Conservancy establishments will be similarly included in the same pay abstract with the pay and allowances of the barrack masters and quarter-masters who may have charge of them.

V. The examiner of commissariat accounts will return unaudited, or disallow from disbursement statements, all bills for January, 1862, and subsequent months, which may be submitted to him for the aforesaid officers and establishments.

VI. The military finance department will issue subsidiary instructions to give effect to these orders.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State, published by the Government of India, is republished for general information:—

No. 845.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State, is published by order of the Governor-general in Council:—

India Office, London, Dec. 9th, 1861.

To H. E. the Right Hon. the Gov.-gen. of India in Council.

MY LORD,—I have to acknowledge paragraphs 2 and 3 of your Public Despatch, No. 42, of 1861, which forward a memorial from Messrs. Woodrow, Lodge, and other members of the Education department, praying that they may be placed upon the same footing as principals and head masters of colleges and schools in regard to their being eligible to pensions if incapacitated by age or infirmity after the same length of services as law officers and native judges.

2. The appointments held by these gentlemen are those of inspectors, principals, professors, and head masters, and as professors are of a grade higher than head masters and inspectors than either principals or head masters, I sanction the grant to the memorialists of pensions on the same terms and conditions as were authorised for the last named grades in paragraph 4* of the financial despatch, dated July 20th, 1858, No. 23, subject to the usual limitation applicable to the pensions of the uncovenanted service.—I have, &c.,

(Signed)

C. WOOD.

By Order,

A. D. ROBERTSON,

Acting Chief Sec. to Government.

Bombay Castle, Feb. 26th, 1862.

* Extract from the Financial Despatch from the late Court of Directors, No. 23, 1853, dated the 20th July.

4. Our attention has again been given to the subject, and we have resolved now to withdraw the restriction as respects this valuable class of public servants (Servants of Government employed in the Education Department.) and to sanction their being admitted to participate in the privileges of the Pension Rules of 1831. We have also determined, with a view of showing our estimation of the importance of their services, that the Principals and Head Masters of Colleges or Schools shall be ranked in the same class with Law Officers and Native Judges, and in like manner with them be qualified, if incapacitated by age or infirmity, to receive pensions equivalent to one-third of their average monthly salary after fifteen years' service, and to one-half after a service of twenty-two years or upwards. This privilege must be confined to Principals and Head Masters. [Vide Clause 3, Rule V. of the Pension Rules of 1831.] With regard to all other Educational Servants a service of twenty years will be a necessary qualification for the minimum rate of pension.

PLEADERS IN OUDH.

No. 40.—JUDICIAL.

NOTIFICATION.—The following Rules for the admission of Pleaders in the Courts of the Province of Oudh are published for general information:—

Rules for the admission of Pleaders and Agents to practice in the Courts of Oudh.

No person will be allowed to practice in the courts of Oudh, or in any to interfere in any suit (unless a party or a recognised agent under No. 2 of the published rules of the 6th August, 1861), till he has received a certificate under the following rules, and any person interfering contrary to this provision will be treated as guilty of a contempt. Barristers or other persons who may by law be entitled to plead can alone be exempt from these rules.

2. Candidates for a certificate enabling them to plead in the courts must lodge with the Committee of Examination on or before a fixed date, a reasonable time before the day appointed for examining candidates, trustworthy testimony showing the sufficiency of their education and respectability of their character, from which it may be judged whether they are fit persons to be admitted as candidates. Applications will be submitted in a form prepared for that purpose. The committee will, after such inquiry as may be deemed necessary, admit or reject the candidate, and shall not be bound to specify reasons for rejection. But a rejected candidate may appeal to the Judicial Commissioner, who may call for a report of reasons, and whose order on the subject will be final. A list of persons admitted as candidates will be submitted to the Judicial Commissioner, who will have a veto thereupon.

3. Periodical examinations will be held at Lucknow and at other divisional stations where they may be required by a committee of which the Civil Judge or Commissioner of the Division will be president, and the other members will be nominated by the Judicial Commissioner, and at these examinations all persons admitted as candidates may present themselves.

4. The following will be the subjects of examination:—

The Hindoostanee language as spoken and written. The Codes of Procedure and Penal Law (Civil Procedure Acts VIII. of 1859, and XXIII. of 1861, Criminal Procedure Act XXV. of 1861, Penal Code Act XLV. of 1860) as in force in Oudh, and other laws of the British Government actually in force in Oudh.

The Mahomedan and Hindoo laws affecting persons and property as administered in the British courts.

The principal local laws and customs of Oudh. The printed circulars of the Judicial Commissioner.

The principles of English law regarding contracts and torts or the French Civil Code (optional with candidates, but a good knowledge of either will be weighed against comparative want of perfect knowledge of native laws).

5. A set of questions and papers will be transmitted in manuscript under seal by the Judicial Commissioner to the committee, who will open them at the time of examination, read out question by question, and, with due precaution against communication, require each candidate to answer each question in writing, and file the answers. The committee will further examine each candidate vis à vis in the language, and in the conduct of a case, and will record its opinion of his performance in each branch. They may also put such further questions to him as they may think fit. They will then examine and value the written papers, and after classifying the candidates in order of merit, will record their opinion which are qualified to receive a certificate, and making a list of the same in the form annexed B., and will submit it (with the papers in case required for reference) to the Judicial Commissioner for his approval. On being approved by the Judicial Commissioner, the candidate will receive a certificate in the form annexed C.

6. All holders of certificates will be free to practice in the courts of Oudh without respect to the number of persons so practising in the court.

7. Certificates of holders guilty of guilty of any misconduct in any court will be liable to be cancelled with the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner.

DISTURBANCES IN SYLHET.

Military Dept., Feb. 7, 1862.—No. 9.

Jowai Stockades, fifty miles from Cheera poonjee. Jan. 26, 1862.

Sir,—In continuation of my No. 7 of the 21st inst., I have the honour to report, for the information of the brigadier gen. commanding the division, that I arrived here yesterday evening with my detachment of 1 jemadar and 44 muskets, having halted one day on the road for my second detachment, as mentioned in my former letter, I having by a circuitous route avoided the expected opposition, which, with our seventy cooly-loads of provision, might have proved disastrous.

I found the stockade, with its garrison of 60 men, in good order, under its very excellent commandant, a jemadar of the regiment, but straitened for food, and worn out with constant watchfulness to frustrate the serious attempts of the rebels to fire the place.

In conjunction with Major Rowlett, deputy commissioner, I this morning moved out at 9½ A.M., with 65 muskets and a jemadar to attack the stockaded village of Jallong, which we reached in two hours, and immediately commenced the ascent of the hills on which it is situated, about 1,000 feet high. The first stockade was encountered half way up, and here we had the only serious resistance offered, consisting of a brisk fire of musketry, which disabled some of our men, but the remainder keeping up a good fire we were enabled to cut down the gate and enter the place, when the opposition generally ceased, and we succeeded in driving out the rebels and firing the village. We got safely back to this about half-past four P.M.

Our loss, 4 sepoys rather badly wounded by musketry, one cooly more slightly ditto; one of Major Rowlett's police sepoys was badly wounded with an arrow, as also more slightly were 2 or 3 sepoys and coolies; and many of this party were bruised by stones rolled down the hill.

The loss of the enemy cannot be ascertained, for as soon as the gate was forced we hurried on to the second line of stockade, and did not return the same way. Only one dead body lay in my path, the sepoys only saw three, but the jungle was dense on both sides of the path, and the fallen could not be seen; but we could see that wounded or dead men had been carried over by the rear of the stockade—a new and strongly-built one.

I have much pleasure in reporting that the conduct of all the men engaged was most excellent.

There are other villages, I believe, to be visited, but Jallong being the strongest and bearing the worst character, was the first attacked; and I trust our success here will have the effect of deterring the others from resistance.

I will not fail to keep you acquainted with our future proceedings.—I have, &c.,

THE DISTURBANCES IN ASSAM.

From the Secretary to the Government of Bengal to the Secretary to the Landholders' and Commercial Association.

Dated Fort William, Feb. 7, 1862.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter of 3rd inst., in which the Lieut. gov. promised to communicate to your association any decision on the subject of the requirements of Assam and other places to the eastward in regard to troops, in relation to which question I mentioned that the Lieut. gov. had been in correspondence with the Govt. of India, I am directed to enclose an extract from the proceedings of the Gov. gen. of India in Council in the Military Department, dated 23rd ult., conveying a decision in so far as Assam is concerned.

The Lieut. gov. has information of a second wing of a regiment being ordered to proceed forthwith towards Sylhet.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

E. H. LUSHINGTON,

Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

Extract from the proceedings of His Excellency the Gov. gen. in Council in the Military Dept., under date the 23rd Jan., 1862.

Read extracts from the Proceedings of the Government of India, Home Dept., No. 8,498, dated 28th Nov., 1861, forwarding communications from the Government of Bengal regarding the recent outbreak at Nowgong in Assam, and the recommendation of that Government that another regiment of native infantry should be sent to Assam.

Read also docket from Home Dept., No. 218, dated 11th Jan., 1862, forwarding a further communication from the Government of Bengal, on the state of the public mind in Cossyah and Jynteah, with the recommendation of the commissioner that a small body of European troops should be located in those hills.

Observations.—It does not appear to the right hon. the Gov. gen. in Council that an addition of force is indispensably necessary in Assam, and it would not be practicable without much expense and inconvenience to send a detachment of Europeans to Assam at present.

The Bengal N.I. Regiment, which will shortly be relieved from the central India provinces, will be available for Bengal and Assam, if required. But until these regiments are set free, it does not appear to His Excellency in Council that it will be necessary to send any troops in that direction.

Ordered that a copy of the above be transmitted to the Home Department, with reference to the communications from that Department noted in the margin. [No. 3,498 of 28th Nov. 1861., No. 215, of 11th Jan. 1862.]

REPLY OF SIR CHARLES WOOD TO THE HINDOO MEMORIAL AGAINST SIR MORDAUNT WELLS.

No. 714.

From A. M. Monteath, Esq., Under Secretary to the Government of India, to Baboo Jotendro Mohun Tagore, Honorary Secretary of the British Indian Association.

Dated Fort William, the 7th February, 1862.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Sir,—Referring to the memorial of the native inhabitants of Bengal received with your letter dated the 18th of September last, and to the communication from this office, No. 1,770, dated the 24th idem, I am directed to transmit to you the accompanying copy of despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 142, dated the 29th of December last.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) A. M. MONTEATH,

Under Secretary to the Government of India.

India-office, London, Dec. 24, 1861.

No. 162.—Judicial.

My Lord,—I have to acknowledge your despatch of the 21st Sept. (No. 72), 1861, transmitting a memorial, numerous signed by native inhabitants of Bengal, complaining of expressions alleged by them to have been used by the junior puisne judge of the Supreme Court, Sir Mordaunt Wells, in the exercise of his judicial office. While the memorialists express their high respects for the Chief Justice, and for other judges who have occupied, and now occupy, the bench of that Court, they assert that the conduct of Sir Mordaunt Wells in these instances has had the effect of shaking their confidence, as far as he is concerned, in the wise and impartial administration of justice.

cerned, in the wise and impartial administration of justice.

2. I regret that any language used on the Bench of Justice should be supposed by any persons to convey general imputations on the moral character of the whole native inhabitants of Bengal. But I cannot think that such imputations could be intended, and I am convinced that the learned judge must have meant, in reality, only to declare in strong terms his condemnation of certain criminal practices which had been brought to his knowledge, and which appear to have been of frequent occurrence as well as serious character.

3. I will conclude by expressing a hope that the feelings of which this memorial contains the evidence may of themselves subside with time and reflection, that those who hold the judicial office may be sensible of how great importance it is that their denunciations of crime may not be interpreted to hasty imputations against a whole people or community, and that those classes which the memorialists represent while honourably anxious to justify themselves against any such supposed imputation, may feel how deep an interest they have in the earnest and fearless administration of justice by those to whom it is entrusted.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) C. WOOD.

FIRE AT POONA.—A dreadful fire broke out at Aditwar Peit, in the city of Poona, at about 4 A.M. on the morning of Saturday, February 20th, which, notwithstanding every exertion of the authorities to extinguish it, continued its destruction till near midday. The conflagration appears to have originated by the ignition of a bale of cloth, in a store room, the owner of which, a Mahomedan merchant, having spent the greater part of the night at a native theatrical, returned about three o'clock in the morning, lit a lamp (which he left burning near the bale of cloths), and retired to sleep into an adjoining room. From some unaccountable cause, the light was communicated to the cloths, which, in turn, ignited other inflammable matter, and in a short time the whole range of buildings in the street were in flames, notwithstanding every possible assistance rendered by the Superintendent of Police, the Mamlutdar, and the Fouzdar, as well as a party of H.M.'s 133rd Fusiliers, who were sent to assist in extinguishing the flames. The loss in property has been estimated at nearly a lakh of rupees.—Poona Observer.

REDUCTION OF INTEREST ON INDIA BONDS.—India office, March 20, 1862.—The Secretary of State for India in Council hereby give notice, that the present rate of interest, four pounds ten shillings (£4. 10s.) per cent. per annum, on East India bonds, will cease and determine on the 31st day of March, 1863. That from and after the 31st day of March, 1863, such bonds will carry interest at the rate of four pounds (£4) per cent. per annum. That holders of bonds will be allowed to bring them in to be marked for continuation at the said interest of four pounds (£4) per cent. per annum until the 30th day of Sept., 1862, and that such bonds as shall not be marked for continuation as aforesaid on or before the 30th day of September, 1862, shall be liable to be paid off on the said 31st day of March, 1863, on which day all interest will cease.

THE CIVIL SERVICE MEMORIAL.

CORIOLANUS, "like an eagle in a dove-cote," could not have fluttered the Volscs in Corioli more effectually than has Sir Charles Wood the civil servants of the Indian Government. There is a terrible commotion among that highly respectable body of gentlemen. Not only have they been stripped of the divinity that did hedge them in, and fence off the rude intrusion of interlopers and other mere human beings, but they have actually lived to see those commonplace individuals intrusted with power, and even admitted to the Council of the Viceroy. Worse even than this. The exclusive privileges and prizes of the Service have been swept away, and men are admitted to hold high office for no other reason than their fitness for it. Allowances, too, have been reduced, and the retiring annuities shrunk so low that it will be scarcely possible to keep even so much as a single-horsed brougham. And yet, say these much-injured men, it was purely for the sake of the advantages of which they have been so ruthlessly deprived that they ever condescended to serve their country. The Civil Fund, they go on to observe, has been one of their principal inducements to display "zeal and devotedness in the public service, irrespective of considerations of insalubrity of climate or of personal risk, which your Petitioners believe to be one of the recognised characteristics of their Service." It is to be regretted that "your Petitioners" did not engage the pen of a ready writer to express their ideas in intelligible English. As the sentence now stands, one would suppose that the insalubrity of the climate was one of the considerations which tempted them to display zeal and devotedness. Again, the relative pronoun "which" clearly refers to "personal risk," but military men would be better justified in claiming that "characteristic" as belonging to their own service. And it is not, at first sight, altogether obvious why insalubrity of climate and personal risk should entitle civilians to higher pensions than soldiers. The latter move in precisely the same sphere of society as the others, and have hitherto been members of exactly the same families. Why, then, should the one have been content to run all hazards for allowances barely sufficient for maintenance, and a pension wholly inadequate for that purpose, while the other could only be induced to encounter minor hardships by the immediate payment of ample salaries, and the prospect of ever-increasing emoluments, culminating in a handsome pension? In truth, these worthy gentlemen exhibit themselves in a very unfavourable light. That they should be somewhat disappointed by the recent course of events is natural enough, but they have, in a great measure, to thank their own superciliousness for the evil days that have come upon them. In the time of their prosperity they stiffened their necks and held themselves so much aloof that they made all the world their enemies, and conciliated no one. With all their advantages they were even ignorant of the people whom they had undertaken to govern, and on all great emergencies proved themselves inferior to the military officers to whom were confided similar duties. It is in vain they now raise a wailing cry as their glory departs from them. They have been weighed in the balance and found wanting, and henceforth the public service of the country will be conducted only by those who have given proof of their competence. The memorialists, however, untaught by recent experience, coolly demand that the State should do more for them than heretofore. Up to the present time the contribution of the State has been only £361 per annum to each annuitant after twenty-five years' service, but it is now proposed that it should contribute £611, and that the members of the Service shall be required to make up only one quarter instead of one-half the value of the annuity. They further suggest the propriety of a sliding scale, so that a civil servant may retire at the end of ten years with a pension of £300 per annum, and that after twenty-five years' service an annual addition should be made of £25, until the maximum pension of £1,250 reward a continuous servitude of thirty-five years' duration. Now, a pension at the end of ten years is simply a bonus to induce men to retire just as they are becoming useful, nor do we see the necessity in any case of a more ample retiring allowance than £500 per annum. Something, perhaps, should be done for those who are compelled to resign by reason of ill health, but there is really no occasion now-a-days to hold out great temptations to draw men of ability to India. Steam and other considerations have removed the ancient drawbacks to an Indian exile, and there will never be a lack of candidates for a well-paid service that terminates in a State pension of £500 per annum, certain to be largely augmented by a private income acquired by a reasonable and legitimate economy.

THE TAEPIINGS.

It is hard to say whether the Neapolitan Bourbons are more fortunate in having such an advocate as the Marquis of Normanby, or the Taepings such a one as Colonel Sykes. The wrongheadedness of these two doughty champions of cruelty and oppression amounts almost to a monomania, for surely no really sane man could find excuses for the wickedness and blood-guiltiness of either the Italian tyrants or the Chinese marauders. The former, indeed, may plead in extenuation of their crimes that they were free to act as they pleased, by virtue of hereditary right—as if a father's fraud and violence could justify a son's,—but the Taepings are nothing more than rebels, the very scum of a degraded populace, and given over to the practice of every conceivable kind of depravity. At first they were regarded by the European missionaries as religious reformers, ready to receive the truths of Christianity, and destined to found an era of peace and godliness in the midst of a dissolute and fallen race. Colonel Sykes himself urges in their favour that they "profess a regard for religious observances, and denounce the use of opium and liquor." Unfortunately, however, they do not observe their own professions, but recklessly indulge the worst passions of human nature. No man of note has yet joined them. Like Jack Cade and his followers, whom they strongly resemble,

"All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call—false caterpillars, and intend their death." And this intention they fulfil, cruelly maltreating and murdering all "but such as go in clouded shoon." They are, in truth,

Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless."

Of mercy they know nothing, no more than the army of locusts to whom Mr. Layard so happily likened them. "Early in the morning," said he, "there was a sound as of a distant wind. Soon the air became darkened, and the whole earth seemed to move. Next was heard a strange noise, resembling that which would be produced by the grinding of thousands of teeth, and in a short time every green thing was gone. So it was with the Taepings. They passed over a country, and nothing whatever remained, neither city, nor village, nor cultivation." It is clear that they have no idea of anything save bloodshed and rapine. They have no religious or political system to introduce. There are no abuses they pretend to put down, no wrongs they seek to redress. They are simply the scourge of Heaven,—the natural result of bad government,—the fitting retribution of a nation's crimes. It is related that when Nadir Shah was sweeping like a hurricane over the fertile plains of Upper India, a Dervish presented to him a slip of paper, on which were written these words:—"If thou art a god, act as a god; if thou art a prophet, conduct us in the way of salvation; if thou art a king, make the people happy, but do not destroy them." To this Nadir replied: "I am no god that I should act as a god, nor a prophet to point out the way of salvation, nor a king to give happiness to the people; but I am he whom God sends to chastise the nations that He has willed to visit with his wrath." Such might be the reply of the barbarian leader of the Taeping hordes. His mission is that of a pestilence, and as a pestilence he must be treated and overcome.

The description of the ravages of these savages in the rich and beautifully-cultivated region around Nankin reminds one of Kirke White's wonderful lines upon the devastations of Time, which furnished the original idea of Lord Macaulay's too famous New Zealander. Here is the account written by Mr. Forrest, the English Vice-Consul, and quoted by Mr. Layard:—

"Words cannot convey any idea of the utter ruin and desolation which mark the line of Taeping march from Nankin to Soo-chow. The country around the last unfortunate city will soon be covered with jungle, while the vast suburbs, once the wonder of even foreigners, are utterly destroyed; a few miserable beings are met with outside the gates selling bean curd and herbs, but with these exceptions none of the original inhabitants are to be found, and we actually flushed teal in the city moat, where only a year ago it was barely possible to find a passage, from the immense number of boats actively engaged in commerce and traffic. The interior of the city is equally desolate; the whole of the house-fronts have been torn down, and the numerous watercourses are filled with broken furniture, rotten boats, and ruin. The same may be said of all cities on the canal; and as for the villages and places unprotected by walls, they have been burnt so effectually and carefully that nothing but the blackened walls remain."

Compare this with Kirke White's beautiful fragment, only substituting "China" for "Britain," and the aptness of the description must strike everyone:—

"Where now is Britain? Where her laurel'd names,
Her palaces and halls? Dashed in the dust;
Some second Vandal hath reduced her pride,
And with one big recoil hath thrown her back
To primitive barbarity. Again
Through her depopulated vales the scream
Of bloody Superstition hollow rings,
And the scared native to the tempest howls
The yell of deprecation. O'er her marts,
Her crowded ports, broods Silence; and the cry
Of the low curlew, and the pensive dash
Of distant billows, break alone the void.
Even as the savage sits upon the throne
That marks where stood her Capitol, and hears
The hither booming in the weeds, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude," &c., &c.

It is scarcely pertinent to our present subject to give the sequence of this splendid fragment. Much more to the purpose is it to consider what should be the attitude of England towards those outcasts of humanity, steeped in the most odious crimes, and thirsting for yet greater abominations. Few, we imagine, will dissent from the course determined upon by her Majesty's Government, or find fault with the protection that is to be afforded to all the treaty ports of the Chinese Empire. The importance of the British interests at stake is far too great to admit of any squeamish scruples about the right of intervention. The case is in no way analogous to that of the beligerent Powers in North America, for this is not a civil war, but an insurrection of the vilest rabble. The allied forces will act strictly on the defensive, and in the service of the constituted Government. Their operations will be confined to the repulse of the Taepings from certain cities taken under their protection, and it is to be hoped that this check to the rebellion will encourage the Imperial Government at Peking to organise means for its complete and early suppression.

THE MAHARAJAS.

OUR readers are, probably, aware that an action for libel has been brought against the editor of a native paper published in Bombay for alleged defamation of a certain order of priests known as the Maharajahs. We shall hereafter have occasion to analyse the extraordinary revelations brought to light at the trial, which has rivalled in length the most scandalous causes tried before our own Courts. For the present, however, we shall content ourselves with borrowing from the Times of India some curious details as to the "ways and means" by which this abominable priesthood is enabled to indulge in every form of vice and sensuality. It seems, then, that in the year 1811 Gokulnathjee Maharajah arrived in Bombay from his native province of Gujarat, apparently on a visit to some of his fellow-countrymen. The latter, who, next to the Europeans and Parsees, engross the largest share of the commerce of that flourishing seaport, felt highly honoured by the presence of such a distinguished minister of religion, and unanimously invited him and his family to reside permanently among them "for the purification of their souls." At the same time they proposed for his Holiness' consideration a less disinterested motive for undertaking the administration of their spiritual affairs by offering to build a temple for his benefit, and endow it with an ample revenue. The Maharajah acknowledged the irresistible force of such arguments, but, prudently distrusting the permanence of a voluntary system, he suggested that a light tax should be imposed upon articles of trade that enter into universal consumption. The following scale was accordingly agreed upon by the Vaishnavas, whose dealings embrace cloth of all kinds, cotton, opium, sugar, spices, the precious metals, and in fact almost every description of saleable goods:—

|   | Amount of Taxation.  |
|---|--|
| Silk, sugar, spices, metals, sackcloth, cotton, & opium                                       | ½ anna per every hundred rupees of sale effected.                |
| Cloth—silken, cotton, and of every other species  | Ditto.   |
| Bill of exchange, drafts, &c.   | 1 anna per every thousand rupees' transaction.                   |
| Gold and silver specie  | Ditto.   |
| Bill and specie brokerage   | Ditto.   |
| Cloth brokerage   | ½ anna per every hundred rupees' transaction.                    |

| Pearls and jewels   | Ditto.   |
| Pearl and jewel brokerage   | Ditto.   |

| Muccadams   | 8 annas per every hundred rupees of their income.                |
| Every patimar laden with goods from Malabar, and consigned to a vaishnava                     | Rs. 1½ per vessel.   |
| Every padon (native craft) from Rajapoor, and of which the goods are consigned to a vaishnava | 9 annas per vessel.  |

However insignificant may appear the separate items of this "holy tax," the total proceeds amount to not less than 50,000 rupees per annum, which are punctually paid to Gokulnathjee's descendant and representative, Jivanjee Maharajah, the proprietor and priest of the chief temple in the island. Nor is he the only one thus provided for. As the Maharajahs increase in number, fresh lagas, or taxes, have to be levied; and at the present moment there are six priests, with their families, maintained at the expense of the community at large. These six lagas produce the respectable sum of 162,000 rupees per annum, of which 80,000 go to the temple of Shree Nathjee, in Rajpootana, 50,000 to Jivanjee Maharajah, 12,000 to Chemonlaljee Maharajah, 10,000 to Baboo Royjee, 5,500 to Gopkishjee Maharajah, and the remaining 4,500 to Lal Manjee. The result of this very light taxation illustrates the truth of the old Scotch proverb that "Many a mickle makes a muckle;" but it must not be supposed that the whole £16,000 a-year are collected from single payments. Far from it. It may and does often happen that the same article pays three and four times over to the fund, as it passes from hand to hand. The real taxpayers, however, are not the Vaishnava merchants and dealers, but their customers, for the amount of the laga is invariably added to the prime cost of the article. These merchants buy wholesale from the European houses, and in retailing to their own countrymen take very good care to cover the original outlay and all other liabilities. There is no danger of competition, at least in the cloth market, for that is entirely in their own hands. The tax is, therefore, levied indiscriminately upon Christians, Mahomedans, Parsees, and Hindoos; and even the foreign purchasers of goods who come from Arabia, Persia, and the east coast of Africa, are compelled unconsciously to contribute to the maintenance of an idolatrous religion and a crafty, dissolute priesthood. The existence of this nuisance, however, is more easily reprobated than crushed, for in the absence of competition there is no means of beating down the prices of the Vaishnava monopolists. The only way to cut off the revenue, and consequently the influence, of the Maharajahs, would be by starting opposition stores, at which goods would be disposed of at prices lower by the amount of the lagas. The experiment is really worth trying; and if our religious societies had one-half as much common-sense as zeal, they would find that the principles of political and social economy would oftentimes do them better service than the most fervid preaching and exhortation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 18.

THE TAEPINGS.

Mr. GREGSON called attention to the position of British merchants in China, and moved a resolution, that due protection be afforded to them and their property in the treaty ports of that empire. He read statements made by persons upon whom he could, he said, depend of the character of the Taepings, who, so far from being a national party, were represented to be a set of robbers and murderers, land-pirates and marauders. All he asked was protection of the lives and property of our countrymen resident in the cities named in the treaty against the lawless violence of these men.

Mr. J. TURNER, in seconding the motion, dwelt upon the great value of the trade of Shanghai to Manchester.

Colonel SYKES concurred in the motion, denying, however, that a single proof had been furnished of a British subject having been killed, or of British property having been put in jeopardy, by the Taepings, to justify the panic at Shanghai. He drew a favourable picture of the Taepings, and protested against our interference.

Mr. LAYARD said the Government had endeavoured to pursue a policy of strict forbearance and non-intervention in China; but in the present condition of the country this policy was difficult. All the information the Government had received tended to but one result,—that the party called Taepings had no policy, and were totally unable to establish a Government; that they were a rabble rout of marauders and plunderers. There had been a notion that they were about to introduce the Christian religion, and that the object of the movement was to restore the Chinese dynasty; but this illusion had disappeared from all except Col. Sykes, and the devastation created by these bands realised the descriptions given by writers of the horrors perpetrated by the wild hordes that invaded Europe in the early ages. Cultivation disappeared, cities were deserted, populations fearfully reduced, and in some places entirely exterminated. Meanwhile, a new Ministry had been organised at Peking, and our Minister wrote that a great change had taken place in the policy of the Imperial Court. A great emporium of British trade was now threatened; were we to stand by and see it destroyed? It was not a question of neutrality, but of humanity. The Taepings were determined to ruin Shanghai, and it would be criminal on our part to allow it. Instructions had, therefore, been given for its defence, and the Government had determined to protect the other treaty ports.

Mr. J. WHITE approved the determination of the Government, though their past policy did not meet his approbation. He thought that hereafter we might come to some arrangement with the Taepings.

Mr. BUCHANAN said very serious apprehensions were entertained in China from the progress of the Taepings, and the determination of the Government would be highly satisfactory.

Mr. MARSH gave particulars of the ill-treatment of the Chinese in Australia.

Mr. GREGSON withdrew his resolution.

A FRIGHTFUL VOLCANIC ERUPTION has taken place in the Moluccas. It is thus described in communications from Ternate:—In the afternoon of the 28th December the sky to the south of Ternate gave signs of a conflagration, and continued to do so until the following day. About mid-day of the 29th the sky in that direction was very much overcast, and it blew a strong gale from the east. It was thought that there would be a speedy change of the wind, and that a heavy squall of wind and rain would take place, but soon afterwards both on Ternate and the neighbouring islands, showers of ashes, and towards evening, of sand, fell, while the night was so dark that a person could not distinguish his hand held up before his eyes. The showers of ashes and sand continued to fall throughout the whole night, and at daybreak the tops of houses and branches of trees, as well as the ground, were found to be covered with a layer of ashes and sand, two to three inches thick, while in some places beyond the town the ground was covered to the depth of six to eight inches. It was now conjectured that an eruption had taken place in the volcano on the island Makian (about seven German miles from Ternate) which had remained quiet for about eighty-two years. It was feared that the roofs of the houses at Ternate would be broken down by the weight of the ashes and sand, but this was prevented by a heavy fall of rain which swept the greater part away. In the forenoon of the 30th December, it began to get so dark at Ternate and the neighbouring islands, that it was necessary to light the lamps in the houses, and those who had occasion to go out of doors were obliged to use torches or lanterns and to cover themselves by umbrellas from the showers of ashes and sand which continued to fall. By two o'clock in the afternoon the darkness was so intense that no person recollected ever having found it so dark even at midnight. Great damage was caused by the ashes and sand. Large trees were broken or destroyed, and the vegetables completely buried, so that it was feared considerable scarcity of provisions would be experienced. The island of Makian was completely laid waste. Many of the inhabitants were killed, and the rest fled to Ternate and the neighbouring islands. Many were killed and wounded in their flight from the island by the red hot stones which fell into their boats. One man who ventured back to seek his family, reported that he did not find a single living creature on the island. Everything was buried under the ashes, which were seven or eight feet in depth in some places.—Singapore Free Press.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 5 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 3 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstandings, debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter of the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietary in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last; with her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £40,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Raneemuddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 39,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,
First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,
Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,
Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,
Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

As the public will naturally expect to have some particulars of the bulk of the Capital required for this undertaking, the Directors, after examining the books of the Firm and from other sources of information, believe the following figures to be nearly correct; but the Company will not be bound by them until they have been correctly ascertained:—

|   | Rs.       | £.     |
|---|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts ... ..                               | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies ... ..                | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|   | 3,82,500  | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises ... ..                         | 3,50,000  | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe ... ..                        | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad ... ..                   | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c., ... ..                               | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, Gas, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures ... .. | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine ... ..                         | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill ... ..                                 | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally ... ..                        | 13,800    | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad ... ..                      | 66,500    | 6,650  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Raneemuddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 24th February is for the most part satisfactory. The insurgent bands in Sumbulpore have been brought to their senses, and in Jynteah Major Rowlatt has stormed and burnt four stockaded villages, with the loss of two Sepoys killed and seventeen wounded. Of the rebels fifteen are known to have been killed, but their wounded were carried off. As the Khasiahs, however, still held out, General Showers had proceeded in person to the scene of active operations, taking with him the 33rd Regiment N.I. In Central India, again, Duriaow Sing, one of the outlawed Thakoors, was surprised at night by a detachment of the Military Police, and after a sharp contest shot through the head; but not before he had set fire to his hut, with the intention of preventing his female dependents from falling into the power of his pursuers. His wife and one of his relatives were, however, rescued from the flames.

The chief subject of comment in the Calcutta papers is Mr. Ritchie's Bill to punish breaches of contract by penal damages. Though founded on Mr. Beadon's measure, which was vetoed by Sir Charles Wood, its provisions are of a much less stringent nature, and consequently less satisfactory to European settlers. We shall probably have occasion to notice it more fully in our next issue.

Expression has been given, not in the best possible taste, to the unfortunate jealousy and distrust with which every Governor-general is usually regarded by the non-official community of Calcutta. No notice having been taken of the legislative services of Sir Barnes Peacock and Sir C. Jackson in the proclamation announcing the abolition of the late Council, the "Opposition"—consisting of almost every European resident not in Government employ—affected to believe that a slight had been intentionally offered to those learned judges, and accordingly took upon themselves to atone for the shortcomings of the Viceroy. An address expressive of their gratitude for the liberal policy advocated by these two members of the Legislative Council has accordingly been presented, and the local journals are in ecstasies with the defiant tone of Sir Barnes Peacock's reply. "It appears," he said, "to have been considered by some persons that the duty of a Legislative Councillor was merely to consult with and advise the Governor-General in matters of legislation. But that is a mistake. By the constitution of the Council each member had a vote equal to that of the Governor-General, and in practice the Governor-general was seldom present at the deliberations of Council. Each member of the Council had a grave and important duty to perform, and was bound in conscience, and before God, to discharge that duty faithfully. As long as they held the office of Councillor, they were bound to act independently, and to declare their opinions fearlessly and honestly."

The arrival of Lord Elgin was being looked forward to, but not with any impatience, as the noble earl is in great disfavour with "society" in the Presidency, for having impugned their courage at the outbreak of the mutinies. The gravamen of the charge lies, of course, in its being too well founded in fact. Forgetfulness of grievances is certainly not one of the most conspicuous characteristics of our worthy countrymen in the East. Notwithstanding the enlightened and conciliatory policy that has marked the last three years of Lord Canning's administration, they cannot forgive his deficiencies in 1857, and have, therefore, held aloof from the meeting convened by the Sheriff, at the request of many influential native gentlemen, with a view to express, in a suitable manner, "their unfeigned respect and gratitude for his general administration." With all respect for the Calcutta volunteers, we venture to think that Lord Canning's services will be gratefully remembered long after the last vestige of their gay costume has passed away, even from "Baron Nathan's" miscellaneous stores.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, March 1.

(Via Galle and Trieste).

A meeting of natives has been held, at which an address and a statue were voted to Lord Canning. Great confusion prevailed at the meeting, at which only three Europeans were present. A separate address was proposed for the general community. The difficulties in Bengal are increasing, owing to the inactivity of the Bengal Government. The saltpetre manufactures in Tirhoot have this season decreased ninety per cent., owing to the exorbitant demands of the landholders. The licence tax, which yielded annually six lakhs of rupees, has been abolished by the Viceroy. The cash balance of the Treasury on the 1st of February amounted to nearly fifteen and a-half millions against twelve and three-quarter millions on the same date last year. The revenue estimates have increased above three millions in two years. The disturbances in Sylhet continue, but the forces which have arrived there will, it is expected, shortly establish tranquillity.

A WATERING PLACE FOR INDIA.

In two years every variety of climate will be placed within an easy distance of every Englishman in India, by the completion of the railway system. Whether for health, or for that which is in the East its greatest preservative and restorer—change of scene with recreation—India will present facilities sometimes too tempting to allow the invalid to think of an expensive visit to England for himself and his family. What railways are doing to annihilate time and space on land, steamers are accomplishing at sea. To the steady though expensive boats of the P. and O. Company will soon be added the rival vessels of the French Messageries, and probably those of a third company, which will run its steamers to the Mutchah. The Burmah Company will soon send a steamer to every port, and to every important island, within a hundred miles of our coast. But while the delights of the Himalayan and Neilgherry sanitarium, and the wonders of the Central India plateau, may tempt the over-worked Anglo-Indian, he has no inducement to go to sea. There is many a hill and even coast sanitarium, but not one watering place like Brighton and Portobello, or island like the Isle of Wight and Arran. In spite of the sharks a few venturesome spirits do dare occasionally to practise sea-bathing off Balasore and the Andamans. The residents of Penang boast of their climate. But in addition to the fact that that island will soon be severed from India and made part of a crown colony, its advantages have been greatly overrated. It has no protected sandy bays. Its low land is almost as incapable of drainage as Bengal. Even the "hill" two thousand feet above the sea, is surrounded by so dense a forest and so large an extent of swamp, that it becomes but an inferior sanitarium. Healthy people might enjoy its beauties; invalids benefit only slightly by its advantages.

In addition to the desirability of having a good watering-place for the fast increasing English residents in India, there is the necessity of a marine sanitarium for our 80,000 soldiers. The evidence given before the Indian Sanitary Commission on this point is most full and emphatic. So strongly is the necessity of some such remedy felt by the Calcutta authorities that the old "Bentinck" is to be stationed at the Sandheads as a hospital for English officers. We are told by one witness—"men selected from debilitated bodies of troops should be first sent to maritime sanitarium." In fact, the presence of an atmospheric current from the ocean is the chief element in the prophylactic influences of the best sanitarium, and makes Newera Ellia, in Ceylon, and the Neilgherries so superior to the Himalayas. Not merely are there diseases which only the magic influence of the sea can cure, and which on the hills end in certain death, but fatal results are often produced by the too sudden transfer of patients from a tropical to a temperate climate. The invaliding and transport to England of our sick soldiers are a frightful source of expense to India, and a marine sanitarium would, in almost all such cases, render a visit to England unnecessary. Financial reasons thus coincide with those of humanity. Before that commission the Cape and Western Australia were lauded as places to which the sick soldiers and officers of India should be sent. But what if we can find places equally good, and for great invalids far better, within a few miles of our own coast? The "Bentinck" may be an expensive hospital. What we want is a cheap sanitarium, to which it would be better if the "Bentinck" were employed to convey invalids.

Such a sanitarium, and such a watering-place as civil residents want, is Callagouk or Curlew Island, to which Dr. Macpherson, of Madras, and Captain Fraser, the engineer of the Alguada Light-house, have directed the serious attention of Government. It is 15 miles from the mainland of Tenasserim, and thirty miles south of Amherst Point, above which the Salween debouches into the Bay of Bengal, is Curlew Island. Its greatest length is eight miles, and its breadth one and a quarter. The remarkable trees on the summit of its rocky ridge, five hundred feet above the sea, are a guide for the sailor as he approaches the coast. Opposite Tenasserim the ridge descends to the sea in gentle slopes. On the west, facing the wide expanse of the Bay of Bengal, the hills with level well raised form three bays, each with a sandy beach protected from the monsoon, and most alluring to the bather. In Quarry Bay Captain Fraser has planted his head quarters, and there he procures the granite blocks for Lord Dalhousie's Alguada Lighthouse. Out of a strength of some 600 men there were only six deaths during the year from dysentery and fever among the natives, and not one among the Europeans. And this, in spite of the fact that they are mere pioneers, planted near a mangrove swamp on an uncleared island. Not only might whole armies bathe in the bays, but they afford smooth sheets of water for yachting and fishing. Ascending from Retreat Bay the hills are found to be clothed with fine primeval forest, with which Captain Fraser feeds his steamer. Under the overshadowing branches of the trees, which are of immense height, a road might with ease be carried along the ridge, which affords a perfect level for five miles. As the spectator stands there facing up the Bay of Bengal, he sees on his right the bold coast of Tenasserim, with the large town of Jea and the village of Lemyne, whence boats are constantly arriving with supplies, and on the other the wide expanse of sea, with the whole contour of the island. Here and there the ridge opens out into fine plateaux forming admirable sites for houses, and in more cases than one for barracks sufficient to accommodate a whole regiment. In the month of June the residents sleep under blankets. No punkas are used, the average heat being 75 deg. At the very hottest time the thermometer does not rise higher than 88 deg. A perennial spring of the sweetest water flows through the island.

Had nature made a marine sanitarium and watering place to order, a better could not have been produced. It is equally near to Calcutta and Madras, and is part of British Burmah, which seems really the healthiest of all our provinces. Thrice a month the Burmah Company's steamers would touch there, if necessary. Shall we ever see the invalids of Northern and Eastern India drinking in health from its breezes, bathing in its waters, boating and fishing over its tranquil bays? Is the time far distant when the Calcutta merchant or Madras clerk will leave there his wife and children in May, and return to spend a month with them in October? Why should not India have her Brighton? All that is required is a year's notice to clear away the underwood of Curlew Island, and prepare the most eligible sites. The expense would be trifling, for building materials abound. A detachment of convicts from the Andamans would do half the work. There and at the Andamans a sardine fishery, too, might be established, which would rival that of the Mediterranean. We are only now beginning to learn of what natural wealth and beauty we have been made the stewards. Now is the time to utilise both, so long as Captain Fraser has his army of pioneers on the spot, and is willing to make Callagouk into the first of the eastern spas.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYMENEAL BOATS.—It is no news to tell our readers that a Kulin Brahman can marry as many wives as he likes; but it is news, to all our European readers at least, that there are certain Brahmans in Bengal who find the greatest difficulty in getting married to even one wife, and who generally spend their life in single wretchedness. These are Bangshaja Brahmans of the Shrotriya class. While a Kulin Brahman gets for every wife that he marries a handsome bribe, a Bangshaja Shrotriya Brahman has to pay down a large sum of money to the father of the girl whose hand he seeks to obtain. The consequence is, that owing to their poverty, numbers of Bang- shaja Shrotriya Brahmans never get married at all. To remedy this evil, there prevails in Eastern Bengal a practice, of the existence of which we were informed only the other day, by a vernacular contemporary. When in any village the number of unmarried Shrotriyas becomes inconveniently large, one of the ghataks of the place—those under-servants of Biphata who take a prominent part in all marriages—goes to Shrihatta. There, with the assistance of his agents in the district, and by means, whether fair or foul, he procures a number of girls, to whom he holds out the prospect of a pleasant settlement in life. The girls may not all be Brahman girls—some of them may be of the Chandal caste, and others may be young widows—but whatever may be their caste, character, and antecedents, they are huddled together in a boat, often fifteen or sixteen in number, and taken to the ghaut of the Shrotriya village. The faces of the old Shrotriya bachelors become lighted up with joy when they hear of the arrival of the hymeneal boat. The sensation which these highly-favoured boats create in Eastern Bengal is infinitely greater than that produced in Calcutta by the orange-boats of Sylhet, or the mango-boats of Malda. The jolly Bangshaja bachelors besiege the boat in numbers. Each one selects a girl according to his taste, a bargain is struck with the ghatak, and the celebration of the rites of marriage, according to the forms prescribed in the Shastras, soon follows. The plain-looking girl, for whom no Shrotriya may have a fancy, is employed as a maid-servant either of the ghatak himself, or of any other who may stand in need of her services. The vernacular contemporary, to whom we are indebted for our knowledge of this custom, inveighs against the practice in no measured terms; and, indeed, calls upon the Government to put a stop to it. For ourselves, we see nothing wrong in the practice. It cannot be pretended that the girls are seduced from Sylhet; they come of their own accord, being allured by the prospects held out to them by the ghataks, which prospects are, in nine cases out of ten, always realised. Why such marriages should prove more unhappy than ordinary Bengali marriages we cannot understand. In the former, the man selects his wife; whereas in the latter case there is never exercised any choice at all. That Shudranis are sometimes passed off as Brahmani girls inflicts hardship on none; while the marriage of young widows is productive of benefit to the country. Nor can it be pretended that the girls, disposed of by the ghatak for monetary considerations, are actually sold. It is no sale in the ordinary sense of that word, it being but just and proper that the ghatak should be rewarded for his pains. That the girls thus disposed of are not reduced to servitude it is needless to add; they take the position and enjoy the rights and privileges of ordinary Bengali wives. Indeed, when we consider the immorality which this practice staves off, we cannot but think that the girls-boats of Eastern Bengal do more good to the Hindoo community than the orange-boats of Sylhet, or the mango-boats of Malda. We are aware that it would be better at once to remove the difficulties which lie in the way of poor Shrotriya Brahmans getting married; but so long as those obstacles are not removed, the services of the ghataks in opening a marriage-market must be confessed to be of no little importance.—Indian Reformer.

DELHI, Feb. 15.—I am glad to be able to tell you of a very fair fall of rain, accompanied by boisterous wind and lightning, on Thursday evening. This has lowered the temperature, though I fear the change is but temporary. The Nabha Rajah is coming in to-day; his camp is pitched near the Lahore Gate. I do not know what his particular business here may be, or how long he will remain. Major Stuart Graham, our officiating deputy-commissioner, is going to that lively station Khotuck. By all accounts there is just now in the Punjab such a glut of commissioners and deputy-commissioners waiting for somebody else's shoes that some must be disappointed. Our officiating deputy-commissioner is of this number, I fear; but as he has passed most of his time at the Kootub, not a very gay locality, he will, perhaps, appreciate the little country place to which he stands transferred. Mr. Cooper is expected to-day, and as soon as he arrives I suppose Major Graham will leave. I wonder if the local authorities are aware that, notwithstanding the order prohibiting the sale of gunpowder, &c., fireworks were last night discharged in the public highways of Delhi. Yesterday was the Subrat, a Mohomedan festival, and in former days, when the ex-King of Delhi was at the head of the faithful, the whole of the night was occupied in discharging fireworks. The mutiny put a stop to this, but they are now gradually coming back to the old state of things. Squibs and crackers can be purchased in the bazaars, and the contents of half-a-dozen crackers put into a musket would propel a musket bullet with sufficient force to make a large hole in the skin of a Christian. These fireworks are, I am told, made in Calcutta and sent up-country; they are very cheap, a dozen crackers being procurable for one pice. If our police are not on the alert Delhi will very soon be quite as inflammatory as it was prior to 1857. The ruffian Mogul Beg is awaiting the orders of the higher Court of Lahore; but from all I can learn of the nature of the evidence his fate is sealed.—Englishman.

FALL OF A SERAI AT PESHAWUR.—The Lahore Chronicle gives the following account of a melancholy accident that occurred in the city of Peshawur on the 25th of January, namely, the fall of a large two-storied Serai close to the Yuktoot Gate. There were fifty or sixty persons, and about the same number of cattle within the building. About seven P.M. the side wall was observed to totter and detached pieces fell, and shortly afterwards the whole building fell in with a tremendous crash. Nine persons were crushed to death, ten severely hurt, and thirty-eight escaped without injury. Forty-three bullocks and fourteen asses were killed. Intimation of the occurrence did not reach the deputy-commissioner till nearly eleven o'clock at night, when all was over, owing to his absence in the Commander-in-Chief's camp, but Lieutenant Sandeman and Mr. Scarlett went at once to the spot and exerted themselves in rescuing the sufferers. Both these officers highly praise the conduct of the Kotwul and the city police on the occasion,—the former in his efforts to drag out, at some risk to himself, the sufferers from the mass of debris, and the latter in the assistance rendered by them in the way of nourishment to the wounded. The Serai was tenanted chiefly by Affreedies and Khuttucks, sellers of grass, grain, and wood. The deputy commissioner carefully inspected the site. There does not appear to be any blame attaching to the owner. The building was constructed like the majority of the houses in the city, mud walls with wooden props supporting the upper story, and the first intimation of the weakness of the building appears to have been the shaking of the wall which immediately preceded the crash. The Government have directed with reference to the peculiar mode of constructing houses in Peshawur, and the shocks of earthquake to which they are frequently subjected, that a more vigilant and more frequent inspection of public buildings than is necessary elsewhere should be enjoined on the police.

THE LAST OF THE REBELS IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The greatest haunt of Tantia Topce and the rebel chiefs of Central India in 1858-59 was the Lullupore jungle. We have intelligence that on the 7th February, Duriaow Sing, the Thakoor outlaw, was killed at his ancestral village of Deoram in this district, by the military police and the detachment of the Bareilly Levy stationed at the thannah of Murowra. They surprised him in his hut at night. To keep within the law our men were obliged to summon him to surrender, which put him on the alert. The reply he gave to this challenge was with a bullet. They then opened fire on him and wounded him in the leg, which appears to have rendered him very desperate, as he continued firing on the men from matchlocks which he had ready for use beside him. He then set fire to his hut so that, according to Rajpoot honour, he and his might perish together. When the flames were somewhat subdued his body was dragged out, and it was discovered that a bullet in the head had killed him. Fortunately only one man of the Bareilly Levy was wounded in the leg during the fight. The rebel's wife and one of his female relations, by the aid of our sepoy, escaped from the flames unscathed. The attack being made at night, two of his followers, unimportant men, escaped. His death will tend greatly to settle this part of the country, which he and other outlaws have kept in a disturbed state since the mutiny. His capture was most cleverly effected by an intelligent subadar of the police, Doorga Persaud, formerly of the Gwalior Contingent, and who behaved so nobly in aiding the escape of our officers from Sepree when the mutiny broke out there. This man has hitherto been unrewarded. Only two other Thakoors now remain in outlawry, Davee Sing and Gundrup Sing, a relation of Duriaow. The first-mentioned is the robber who has been making forays into the Saugor villages for months past, capturing and taking off men of wealth for ransom, maiming others, and committing other acts of atrocity. Captain T. A. Corbett has had charge of the district for the last fifteen months, and during his administration three more outlaw Thakoors of note have been captured or shot, which reflects credit on his arrangements. Gradually in Central India and at Sumbulpore the last relics of the mutineers are being picked up. None but Asiatic freebooters and mutineers would have so long maintained a desperate and hopeless contest. We trust the day is not far distant when the jungles of the Central and North-Western Provinces, in which for four years the rebels have found a secure hiding place, will be pierced by roads, through Lullupore on the west and Sumbulpore on the east, along which the cotton of Nagpore and Saugor will find its way to the Ganges and Bombay.—Friend of India.

H.M.'s 75th.—On the occasion of the departure of H.M.'s 75th Regiment for England, the Governor-general has addressed to the corps a complimentary farewell order, in which are gracefully grouped and passed in review many glorious deeds and recollections, and many historic men. His Excellency takes up the regiment in June, 1857, when it was one of the first to join in the formation of General Anson's army to advance upon Delhi; then notices the gallant conduct of the corps at the battle of Budlee-ke-serai, where, as part of the brigade of Brigadier, now Brigadier-general, Showers, C.B., it took a prominent part in the capture of the enemy's batteries; and refers to the losses which it endured, both by battle and disease, during the four months' siege in the camp before Delhi. Its share in the storming of the city, as part of the column of the lamented Nicholson, is then noticed by his Excellency, who thence follows the regiment in Greathed's column at the battles of Bolundshuhur, Allyghur, and Agra, and on to Lucknow, where it took part in Lord Clyde's relief, in the gallant Outram's occupation of the Alumbagh, and in the final capture of the place. His Excellency concludes by wishing the 75th a warm farewell, and a prosperous and happy voyage to England. We have seldom read a better general order than the one now noticed, which, in a plain and simple manner, but still in warm terms of commendation, passes in review some of the most glorious exploits of the British arms in India, and the gallant behaviour of a regiment which, with reference to them, may truly say, "Quorum pars magna fui."

THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—We (Friend of India) understand that one of the Bachelors of Arts of the Calcutta University, educated in Dr. Duff's Institution, is a candidate for the degree of Master of Arts. He has chosen the subject of the mental and moral sciences, and has voluntarily professed jurisprudence and the evidences of revealed religion as contained in Butler's "Analogy" and Paley's "Evidences," for examination. The examiners appointed are, in logic and rhetoric, Mr. Jones, of the Presidency College; in mental and moral philosophy, Mr. George Smith; in jurisprudence, Mr. Macpherson; and in natural theology, Dr. Mullens. The result of the examination, which is to take place in the first week of March, will be interesting not only because India has not yet one master of arts, but because a Hindoo educated in a missionary college will be examined in the evidences of revealed religion—a subject which the Court of Directors considered so dangerous to the existence of the British power in the East that they desired it should be struck out of the university curriculum, and sanctioned its retention only after the strong protest of the University Senate supported by Lord Canning. As the public ceremony of conferring degrees has been postponed from next Saturday, the proper day, it is just possible Lord Canning may leave the duty of presiding as Chancellor to his successor.

PUBLIC WORKS.—At last Cachar has a chance of a system of roads. The Lieutenant governor of Bengal has assigned Rs. 8,000 from the allotment of 1½ lakhs of rupees to be expended during 1861-62 made by the Government of India for cotton roads, for a road up the Hylakandy Valley, and a road to the east side of the Chuttak Bheel. Lieutenant Heywood, of the Bengal engineers, has been appointed to the executive charge of the Sylhet division. The rest will be spent on the opening out of the Wurdah and Mahanuddy Valleys, so that the cotton grown there may be exported from the Cuttack coast, and on the improvement of the road from Chuttra, which is a cotton district, to Champaran, on the Grand Trunk Road, forming the first portion of a road to connect Palamow with the Grand Trunk Road. In the N.W. provinces, 1½ lakhs are to be spent as follows:—On the less difficult part of the road from Kuchla Ghat to Hattrass, Rs. 44,000, which will open up Rohilcund; road from Doorgowtee, on the Grand Trunk road via Ghazeeapore and Deorhee Ghat on the Gogra towards Goruckpoor, rupees 25,000; road from Etawah to Bhind, rupees 48,000; Mynpoorie section of the Furruckabad and Etawah road, rupees 35,000. This will complete the road, bridged and metalled throughout, between Furruckabad via Bewur on the Grand Trunk road, and the railway station at Etawah and Bhind. In Nagpore the construction of the following roads is in active progress. The great Deccan road, north of Nagpore, rupees 20,000; ditto, south 20,000; Southern road towards Chanda 20,000. In Berar rupees 25,000 are being spent on railway feeders. We are glad to see that an attempt is being made to connect Nagpore with the east coast. To enable the cotton of Bustar to reach Vizagapatam, and at the same time to open out the wild tract of Jeypore, a road is being made over the Galikondah hills to Jeypore, at a cost of 9,000 rupees. It will be continued to Bustar.

SEARCH FOR ARMS.—Orders have been issued by Government that magistrates of districts which have not been exempted from the operation of the Arms Act shall empower European police officers to institute search for arms whenever and wherever they may have reason to believe that arms are concealed, or that those having permits are in possession of more than they have registered. It is believed that the necessity that has hitherto existed for every police officer to obtain a magistrate's warrant before instituting a search has enabled parties who have concealed arms to remove them before the search could be instituted. Provided a European police officer be present to legalise the act, search may be made at any moment. It is possible that, in some localities, there may be a necessity for so stringent an order. It is to be hoped, however, that European residents are exempted from any such action on the part of police officers. A search of one's house at the will of an inimical police officer is certainly not desirable, nor likely to be tamely submitted to by irascible English gentlemen.

H.M.'s 37th N. I.—The Commander-in-Chief being gratified with the state of the 37th N. I., which formed his Excellency's escort from Jullundur to Peshawur, promoted Lieutenant Fox, the Adjutant, to be second in command, and Lieutenant Montriou to the Adjutancy; in succession to Lieutenant Sheffield, transferred to the barrack department.

MEDICAL FURLONGS.—According to the Englishman, "officers who went home to England on sick certificate, in consequence of wounds or sickness contracted in the military campaigns of 1857-58-59, have been, on furnishing satisfactory medical certificates that their wounds or illness were the result of service and exposure against the enemy in the field, allowed to count as service the periods of furlough during which they were absent from India in Europe. Than this concession nothing could be more liberal and considerate; but the merit of granting the boon is detracted from by the partiality of its application, which treats one body of officers with full favour, whilst another body receives but half, or less than half, the advantage of the gift. Medical officers who are to count the sick leave in question "as service in India," do so as regards pension; but it bars their promotion, for which it does not count. It is highly probable that in the promised measure for effecting the retirement of a large number of the senior medical officers, promotion will to a great many mean pension too; and if this be the case, the gift of the time passed in Europe on sick leave to count as service in India, will be simply useless and a mockery. Medical officers who complete twenty years in the service, and naturally expect their promotions from surgeons-major, will find themselves mistaken if they think that a year of the sick leave in question, "allowed to count as service in India" will go into the eighteen years actual service in this country, necessary to qualify for the latter grade; as, on the completion of twenty years' service, with two years' ordinary furlough, and one year mutiny furlough, they will find the latter tell against them like the former, and will only count seventeen years' service in India for promotion, leaving them still another year to serve for the grade of surgeon-major. Take, on the other hand, the line officer who may have had two years' mutiny sick furlough to England. When his promotion by a line step, or by a regimental casualty comes round, those two years are no bar to his promotion; but he steps into the higher grade at once and without subterfuge. It is said here, by those who ought to be well informed in the matter, that all the injustice done to the medical officers in this matter will be revoked and rectified, but at present there is no appearance of it."

PROBYN'S HORSE.—A Punjab correspondent of the Englishman writes as follows:—"I saw in your paper, a short time ago, an instance of sudden and unexpected promotion suddenly alighting upon a young officer whose smartness on parade, and acquaintance with his duties, attracted the favourable attention of the Chief. The same thing has occurred more extensively in the case of Probyn's Horse up here; his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief having been so pleased with the regiment when inspected, and with the officers, that he selected three for promotion and reward; Captain Godby, second in command, to command the 15th Bengal cavalry, vice Colonel Cureton going away on leave; Lieutenant Dick, adjutant, to be second in command; and Lieutenant Macaulay to be adjutant. In this way you will get officers to work."

THE LITTLE WAR IN ASSAM is assuming larger proportions, and about to become expensive. The 33rd Regiment N. I. at Barrackpore, commanded by Major Langmore, is ordered to Assam, and will proceed there by river steamers in a few days. The 16th N. I., or Lucknow Regiment, at Allipore, is ordered to hold itself in readiness to move at the shortest notice, if required; and, finally, General Showers leaves the presidency for Assam, and to look up the whole frontier in that direction, about the 1st of March. As all this expense and trouble has become necessary in order to bring the savage tribes on the south east border of the empire to quiet and submission, we hope that such treatment will be administered to them as will show them that Government understands perfectly well the difference of treatment that ought to be exhibited in the case of a productive agrarian population, in opposition to law and order, and a horde of useless mountain savages, who have no claim to mercy or political consideration, except inasmuch as and when they remain quiet and abstain from aggression. In other words, the welfare and prosperity of the inhabitants of the plains, and of our own territories, are a test of our good government, and a benefit to the community at large; whereas the annihilation of the tribes which are now causing so much trouble and expense, so far from injuring a single interest in the country, would be a local, provincial, and public gain. They should, if possible, be treated in such a manner as to make them know this and act accordingly. The embarrassed finances of the empire have to pay for the freaks of these savages; and we hope that General Showers will make an example of them.

DHERA ISMAIL KHAN, Feb. 10.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by an aide-de-camp, Major Sarel, Major Roberts, and General Chamberlain, has passed through here going down the frontier at a thundering pace, averaging fifty miles a day; and they rode fifty-two the first day of their journey, out of Kohat. They are really flying light, with no tents, of course, and a supply of baggage which even Sir Charles Napier himself would not hesitate to chalk and pass at a glance as much under the Orthodox allowance. His Excellency's intention is, I hear, to continue his gallop to a place called Kushmore, which you will find on the map on the right bank of the Indus, far below Mooltan, and at the uppermost point of the Scinde frontier. I hope that no accident or break down will interfere with the accomplishment of this fine ride, which will, if successfully completed, be a remarkable performance. At Kushmore the Commander-in-Chief and his party draw bridle and halt for a few days, and then turn their horses' heads northwards, via Mooltan, Ferozepore, and Umballah, to Simlah; the head quarters camp halting for his Excellency at Ferozepore. The camp is recrossing the Punjab by regular marches and ought to be at Rawul Pindie to day. Nothing whatever out of the common routine doing at this station. The weather still fine, cold, and clear; and all out door amusements practicable throughout the day.

GALLANT CONDUCT OF A TEA PLANTER.—Letters from Seesagur state that Mr. Minto, a tea planter, on a recent inroad of the Bordabias Nagas into that district, collected the villagers at the Moreanee factory, which he successfully defended against the Nagas, and subsequently, by his energetic measures, drove them back and established the authority of Government. This is one of the few instances recorded of many which have occurred, in which the Government has been indebted to the courage and skill of the non-official Mofussil resident for the maintenance of its authority in remote districts of the Indian Empire. We trust that the Government will not be slow in recording its sense of Mr. Minto's services; for by prompt acknowledgment of such services rendered, the Government does much to encourage similar action in other quarters, and to create a good understanding with the non-official Europeans, widely scattered as they are throughout India.

WASTE LANDS, N.W.P.—The Landholders' Association has most properly addressed the Government of India on the extent to which the rules for the disposal of waste lands in the North-West Provinces, passed by the Lieutenant-governor, narrow the liberal provisions of Lord Canning's resolutions of the 17th of October. These rules reduce the 5,000 acres area to 3,000, and for tea land to 2,000—an area which is not sufficient for a joint-stock company or large capitalist. They also attach certain restrictions as to grass and timber on purely waste lands, which interfere with the owner's absolute rights. They ask what we have so long called for—a system of registration of tenures. They interpret, rather hastily we fear, the commutation rule in the case of previous grants. Thus: the proportion of land to be commuted at 2-8, and that to be commuted at Rs. 5 an acre will depend on the state of land when the grant was made, and not on the condition it may have been brought to by the grantee.

MAJOR H. K. BURNE remains permanently in the military secretariat, as deputy military secretary to the Government of India under Colonel Norman. Every person who for years has had business to transact at the military secretary's office, and those who may hereafter be similarly situated, will be glad of this appointment; which, in addition to official capacity, ensures the greatest possible amount of obliging attention and politeness, without reference to rank or position, for all applicants, high or low, rich or poor, at the military secretary's office.

COLONEL OLPHERTS, C.B.—The command of the Convalescent Depot at Murree has been conferred, by His Excellency the Commander in Chief, upon Lieutenant colonel W. Olpherts, C.B., of the artillery, an officer of well-known gallantry and distinguished service.

THE RAJAH OF KUPPURTHULLA, with his brother, attended recently a Masonic Lodge in Calcutta.

THE MUZBEES.—The Rev. Mr. Clarke and his wife have devoted themselves entirely to the work among the Muzbees of the late 24th P. I. stationed at Attock. A chapel has been built, which is used as a school during the week. From 40 to 80 attend church, and there are 30 scholars. There are 50 Christians connected with the regiment, of whom 16 are Sepoys. There are 15 communicants.

MR. W. M. LOW, C.S.—The Secretary of State has granted Mr. W. M. Low, of the Bengal Civil Service, a gratuity of eighteen months' regimental pay as a captain, for the wound which he received in action in September, 1857.

SANITARIUM AT CHERAT.—A Peshawar letter states that it is intended to form a convalescent station and sanitarium at a place called Cherat, about thirty miles distant from Peshawar; and that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief had inspected the position and signified his approval. The only probable objection to the project is a political one; the possibility of our being brought into hostile contact with the wild and jealous hill tribes in the vicinity, who are already sufficiently averse to our presence in those parts.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MADRAS SANITARIA.—The Madras Government have issued a report on the hill stations and sanitarium of the presidency. The plan lately introduced into Bombay of dividing the hill sanitarium, not exclusively military, into classes, allowing the first an annual grant of Rs. 10,000, and the second Rs. 5,000, as also of crediting such stations with all receipts from land and houses, grass and timber, within the limits of the station, as also fines, but not income-tax receipts or abkarry, has been adopted in Madras with regard to the only two sanitarium to which it is applicable, the Neilgherries and the Shevaroy. Ootacamund is treated as a sanitarium of the first class. The levy of tolls on the main approaches to these stations is sanctioned.

WORKS ON THE GODAVERY.—A letter from the Madras Government in the official Gazette gives an account of the present state and prospects of the Godavery works. The "temporary" works are estimated to cost nearly three lakhs of rupees for railways, rolling stock, boats, ponies, superintendence, &c. The improvement of the river bed is expected to require about rupees 25,000. Thus, for about three and a quarter lakhs, the river will be opened for traffic by the next freshes, and the cotton crop of the present season be brought down by it to the coast. These temporary works were not designed to supersede the permanent works; their object was to open the river as speedily as possible, to attract trade into this new channel, and to afford data for the more perfect operations, the completion of which will be very expensive and will occupy some years. Even when the permanent works are finished, these temporary works will be useful as subsidiaries in drawing traffic, supplies, and labour. It must be borne in mind also that the permanent works must be completed throughout to be of real use, for the great market which has to be reached is beyond the Upper Barrier, the intermediate country being poor and sparsely populated. Captain Haig, expecting a surplus of labour, has been allowed to "proceed with the ancient and such other work at the first Barrier as will not commit Government to the construction of the large locks proposed by him. This will afford ample employment for the present for the labour at his command. He expects to be able to spend about five lakhs this year. Steamers have been placed on the navigable reaches of the river, and cargo boats are being built. At the outset the Government must of necessity act as carriers of the traffic, and the requisite arrangements have been sanctioned; but the principle is unsound, and they will therefore leave this duty to private agency at the earliest practicable period."

THE INAM COMMISSION.—A letter from G. N. Taylor, Esq., Inam Commissioner, states that the number of cases decided by the Deputy Collectors during the month of December was 4,611, which raises the total number of cases decided from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of December, to 32,952. Besides these, 1,836 cases of village service Inams were registered during the month, of which 854 come under the head of Government village servants, which, under the rules, are enfranchised on 5-8ths of their assessment, and 982 under the head of village artisans. The total number of the several descriptions of service Inams registered up to the end of December is 1,01,821. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of December was 1,03,802, of which 32,600 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 1,02,678 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 54,365 were personal Inams enfranchised compulsorily; and 4,219 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds which have reached the hands of the Inamdars up to the end of last month was 1,27,365. The total amount of quit-rent payable to Government in addition to former Jodi is Rs. 3,21,152.

NORTH ARCOT.—From official accounts it seems that the agricultural prospects of the North Arcot district are most gloomy. The south-west monsoon, though late, was favourable, but the latter rains were a general failure, and the tanks in consequence are nearly dry. Thus the means of irrigating the crops is wanting, and the collector has strongly recommended that the Pooney and Palar ancient projects should be vigorously pushed on, and the irrigation works of the district be generally improved, so that they may be made available at an early date.

MADRAS AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—At the last meeting of the Agri-Horticultural Society of Madras a memorandum was read on the establishment of Government gardens, and the introduction of the Cinchona, in Travancore. The Rajah has granted Rs. 1,000 for the formation of the principal gardens with a glass house, Rs. 300 for importing plants, seeds, &c., and Rs. 40 a month for gardeners and coolies. The site selected is at a new station named Maryville, on the route between Allepy and Madura. The elevation, rain fall, and other advantages are favourable to the growth of the Cinchona. The Governor of Madras has promised that if the ground is prepared now some hundreds of plants will be allotted to Travancore in June next, the proper season for planting out. The first four Cinchona trees were planted in Travancore on the 11th Jan.

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN GRIFFIN.—Nearly two years ago Captain J. G. B. Griffin, of the 3rd Madras Europeans, was tried by court-martial in Allahabad on the charge of having, with the intent to defraud Mr. R. Carr, a wine merchant of that place, written to him a letter in a feigned hand and bearing the fictitious signature of "C. J. Erskine, Capt., 7th Light Cavalry," in which he ordered a small quantity of beer and brandy. Captain Griffin was found guilty, and sentenced to be cashiered. His defence was that he was called on by a person bearing that name, who asked the road to the sick officers' quarters, which were near at hand. Seeing him faint, Captain Griffin invited him to rest in his house, and, his guest's right arm being disabled, wrote a note to Mr. Carr, at his request, asking for the beer, &c. Meanwhile Erskine left, and the liquor supplied was sent on to the quarters. When Captain Griffin joined his regiment at Jubbulpore, Carr applied to him for payment, because no such person as Captain Erskine was known to be in or to have passed through Allahabad. Captain Griffin paid the bill. This happened in August, 1859, and nearly a year after he was accused of this offence. He declares himself to have been the victim of a conspiracy on the part of some tradesmen in Allahabad who were indebted to him. Dr. Buist, with that chivalrous feeling which always distinguished him, at once took up the cause of Captain Griffin, when he had satisfied himself on its soundness, and appeared as his advocate before the Court. As it was proved that the accused had already a large supply of the articles ordered, he was induced to throw himself into the case from the utter improbability of an officer of twenty-three years' not undistinguished service ruining his prospects and his family by so petty and purposeless a fraud. But so outrageous did Dr. Buist consider the charge to be that he thought it would prejudice his client's case to produce evidence for the defence, and so the sentence was passed that he be cashiered. Captain Griffin has now procured evidence which he believes to be of such a nature as, if it had been produced at his trial, would have led to his honourable acquittal. He has been informed by the Madras authorities, that in the event of its proving satisfactory he will be entitled to substantial justice. The matter is at present before Sir Hugh Rose, by whose predecessor the sentence was approved. There certainly seems to be a prima facie case for further inquiry.—Friend of India.

LILLIPUT LEGISLATORS.—The Madras journals are speculating on the probable working of the local Council, and the conclusions arrived at are not very encouraging. The Athenaeum says:—"As an illustration of the injudicious activity which we are inclined to dread, we may mention that one honourable legislator is said to be already engaged in preparing a draft Act for the summary punishment of persons flying kites and of servants who get drunk in their masters' houses. This was told to us not as a joke but as a serious piece of information, and we believe it to be authentic."

CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT.—The Madras Times states that some 400 youths assembled in Madras in the first week of February to be examined, 215 as University under-graduates, and the rest for employment in the uncovenanted service.

THE BANK OF MADRAS have applied to the local Government to authorise the establishment of branch banks. They suggest Bangalore, Cochin, and Ootacamund, to which might afterwards be added Cocanada, Negapatam, and Hyderabad. The Government sanction the establishment of branches and approve of Cochin, Ootacamund, Cocanada, and Negapatam. Bangalore and Hyderabad are not subject to the Government of Madras, but to the Calcutta Foreign Office.

LONDON MISSION INSTITUTION.—At the examination of the London Mission Institution in Madras recently, at which the Governor, Sir Hope Grant, and a number of the European community were present, the Rev. George Hall read a report on the educational department of the labours of the London Missionary Society in South India. The first schools were established fifty years ago, and there are now 275, of which 213 are for boys and 62 for girls, with an attendance of 9,031 of the former and 2,092 of the latter.

THE TEAK FORESTS OF PEGU.—We (Englishman) have received from the Government of India the report on the Teak Forests in Pegu, and the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces for 1860-61. The part most interesting to the mercantile community, is that in which the rules proposed for the lease of Teak Forests situated on the west side of the Irrawaddie and Bassein rivers are laid down, of which the following are of most importance:—Leases to be for twelve years, the rent payable to consist of a certain fixed rate per log or piece, provided that the total amount so paid shall not fall below a certain minimum amount, which is to be defined by means of tenders for the same. This minimum rent to be paid in advance for one year on the signing of the lease. Should the rate paid during any one year, on the timber felled, be below the minimum amount fixed as above, the lease to be cancelled. Thus, if a leaseholder neglects to girdle, fell, and convey to the river's bank sufficient timber in any one year to raise the rate per log to the minimum amount of rent fixed, he forfeits his lease. At the same time, he is prohibited killing any tree of less girth, six feet from the ground, than five feet, and this minimum girth it is further proposed to raise. All timber passing a timber station without paying duty, and all brought out of the forest by a leaseholder subsequent to expiry of his lease, to be liable to confiscation, as well as all timber cut from trees of less girth than six feet; and for every undersized tree felled the leaseholder will be liable to pay a fine of Rs. 100. The lease may be transferred, or assigned by will or otherwise, provided the deed of transfer is registered in the office of the Superintendent of Forests. All disputes with reference to forest boundaries to be subject to the decision of the Superintendent of Forests. The terms are, to all appearance, easy enough, and are calculated to preserve the forest, by preventing the destruction of small trees, although five feet circumference, six feet from the ground, appears to us to fix the standard far too low. These rules will have the effect of attracting monied men, for they are such as to render it impossible for men without means to work the forests. The necessity there is, to enable the leaseholder to retain his lease, that he should kill and convey to market a certain number of trees within a given period, will deter all those who cannot command capital sufficient to provide the means for fulfilling this provision from thronging the forests to the exclusion of men who can work them to their own and the State's advantage. It is proposed in this report, and agreed to by the Government of India, that the forests to be leased or opened to the public, cover an area of 940 square miles; this area is said to contain 733,400 first class trees now standing, of which 17,250 may be annually removed; or a little over 18 to the square mile. We conclude that this 17,250 is the number of inferior trees which will annually come up to the standard of first-class trees. From the report it further appears that rather above one-half the total area of teak forest in this locality in the possession of Government is to be thrown open.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RAILWAYS IN THE MAURITIUS.—Mr. Long ridge, engineer of the Mutlah Railway, is now in the Mauritius as joint contractor with Messrs. Brassy and Co., to construct the two lines of railway which he surveyed some years ago, and which Government has now sanctioned. The works will further drain India of coolies, a local paper boasting that four thousand are on their way to the colony for the contractors. The lines will be completed in three years. The capital is a million sterling, which the colony hopes to pay off in thirty years.

BOMBAY AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The Bombay Saturday Review says Bombay will figure as well in the International Exhibition as in those of 1851 and 1854. There is a very extensive series of raw vegetable produce, which has been named and catalogued with the greatest pains. Our cotton in particular has been done full justice. Every cotton, woollen, and silken fabric has also been obtained in every district of the presidency, in order that home manufacturers may vividly appreciate the manufacturing power of this country, and be stimulated to competition by the sight of the market they may command if they are as able as willing. There are, of showy manufactures, the silver work of Cutch, the carved wood of Guzerat and Bombay, the embroidery of Sindh, the kinkobs of Surat and Ahmedabad, the agates of Broach, the inlaid work of Bombay, and the various fancy articles of Sawunt Waree. The blackwood furniture of Bombay is said to be magnificent, but there was time only to order one drawing-room set, and that minus a sofa.

COTTON ROADS.—In Bombay cotton roads are sanctioned from Poona to Hurrayhur, on the Mysore Frontier, the main road to Madras through Dharwar; from the foot of Koombaree Ghaut to Gowalkote, through Becjapore, with a pier at Gowalkote; from Belgium to the coast by Par-poollee Ghaut; from Barsee and Malligum to the railway; from Penit to Bulsar, Nassick—according to new postal arrangements since the opening of the railways, the mails for Guzerat, Sindh, and the Punjab will traverse this road; from Chaleesgaum, the present terminus of those G. I. P. Railway to Dhoolia—the mails and transport train for the North-Western Provinces have adopted this route. The whole will cost two and three quarters of lakhs.

DEATH OF MISS FARRAR.—The Friend of India regrets to notice the death of perhaps the most devoted lady missionary in India, Miss Cynthia Farrar, of the American Mission, Ahmednuggur. She landed in India thirty-four years ago, and her beauty and grace drove more than one distinguished official distracted. She refused the hand of a civilian of high Christian character, now a member of Council, because she had devoted herself for life to missionary work. Few have done so much for native female education as she, and she was seldom heard of beyond the limits of her own circle. Two such deaths as hers and Mrs. Mullens' within a few weeks of each other are a great blow to the cause.

BROACH COTTON owes its superiority to the fact that in 1850, Government established places at Broach and Surat for the examination and stamping of cotton bales so as to prevent fraud. Government resolved to discontinue these establishments, when the merchants protested and offered to pay a small fee. The measure has consequently been suspended only until an Act shall be passed sufficient for all purposes, as the supervision is a duty which belongs to the dealers, and not to Government.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS (Bombay, March 12, by Telegraph from Alexandria).—Shirts and Mule Twist dull and declining; 8½ lb. shirtings, 5rs. 11s. Cotton active and advancing; Broach, 220rs. Copper dull and declining; sheeting, 57rs.; tile, 56rs. Opium, Malwa, 1,510rs. per chest.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Feb. 15.—The past fortnight has not materially altered the complexion of affairs in China or Japan, though one or two events of considerable significance fall to be recorded.

From Japan an embassy has been despatched to England and the other treaty Powers on the continent of Europe. The ambassadors are men of rank, and are accompanied by one of the Consular student-interpreters. An official difficulty, of consequence only as showing the manner in which the Japanese wish to limit our movements, occurred at Yokohama recently. A procession of great officials, with their respective retinues, were journeying to Yedo about the beginning of last month, and application was made to the Ministers to forbid foreigners to traverse the road on the first two days; we are informed that the French Minister ordered, and the British Minister requested, the residents under their jurisdiction to attend to this application, and avoid appearing on the road at the time mentioned. Meantime the Japanese shut the gates leading from the foreign settlement, upon which Mr. Alcock warned the Governor of Yokohama, and threatened to land a force in order to raze the barriers to the ground. The Governor stated that the gates were not closed by his authority. A fire in Yedo has destroyed two or three streets, and entirely consumed the palace of the Prince of Satsuma. There is a rumour that Mr. Alcock will return to England soon; in which case, we suppose, Dr. Winchester will take the position of plenipotentiary.

From Pekin we have no particular intelligence; it is said that Prince Kung is exceedingly affected by the state of the kingdom under his rule. He deplores principally the inefficiency of the army, and the corruption that prevails among the mandarins, the one being in many respects the cause of the other. At the same time it must be confessed that an unusual supineness exists on the part of the Imperial Government; for since the capture of Nankin, some time last summer, their troops have scarcely ever been heard of as fighting, and never as victorious. The rebel troops, on the other hand, have become more powerful by the capture of Hangchow and Ningpo. When we last wrote they were threatening Shanghai, and our admiral was engaged in preparations for driving them back. It was not so clear then whether we should defend the city of Shanghai as well as the settlement, but advices have since been received which leave no doubt as to Foreign protection being extended to the Chinese city; intimidation has been conveyed to the insurgents that Shanghai and Woosung are in our possession, and they have been given to understand that any molestation of these places will be at their own peril. Meantime, a heavy fall of snow, and a period of very cold weather, has prevented the rebels from taking the field; but, according to the latest accounts, good weather was beginning to return, and with it had appeared bands of rebel skirmishers in the neighbourhood of Shanghai. It is impossible for us to say positively what view the Taepings may take of our power and position, or to what extent they may dispute our right to protect Shanghai, but certain recent circumstances tend to the belief that they really contemplate hostility to foreigners. The Rev. Mr. I. J. Roberts, who has been among them as missionary at Nankin, and up to a recent date received good treatment there, has suddenly experienced such a change in their behaviour towards him that he no longer considered his life to be safe in Nankin.

From the various other ports there is no particular news, except that a tea ship, the Magnolia, for London, had got on shore on leaving Foo-chow.

An attempt is being made at present to get up a volunteer corps in Hong Kong, as it is strongly felt that we are, in this respect, disgracefully behind the age. When his Excellency the Governor was spoken to about it, he frowned, and his Colonial Secretary did the same; but the thing is likely to go on notwithstanding.

Return Home of H.M.'s 75th Foot.

Fort William, Feb. 20.—H.M.'s 75th regiment being about to embark for England after a service of more than twelve years in India, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council desires to express to the corps the approbation with which the Government of India views its services.

The regiment was one of the very first to take the field in May, 1857, having been rapidly moved down from Kussowlie on the first intelligence of the outbreak at Meerut.

It was attached to the force assembled at Umballah under the immediate order of H.E. the late General the Hon. G. Anson, for the purpose of moving on Delhi, and as part of the brigade of Brigadier (now Brigadier General) Showers, c.b., greatly distinguished itself at the attack on, and capture of the enemy's batteries at Budlee Serai on the 8th June, 1857.

The regiment served throughout the siege of Delhi, sustaining very heavy loss of officers and men, both by casualties in action and from sickness caused by exposure in camp during the hot season and rains.

At the final assault the regiment formed part of the column led by the lamented Brigadier general John Nicholson, and was one of the first corps established within the walls.

After the capture of Delhi, the remnant of the regiment was attached to the column that defeated the rebels at Bolundshuhur, Allyghur, and Agra, and in various subsequent actions; and took part in the final relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde.

For many weeks the 75th regiment assisted to hold the Alum Bagh position, and for its conduct in action received the approbation of Lieutenant general Sir James Outram.

The Viceroy and Governor-general in Council has pleasure in placing on record the valuable services of this regiment, and cordially wishes it a prosperous voyage to England and every success hereafter.

H. M. NORMAN, Lieut. col.,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

Official Papers.

ABOLITION OF THE LICENCE TAX.

Financial Dept., Fort William, Feb. 21.—Read reports by the auditor gen. of India and the civil paymasters of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the N. W. Provinces, and the Punjab, on the cash balances of India for the months of November and December, 1861, and January, 1862.

Read also revised estimates prepared in the financial department of the revenues and charges and the cash requirements of India for the year 1861-62.

Resolution.—During three years the financial condition of India, consequent upon the mutiny, has made it necessary that new taxes should be imposed upon the country.

Amongst these taxes is the duty on arts, trades, and dealings, commonly called the licence tax.

The law by which this tax is imposed was passed on the 16th July, 1861.

It is a tax which falls chiefly upon the various classes of artisans, mechanics, and petty traders.

That these, as well as the wealthier classes, should, in proportion to their means, contribute to the support of the State, is just in itself, and is consonant with the usages of India; and the Gov. gen. in Council has no reason to suppose that this principle is not understood and contentedly acknowledged by all.

It is the conviction of the Gov. gen. in Council that the licence tax may be equitably and advantageously adopted as part of the financial system of India whenever the exigencies of the State shall make it necessary.

But the Gov. gen. in Council desires not to impose taxes upon any classes without necessity; and the improvement which has now shown itself in the financial condition of India enables the Government to dispense with the sum which would have been yielded by the Licence-tax.

This improvement is demonstrated by the returns lately received under the new system of account and audit, and by the steady increase of the cash balances.

The cash balances of all India amounted on the 31st of Jan. to 18,40,00,000 rupees, which, after allowing for the payment of all sums due for charges in England, will leave a net balance in India of more than fifteen crores.

As during the last year no loans have been raised; as in that time there have been no extraordinary receipts; as it is certain, by the returns already before the Govt., that the actual financial results of the year 1861-62 will be more favourable than was anticipated in the Estimates of April last; as most of the branches of revenue are healthy, and as further reductions of expenditure are in progress, the Gov. gen. in Council is satisfied that the Licence-tax is not required to maintain a financial equilibrium. He has therefore resolved to dispense with it.

The annual sum which the Govt. will thereby surrender is between fifty and sixty lacs of rupees.

This sum would be collected from about five millions of payers.

As the collection, although not far advanced, has been begun, the Gov. gen. in Council determines that, in order to avoid unnecessary trouble and vexation, and to prevent all doubt of the intention of the Govt., the collection shall be abandoned at once, without waiting for the completion of the Budget of the ensuing year.

Accordingly, the Gov. gen. in Council orders that, in anticipation of the law which will be immediately proposed for the repeal of Act XVIII. of 1861, all proceedings under that Act be stopped, and that any collections which may have been made under it be returned to the payers.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of the above resolution be forwarded to the several departments, Govts., &c.

C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,
Sec. to Govt. of India.

REPORT FOR THE EXHIBITION OF 1862. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Report on the results of the arrangements for the forthcoming Exhibition of 1862, by A. M. Dowle, Esq., Secretary to the Central Committee for Bengal.—(dated 6th January, 1862.)

I have the honour to report that the shipments of that portion of our contributions to the forthcoming International Exhibition of 1862, which had to be forwarded via the Cape, have been brought to a close. They consist of 66 packages by the ship Nile, 44 by the Hotspur, and 21 by the Renouin, making 131 packages in all, comprising three thousand nine hundred and thirty-six specimens of the products and manufactures of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, Oude, the Punjab, Burmah, the States of Ulwar, and the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces, and valued for export duty at Rupees 37,668.

2. The collection forwarded from the same Provinces, including the Straits Settlements, to the London Exhibition of 1851, both via the Cape and the Overland Route, consisted of 2,699 specimens, so that, on the present occasion, the contributions shipped round the Cape alone exceed the total collection of 1851 by 1,237 specimens; whilst the valuable textile fabrics, silks, and brocades, as well as works of art, which remain to be forwarded by the Overland Route, comprise nearly 2,000 articles, which will bring up the total number of the collection to nearly 6,000 specimens, being more than double of what has been sent in 1851.

3. But whilst the collection is thus so greatly in excess of that of 1851, it has been put up and packed up in such a manner that it will actually occupy less space than on the former occasion, and moreover display a degree of uniformity which has not been attained in either 1851 or 1855.

4. The collection comprises specimens of every production upon which human industry is engaged in the provinces whence obtained, and it contains a number of articles, either entirely new, or of which no specimens have as yet been exhibited in Europe. The most important part, however, is the convincing proof which it affords of the extraordinary advance that has taken place in some particular arts and manufactures, an advance especially remarkable in localities situated within convenient distances of those lines of railways which are already in practical working, thereby showing the great aptitude of natives for almost any kind of work where European superintendence, or even advice, bring to bear their influence upon local industry.

5. In accordance with the rules laid down by H.M.'s Commissioners for the Exhibition, the collection consists of four general sections, viz.:

I.—Raw Products, III.—Manufactures, and II.—Machinery, IV.—Works of Art,

and these rules have been strictly adhered to. It was not, however, practicable to follow with the same fidelity the division of Section III. into the clauses prescribed by Her Majesty's Commissioners, since many of the most valuable fabrics of India are of a description that would render it somewhat difficult to assign to them the proper class in which they ought to be exhibited. Thus, for instance, Class 27, "Articles of Clothing," would comprise an immense variety of fabrics which constitute "clothing" in India, but which in Europe come within the meaning of manufacturers in "cotton," "in silk," "in embroidery," &c. To overcome the difficulty, I have adopted the plan of classifying all such manufactures according to the peculiar workmanship for which they are valued. Thus, for instance, though cashmere shawls most undoubtedly would come within class 21, "Manufactures in Wool," their great merit consists in their embroidery, and hence they have been classed among embroideries. The splendid doputtas or shawls from Benares are articles of clothing worn by wealthy natives, but their beauty consists in the fineness of the texture of the silk and the interweaving of the gold and silver threads, and I have accordingly classified them among manufactures in silk.

6. But however desirable it may be to adhere throughout strictly to the classification laid down by her Majesty's Commissioners, as far as the general arrangements are concerned, it must not be forgotten that the principal object which India can have in view in displaying the products and manufactures of this company at the forthcoming Exhibition is to reap practical advantages, and this object would be in a great manner frustrated if no deviation from that classification were allowed. Among the valuable natural productions of the soil of India fibres occupy a very important place, and in order to illustrate their particular adaptation for a variety of purposes, and specially for cordage, specimens of the latter accompany each description of fibre. According to the prescribed classification, however, cordage comes within "Manufactures of Cotton or Hemp," and would thus be exhibited separately, whereas it is highly desirable that it should be shown in connection with the raw material from which manufactured. I have therefore arranged this portion of our collection by sub-dividing it into two classes, viz., one showing the fibre, and the other the article manufactured therefrom. If this arrangement be objected to at home, it can easily be rectified by transferring the latter to the head of "Manufactures."

7. The classification and proper labelling of the collections has, however, entailed more trouble and labour than I anticipated. In some instances packages reached me without lists or invoices, so that a regular inventory had to be made of the contents of each package. In other cases the name attached to labels on the article itself did not correspond with that in the list, and in one particular instance a large collection reached me without labels, without lists, and even without previous advice, so that had I not been acquainted with those identical articles I should have been at a loss to find out where they came from. This, however, in many cases was unavoidable, if it be considered that perhaps one and the same package had to travel partly by banghy, then by steamer or rail, or by bullock train, so that, though advised of the manner in which it might have been despatched at first, there was no knowing by what mode of conveyance it may be expected ultimately to reach me.

8. With a view to exercising the utmost economy, a number of articles of much interest had to be packed up at once and shipped via the Cape. I should have wished much to exhibit them on public view, in order that those interested in the progress of India might have convinced themselves of the surprising improvement which has taken place in several branches of local industry. This, however, would have thrown me back completely in my labours; and, moreover, it was an object to make room for the really valuable fabrics and works of art which have to be forwarded by the overland route, and which I hope to exhibit for public inspection in the course of this month.

9. I now proceed to offer the following remarks about our contributions to the Exhibition. First and foremost in importance I consider the collection of the products of the soil, and among these I may particularly mention that of oilseeds, oils, gums, resins, medicinal substances, fibres, and timbers, all of which, with the exception of the two latter, are uniformly put up in glass-stoppered bottles. Whilst containing a number of specimens entirely new or never before exhibited, it comprises a large variety of products identical and indigenous to different localities, soil, and climate. Each of these exceeds the number of specimens sent either to the London or Paris Exhibition, and moreover comprises a complete assortment of drugs used by native practitioners, arranged according to their properties, with the description of the proportions and manner in which given to patients. One practical result of this large collection must lead to a conviction that more than one-half of the drugs now indented for from England can be procured from local sources at an infinitely cheaper cost.

10. With regard to the most important staple product, viz. raw cotton, I regret to say that neither the variety of specimens received, nor the information bearing on that subject, will realise the expectations of those interested in that particular fibre. This defect, however, it is hoped, will, in some measure, be remedied by the circular issued upon the strength of a communication lately received by the Government of India, clearly explaining what is required, and not only authorising the transmission of all specimens of cotton by the overland route, but moreover conveying the consent of her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition to receiving all such samples up to within one week of the time fixed for the opening of the Exhibition itself.

11. Among the other articles contributed to the forthcoming Exhibition of 1862 there are several which ought not to be passed over without remark, especially as they not only show the great improvement which has undoubtedly taken place in a variety of manufactures, and even of works of art, but furthermore most conclusively prove the desire on the part of natives to take advantage of every opportunity afforded to them for improving their productions and manufactures so as to render them more adapted to European tastes and requirements.

PAINTINGS ON IVORY.

12. I would foremost draw attention to the paintings on ivory from Delhi, which show the most wonderful improvement which has taken place in that branch of native talent. Though in point of exquisite fineness of pencilling the Delhi paintings have, for a long time past, stood in high repute, yet the chief skill of the artist consisted in the faithfulness of their portraits; but as regards landscape painting, there was an entire absence of perspective or even shading, and indeed few painters attempted anything beyond pictures of particular public buildings, but which generally resulted in failure. The specimens forwarded on the present occasion will, therefore, take everybody by surprise, and among the collection there are two, one a landscape, the other the interior of a temple, which may challenge competition. I am doubtful whether anything better could be produced in Europe within the same small compass; but I am positive that in no part of the world could it be obtained for the same money.

13. Surprised at this extraordinary improvement, I endeavoured to trace its immediate cause, and from the information collected, there is not the least doubt that it must solely be ascribed to the spread of photography, a conclusion in which I am strengthened by the fact that one of the Delhi paintings on ivory, comprised in the present collection, is the very counterpart of a photograph taken at Delhi about a year ago and presented to me by a friend. Several others of those paintings are the most faithful copies of photographs taken by Mr. Beato at Lucknow.

CHICKEN-WORK.

14. The Calcutta chicken-work, or needle embroidery, is deserving of special notice. It surpasses anything hitherto produced, and has, by competent judges, been pronounced to be unique. The assortment comprises both specimens of extraordinary cheapness as well as of the highest finish of workmanship; thus, for instance, we have handkerchiefs from eight annas up to sixteen rupees each.

FLOSS SILK EMBROIDERY.

15. The floss silk embroideries on merino and net from Delhi are particularly fine, and care appears to have been taken to adapt the same to English taste. Though greatly superior to what has been sent on former occasions, it has the further advantage of greatly improved patterns with extraordinary cheapness of cost.

CARPETS.

16. Among the carpets already shipped, I may mention those made at the central jails of Lahore and Meerut, and at the Jubbulpore School of Industry. They show a great advance in workmanship, whilst the blending of colours is remarkably fine. The great drawback, however, is the heavy expense of inland transit to the nearest place of export. Thus, for instance, the expense of packing and forwarding to Calcutta two carpets from Jubbulpore, which, on the place of manufacture, cost only Rs. 100 each, is Rs. 104, being more than 50 per cent. on the original price. This, however, will remedy itself as soon as railways come more extensively into operation.

CASHMERE SHAWLS.

17. Of shawls there is a very large collection, the greatest portion of which consists of private contributions, and comprises varieties to suit every body's taste. There are some which have been sent from Sirringgur, the capital of Cashmere, and from Umrutur, and said to be much superior to anything yet forwarded to Europe. By desire of the contributors these shawls are not to be opened out here, but the packages in which they are contained are to be shipped direct to London by the overland route, and moreover to be insured against damage by sea-water. From information received, it would appear that really fine shawls are only made to special order, and if a proper price be paid for them, and that the deterioration lately observed in the productions of the looms of Cashmere is chiefly to be attributed to the circumstance that shawls of middling quality meet with a readier sale at home, especially as the French have brought their own manufacturers to such a high state of perfection, that, considering the relative cost of Cashmires and French imitations, the latter have caused much competition to the disadvantage of the shawls of Cashmere.

STEEL INLAIN WITH GOLD.

18. The "kuffori" work, or steel inlaid with gold, from Goojerat in the Punjab, is exquisite, and in point of cheapness defies competition. There is a decidedly higher finish in the specimens forwarded on the present occasion, and there is no doubt that they will attract peculiar attention among those interested in this kind of manufacture.

PAPER MACHÉ.

19. A variety of articles have been collected and forwarded to me under the name of Papier Maché, but the only ones deserving of notice are those made at Cashmere. Though not to be compared with the exquisite articles produced in Germany and France, yet the specimens sent on this occasion will show a wonderful improvement in comparison with those contributed in 1851 and 1855. They are much lighter, better finished, and will prove an ornament even to an English drawing-room table. The only drawback is their cost, being much dearer than what could be obtained for the same money at home.

PLAIN SILKS.

20. There is a large assortment of silk cloths from various parts of India, but whilst in some part a marked improvement is noticeable in the manufacture, in others it has decidedly deteriorated. Even with regard to the former, a further and considerable improvement is required to obtain for these fabrics a footing in Europe, especially as the specimens collected by no means commend themselves by cheapness of price. The silks from the Punjab, however, are excellent, and the colour of the various dyes very brilliant. Some of these fully come up to the best French and English silks, though, in point of cost, they could not stand the test of competition, which however might, in a great measure, be overcome if the gold borders, which generally are woven into the ends of the silks, were omitted.

EMBROIDERED SILKS AND BROCADES.

21. The embroidered silks and brocades from Benares stand unrivalled. The workmanship is of the highest finish, whilst the interweaving of the gold and silver threads with the silk shows exquisite taste. It is to be regretted that only so few of these exquisite fabrics are adapted for European use; and, indeed, the present specimens have been forwarded more with the view to showing what native artisans can produce, than in the expectation of any advantage resulting therefrom to the local manufacturers. The kinkobs or brocades are extremely rich, but their use in Europe will be restricted to the covering of furniture, for which purpose, however, they are much too expensive; whilst, on the other hand, the majority of people who can afford the outlay would, in all probability, prefer the manufactures of Lyons to the kinkobs of India.

MANUFACTURES IN COTTON AND HEMP.

22. The greater portion of the collection under this head consists of specimens of cloths, &c., made by prisoners in the various jails, and those coming from the Punjab and from Meerut are worthy of special notice. The most important are, however, the hemp fabrics of the Borneo Company, established at Barnagore, near Calcutta, the steam-works of which afford employment to large numbers of the neighbouring population. The fabrics consist of gunny clothes and sacks, and establish the fact, that where the consumption of manufactures, however small their intrinsic value may be, is large, machinery worked by steam will successfully compete against the cheapness of Indian manual labour. Cotton goods, with very few exceptions, afford a singular contrast to the general improvement which has taken place in the manufactures of India. The specimens of coarse fabrics forwarded on this occasion are almost the same as they were ten years ago, and in some of the finer fabrics there is a marked falling off. The only way in which this anomaly can be explained is the fact, that whilst the consumption of coarser cloths has greatly increased, and thereby caused a rise in their market value, the limited means of the consumers, with the enhanced cost of all sorts of comestibles, prevents them from paying beyond a certain maximum price even if they could obtain a better article at an advance of a few pice. The manufacturer, on the other hand, prefers confining himself to the production of coarse fabrics which command an extensive and ready sale, and bring a speedy and remunerative return. The only cotton manufactures which have as yet passed through my hands, and show real improvement, are the table-cloths, napkins, and towels from Patna, which are particularly good.

23. The collection of silk and cotton manufactures is accompanied by three valuable books. The first contains specimens of the different silk patterns used by the inhabitants of the Punjab, specifying those peculiar to Mahomedans, Hindoos, and Sikhs respectively, and those which have been introduced since the period of English rule. The second shows the cotton fabrics used as articles of dress by the agricultural tribes of the Punjab, distinguishing the different classes to which the patterns are peculiar. Those two books have been forwarded by the Central Committee of the Punjab, and though in themselves most valuable, their value will be enhanced by the collection of photographs which is now being made of the various tribes and classes inhabiting the vast territories of India. The third book has been presented by His Highness Sir Jung Bahadur, K.C.B., consisting of a large number of specimens of colours produced by a combination of Indian dyes, and though some doubt appears to exist as to this large variety of colours being the result of repeated experiments of the Nepalese dyer, who is stated to have lost his memoranda as to peculiar dyes from which he obtained the colours, the book itself establishes the fact that the colours themselves can be produced from substances indigenous to India. There is also an assortment of samples of dyed cotton cloths forwarded by the Central Committee for the North-Western Provinces, which is particularly valuable, as it is accompanied by a description of the ingredients employed in producing the various colours.

PAPER.

24. The specimens of paper forwarded with the present collection comprise a large variety, and will prove interesting. There is the famous paper made of the Daphne plant at Nepal, illustrated by the fibre from which obtained, from the fresh shrub, with specimens of all the stages of its preparation. Then we have paper made of the bamboo fibre, of old hemp, aloes leaf, plantain fibre, Herberia kyanised, of rejected records, of old ropes, and of a number of other substances. That made by the prisoners at the jail of Meerut seems to be particularly good, and specially adapted for the packing of fine fabrics, as it commands itself by its extraordinary resistance to dampness. The arsenicated paper, received from Hooghly, is supposed to be a strong protective against insects.

FEATHERS, DOWNS, &c.

25. These manufactures, peculiar to Calcutta, and better known under the name of "Commerciably work," have for many years past been admired in England. I am not aware whether they are produced in any other part of India, but I am positive that none were received at the Paris Exhibition of 1855 from any other place than Calcutta. The specimens forwarded on the present occasion show but little progress in workmanship, but there is a decided improvement of style and of adaptation to English taste. The feathers and plumes are superior and of greater variety than those sent on former occasions, but they still leave room for considerable improvement.

BASKET WORK.

26. Of these the collection is very small, but the specimens are the best I have seen in the course of my Indian experience. The manufactures in straw of Mouhyr are very good indeed, and their merit is enhanced by their extraordinary cheapness. Two "reticules" of straw, costing only about 3d. each, are superior to the best work of that description I have seen either in Germany or Switzerland, leaving the relative price of the articles themselves out of question.

LACQUER AND JAPAN WORK.

27. The lacquer work comprises an assortment of articles from various parts of India, but among these there are very few deserving of notice. Those sent from Bareilly show a very great improvement in comparison with what was forwarded to the Paris Exhibition; still the work falls very short from even the common articles of similar description made in China. Three boxes, received from Burmah, are, however, of exquisite fineness of workmanship, remarkable for extreme compactness and fit, whilst the outer varnish is the finest I have ever seen; but, like most articles of India, the inside is very inferior, and greatly deteriorates the value of the boxes, which with little more care could be avoided.

MATS.

28. The assortment of mats is limited in number, but this has been done advisably, because, with the exception of Midnapore and Jessore, nothing is produced in Bengal that equals what Madras and the adjoining States can furnish. The mats of Midnapore, however, will stand the test of competition with the whole of India, and those sent on the present occasion reflect the highest credit on the manufacturers. One large mat, twenty-seven feet square, entirely eclipses that sent by the late Baboo Dwarakanath Tagore as a present to the Queen, and the interest in it is heightened by the circumstance that specimens of the rushes from which it is made, in their various stages of preparation, as well as of the ingredients by which the peculiar dye of the mat is obtained, accompany it. There are likewise four small mats of the same description, and to these has been added a fifth, which is six years old, in order to show the durability of these mats, notwithstanding their extreme fineness. The great drawback to the more general adoption of these mats is, I am afraid, their high cost, though I have no doubt that such would be considerably reduced if a steady and regular demand existed for them.

TURNERY.

29. The enamelled turnery from Lahore called "Pack Puttan work," commends itself by superior workmanship and beauty of enamel. It is very highly finished, and will, both in point of work and cheapness of cost, attract attention, and stand successful competition with any similar work that can be produced at home. There are some specimens of turnery from Patna, but much the same as those sent to the late Paris Exhibition.

ARMS.

30. The collection of arms consists, with two solitary exceptions, entirely of private contributions, a portion of which has been presented to the Exhibition. There are some guns, swords, and daggers from Ulwar, all richly mounted in gold, whilst the steel of the blades of the latter is of beautiful fineness and temper. A very handsome dagger has been presented by His Highness the Nawab of Bhawalpore, and some contributed from the Upper Provinces are very richly mounted. The guns and pistols from Nepal will show how well native artisans can imitate European manufactures.

JEWELLERY.

31. With the exception of what has been bought by the local committees of Delhi and Benares, the assortment of jewellery as yet received consists entirely of private contributions, several of which have been presented to the Exhibition. The latter comprises the usual jewels worn by natives, and there is nothing to commend them to particular attention. The gold jewellery from Delhi, however, is worthy of notice, as it is almost entirely of European design, and shows great improvement of workmanship, though still not equal to what native goldsmiths can turn out under European superintendence, there being that absence of finish peculiar to all native manufactures. It is, however, extremely cheap, and will sell well in England.

PLASTIC MODELS.

32. In addition to a collection of clay figures from Kishnaghur, we have some specimens of plastic models from Oude. The great merit of the former consists in the faithful expression of physiognomy peculiar to the castes which they represent, whilst the way in which they are dressed conveys a perfect notion of the manner in which the several classes clad themselves. The plastic models of Oude, on the other hand, resemble in appearance coloured statuettes of plaster of Paris, or gypsum, but being made of baked clay and solid are very heavy. As specimens of modelling, I consider them superior to those of Kishnaghur, whilst the colouring is very good.

SCULPTURE.

33. Of this we have a large variety of specimens in stone, ivory, marble, and various kinds of woods, and all of them are much superior to any forwarded either to London or Paris. The stone figures from Gwah are remarkable for the correctness of anatomical proportions, but they are by no means cheap. Some beautiful specimens of sculpture in stone and ivory have been presented by his Highness the Maharajah of Ulwar, but I doubt the latter being the production of Indian sculptors. The collection of sculptures in soap-stone from Agra is beautiful, and I have no doubt that it will attract considerable attention in England; the same is the case with the carved woodwork from Bijour, which is really very fine. Some carvings in ebony from the same district are most excellent, but their merit is negated by the extreme clumsiness of the articles themselves inside, which considerably detracts their value, and reduces them to the standard of cabinet work.

MACHINERY IN GENERAL.

34. What has been forwarded on the present occasion consists entirely of models only, and their collection is extremely limited. All of them, however, have the fault that they are of a much higher finish than the originals which they represent; and hence the primary object—viz., that of showing what imperfect machinery natives employ in their various occupations, and the advantage to be expected from the adoption of European appliances is in some measure frustrated.

35. The foregoing remarks refer only to the articles which have already been received by me; but there is still a large collection to come, consisting of specimens which will considerably add to the general display. These are the Dacca muslins, the Cuttack silver filagree work, the mosaics of Agra, and the ivory carvings from Berhanpore, on which a further report will be submitted in due course.

36. From the above it will be perceived that the present contributions to the forthcoming exhibition present the following peculiar features, viz. :—

- 1st. That the collection has been made in a much shorter time than on any of the previous occasions.
- 2nd. That the number of specimens are more than twice those forwarded to the London Exhibition of 1851.
- 3rd. That although so much more extensive, it will actually require less space than in 1851.
- 4th. The convincing proof it will afford of the surprising improvement which has taken place in several manufactures and works of art.
- 5th. The number of new specimens it contains; and
- 6th. The comparatively small outlay at which the collection has been effected.

37. I have now only to report upon the progress of the official catalogue. The manuscript is so far completed that, as soon as I receive the returns from the Punjab and North-Western Provinces, the same will be ready for the printer. The accompanying proofs of the first four pages already set up in type will show what the catalogue is intended to be. I am doubtful whether it is the intention of the Central Committees of Bombay and Madras to send a copy of their catalogue for incorporation with ours; but, under any circumstances, the publication of the latter ought not to be delayed beyond the beginning of February, for the principal object and use in view would be frustrated if the catalogue were not ready and available in England on the very day of the opening of the Exhibition. I would therefore suggest that, should the copies of the Bombay and Madras catalogues reach after the end of this month, the same be published as a supplement.

THE GREAT EASTERN HOTEL, CALCUTTA.

WHITHER has flown the once vaunted hospitality of Anglo-Indian society? Where now are those merchant princes whose doors were ever open to welcome the new arrivals from Europe? Like Rome, India is no more what it hath been. Nobody goes there now with a view to make it his home for many a year. The sole object that every man proposes to himself is to save enough money to enable him to return to England, a wiser, if not a much richer man than when, influenced by sanguine and romantic hopes, he first turned his steps to the eastward. In the scramble to get home again no one has time or patience to exercise the barbarous virtue of hospitality. It is every one for himself and "Limited Liability" for us all. But what would the last generation have said could they have foreseen the day when spacious Hotels, replete with elegance and comfort, should supersede the low Punch-Houses in which the "shippies" ruined their lives? Could they behold the City of Palaces as it is, with what scornful indignation would they not turn aside from their degenerate successors! And then to be told that individual enterprise was incapable of coping with the wants of the birds of passage daily arriving or leaving! In truth, all is changed. The Agency Houses are no more. The Great Company itself is but the shadow of a shade. Its army is broken up, and even its Civil Service re-modelled. Its very place knows it no more, and carpenters and bricklayers smoke their pipe where directors disposed of kingdoms and fostered a growing empire. What wonder, then, that even "douce Davie" should feel the influence of the times, and his own inadequacy to satisfy, single-handed, the requirements of a restless, exacting, and luxurious generation. Bending, but not breaking, he now merges his capacious premises into the Great Eastern Hotel, and invites the co-operation of every prudent speculator possessed of twenty-five pounds. The prospectus appears in our advertising columns, and is certainly inviting. At least 12 per cent. guaranteed for two years, with a very reasonable hope of receiving twice as much afterwards, is enough to make the money rattle in one's coffers with intense excitement. It is no part of our province, indeed, to recommend any particular investment in preference to others, but the present speculation has every appearance of being straightforward and fairly remunerative. If the time has arrived for the erection of monster hotels in India the experiment can hardly be tried with a better chance of success than under the auspices of such experienced caterers as Messrs. David Wilson and Co.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH IN INDIA.

As the beneficial results of electric telegraph communication with India will greatly depend upon the accuracy of the messages received at Bombay for transmission to Europe, it is satisfactory to know that Lord Canning has directed his attention to the improvement of the telegraph department, so as to insure both rapidity and exactness. Until very recently, the blunders that were made were so gross, and the general carelessness of the signalers so apparently wilful, that many mercantile firms had almost ceased to make use of the wires. A Calcutta house received the following message from Galle:—"Muster for Leeds, no shillings for Graham." The absurdity of the message, indeed, rendered unnecessary any complaint as to its being five days on the road; but it does seem rather hard that the recipients should be compelled to pay for such worthless intelligence, on pain of never receiving another unpaid message. In exacting payments the department certainly cannot be accused of displaying any remissness. Another Calcutta firm one day received, not a message, but a bill for Rs. 7-5, and on making inquiry as to the nature of the demand, they were informed that a message had been despatched to their address from Bombay, but had been lost on the way. Incredible as it may appear, they were compelled to yield to this extortion. The entire disappearance of a message between the points of despatch and destination is, happily, not of very frequent occurrence, though in many cases it would be of no worse consequences than the astounding delay that is complained of by every house having recourse to the wires. Between Bombay and Calcutta the telegraph is not rarely outstripped by the post, and ten days have sometimes elapsed before the receipt of a message, the sole value of which depended on its prompt delivery. The three worst lines are also the three most important ones. The Calcutta and Galle line is represented as almost inferior to the one just mentioned, while that between Calcutta, and Akyab, and Rangoon, is occasionally interrupted for weeks together by reason of the slim bamboo posts giving way or being thrown down. The errors which most frequently recur are in connection with numerals, such as "hundreds" for "thousands," "five" for "four," "thirtieth" for "thirteenth." These, however, might in some degree be avoided by compliance with the Telegraph rule that "in all financial or money messages the sum be given in two forms, halving or doubling the amount, thus: 'Pay to my order Rs. 500, half 1,000.'" It is probable that the best remedy for such mistakes will be found in the substitution of the new French instruments for the present method of receiving messages by sound. Indeed, the true subject for wonder is that more blunders are not made by the signalers, most of whom are very young men, natives or Eurasians, imperfectly educated and possessing the slightest possible knowledge of the English language. Here, too, great improvements are being introduced, and every year will tend to perfect the organisation of the department.

The chief cause, perhaps, of the irregularities complained of by commercial houses is the precedence given to service messages, and likewise the fact that there is but one single wire to conduct the entire telegraph correspondence of both the Government and the public. An additional line is about to be constructed between Calcutta and Bombay, though six months are allowed to enable a private company to undertake the speculation should one be formed for that purpose. In short, Lord Canning has resolved to render the electric telegraph in India as efficient as it is possible to be in the peculiar circumstances by which it is surrounded. In the words of Mr. Grey's letter to the secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce:—"The establishment has been recently re-organised and placed on a better footing as regards pay and promotion, and the Government relies upon Colonel Douglas and the higher officers of the department to use the utmost care and vigilance in preventing mistakes, to investigate thoroughly every complaint, to visit every instance of proved neglect with suitable punishment, and to endeavour unremittingly to make the telegraph thoroughly efficient by promptly remedying such defects as can be corrected with the means at their disposal, and by suggesting to Government all other practicable measures required for the purpose."

A NATIVE PETITION.

ALTHOUGH the "humble petition of the undersigned zemindars and others of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa" was granted before it was preferred, it is still not altogether unworthy of notice. In consequence of the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, one-third of the judges of the new High Court are chosen from the English local bar—the only condition of eligibility prescribed by the Act referring to length of residence in the country. Nothing, however, was said as to knowledge of the vernacular tongue; but this important omission was at once rectified by instructions from the Secretary of State for India, requiring all persons entrusted with the administration of justice to submit to a preliminary examination in the native languages. This not inexcusable oversight—for it was not unreasonable to suppose that men of superior intelligence would in less than four years acquire a familiar acquaintance with the speech of the people in the midst of whom they resided—could hardly fail to attract the attention of the natives, and inspire them with grave apprehensions. In their natural anxiety to have all law proceedings conducted in such a manner as to be understood by those chiefly concerned in them, the leading men of the Bengal Presidency resolved to adopt the very proper course of petitioning the Viceroy in Council that "in the High Court the pleadings be drawn up, and the arguments of counsel be conducted, as at present in the Sudder Court, namely, the former in the Oordoo and the latter in Oordoo or English as may be agreed upon; that the judgments be recorded by the judges in any language they prefer, but if not in Oordoo, translated into that language; and that the decrees and all other orders and processes be in the Oordoo." But in the event of this prayer being rejected, they ask that "in all cases in which the parties through their pleadings require it, the trials be conducted by judges who understand the vernaculars, with one or more other judges as assessors, or with leave to the judge to refer questions of law to one or more judges, such questions being determined by the majority of voices." This petition, or remonstrance, is so obviously founded on justice, that it would be scarcely necessary to allude to it but for the style in which it has been drawn up. Doubtful of their own ability to frame such a document in befitting terms, the petitioners have evidently secured European experience and assistance. The internal evidence is decidedly in favour of ascribing its paternity to some member of the Civil Service—for it is not to be supposed that English solicitors and barristers could be particularly desirous to lay an additional burden upon themselves. The petition, indeed, assumes throughout that that service is the model to which the new judges should endeavour to conform themselves. It imputes to those estimable servants of the State such a familiar knowledge of native languages, customs, and peculiarities, that the utmost confidence has been ever hitherto reposed in them—a fact not universally admitted. The petitioners, then, very correctly describe the kind of training by which the civilians are prepared for the efficient discharge of the highest duties, and they rightly insist that the administration of justice in that country is impossible without an adequate knowledge of its revenue system. It is here that the new system will be most severely tried. It cannot be denied that the only possible method of obtaining an intimate familiarity with the colloquial language and the inner life of the natives is by mixing with them and seeing them in their rural villages, pursuing their ordinary avocations. The collection of the land revenue is an excellent school for this purpose, and it must be remembered that an immense proportion of the law suits of the natives arises out of disputes relating to land. As the petitioners truly observe, no amount of skill in translation will render revenue matters and local usages intelligible to judges ignorant of the people and their familiar speech. The expense, too, of translating papers and evidence must inevitably be very great, and will practically amount to a denial of justice to all, save the comparatively wealthy. Nor is it right that native pleaders should be excluded from advocating the causes of their own countrymen, or denied a seat upon the bench itself. But this must necessarily be the case if the proceedings are conducted in the English language. The native practitioners before the Sudder Court, it seems, "are, in great part, landholders and persons of distinction among their countrymen, like the advocates of Rome in the days of her freedom, who have an interest in the proper administration of justice, and, while commanding the respect of all their clients, assist those whose circumstances would have precluded them from resorting to the court for justice. To debar this class of persons, by the practical disuse of the vernacular, except through the medium of translation, from pursuing the avocations in which they have acquired so much honour, by their upright conduct, will be of no consequence, indeed, to them, but a loss of great magnitude to their countrymen in general, to the poorer class of suitors, and to the interest of justice in India." Warned by this classical allusion, the petitioners proceed to display their knowledge of English forensic history:—

"The Norman Kings," say they, "introduced their language as that of the courts, and the pleadings, the arguments of counsel, and judgments were written in it—an evident and shameful badge," as the commentator on the Laws of England indignantly remarks, "of tyranny and foreign servitude, being introduced under the auspices of William the Norman and his sons, whereby the ironical observation of the Roman satirist came to be literally verified, that

"Gallia caudicibus docuit facunda Britannos."

"In the 36th of the reign of Edward III. it was enacted that pleas should be pleaded, debated, and judged in English, and in the 4th and 6th of George II. it was provided that all records and other proceedings whatever should be in the language of the people."

It might have been preferable, perhaps, had these native gentry drawn up a petition in their own way and out of the abundance of their own hearts, as little weight can be attached to such a laboured document, the evident handiwork of a European, and probably of a member of the very service whose panegyric it actually is. The subject of their prayer, however, is very reasonable, and certainly based upon truth. We trust, therefore, that every care will be taken to insure a thorough familiarity with the language and habits of the people, on the part of those to whom is confided the administration of laws affecting the lives and property of millions.

A Minute recently penned by Mr. W. E. Frere contains some very pertinent remarks on the necessity of acquiring "a knowledge not only of the manners and customs, but of the prejudices and trains of thought among those whose disputes he has to settle and whose causes he has to try." So thoroughly sound, indeed, are his views on this point that we cannot forbear making the following extract, confirming and illustrating the position taken up by the zemindars of Lower Bengal:—

"A lawyer," observes Mr. Frere, "learns these from his youth up in England. It is a part of his every-day life; and he has, moreover, superior means of information and learning from his practice at the bar, or in chambers; or should the customs and habits be peculiar to any one part of the country, he has an attorney at his elbow, bred and practising among the people, well versed in that of which he happens to be ignorant, and thus he prepares himself for the Bench: and when raised to that dignity he has the satisfaction of knowing that, if he is not acquainted with any peculiar custom, the lawyers on both sides will take care that he does not err from ignorance or oversight, but that any peculiarity with which the judge may not be acquainted (the jury is sure to know it) is made clear to him by explanation or examination of the witnesses. But in this country it is not so; neither the Judge nor the best mere lawyer in the country would probably know that a Lingayat must be lying if he mentioned anything as having occurred when he was ploughing, or yoking, or using his cattle on a Monday; nor would he know what inference to draw from the fact of a husband and wife walking along the road, the wife before the husband, or in what case he may infer suicide from a woman being found in a well with her saree passed between her legs and tucked up behind, or when to conclude it might be accidental; nor would a Vakeel probably think it necessary to notice it; yet these, and many other customs and prejudices, ought to be known to the Judge, but can only be learned by constant and observant intercourse with the Natives, such as is ever to be obtained in the Cutcherry, and in the fields and jungles, though but rarely, if ever, to be acquired in the Adawlut. For, on the other hand, I have seen a report of a case in the Supreme Court in which the Chief Judge asked a witness whether the deceased (a Cammattee woman) was in her night clothes. It is therefore, I think, quite as necessary that the civil servant intended for the judicial branch of the service should have a long training in the collector's office, where he might acquire a knowledge of the people, as that he should have a knowledge of jurisprudence generally, or of any of the various sub-divisions of law, not being the law administered in this country, but as enabling him to understand the principles of general or any particular law."

CORRESPONDENCE.

HONOUR TO THE BRAVE!

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the correspondence that has appeared in your issue of the 17th inst. on the subject of the claim of Colonel Travers to the Victoria Cross decoration, which has been so ungraciously and so groundlessly, as would appear, attempted to be invalidated by Sir Hugh Rose, and to your own just comments on a conduct which it is amazing one so clear-sighted as Sir Hugh should not have seen was a dangerous and unauthorised interference with the prerogative of the Crown, I venture to solicit permission to ask, through your columns, the authorities charged with the distribution of the decorations destined by the country as rewards for signal military desert, why the five devoted native troopers, who, out of all the reliable troops at Indore (black and white), so chivalrously seconded Colonel Travers in his bold advance on the disastrous 1st July, 1857, against the rebels' guns, were not at the same time with their brave commander, or since, awarded the Victoria Cross? non-commissioned officers and private soldiers being eligible thereto, and being constantly decorated therewith, for signal acts of valour performed by them.

It has, I know, become fashionable, in certain high places, to speak disparagingly of the glorious old army of the much-abused India Company since its dissolution, but the imperishable page of history will do it justice, in spite of the puny attempts of the Clydes, Mansfields, and Russells to decry its fame, by recording for the enlightenment of future time that that army—to use the truthful language of a highminded and liberal statesman (Mr. H. Baillie)—"had acquired great glory, had achieved great conquests, had been victorious on every battlefield, and had won for England the most magnificent empire on the face of the globe." ### HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 27.

THE INDIAN LICENCE-TAX.

The Earl of AIRLIE rose to ask her Majesty's Government whether it was true that the Indian licence-tax had been abolished? He said it had been stated in the public press that this tax had been done away with. It would be very gratifying to their lordships and to the country to hear that the Indian exchequer was in such a flourishing condition that the Government were able to return fifty lakhs of rupees, or £500,000, to the taxpayers in India; but he would remind their lordships that there had existed a very general expectation that at the earliest possible opportunity there would be a remission of at least a portion of the Customs' duties on manufactured goods. He did not now mean to discuss the policy of levying those duties in India, but he was justified in observing that the manufacturing interests of this country had expressed a very strong opinion against them, and that the principle of those duties had never been defended by the Government.

The Duke of ARGYLL replied that no official information whatever had been received at the India-office with regard to the course taken on the question of the licence-tax. The last private letters received from the Governor-general were not of a nature to enable his right hon. friend the Secretary of State for India to declare with any degree of certainty the intentions of the Government in reference to the tax. It was, however, extremely possible that the news which had arrived might be true; and undoubtedly the intention of the Government had been, if possible, rather to abstain from collecting than to abolish the tax. In point of fact, it had never been collected generally over India, but only in parts of the presidency of Bombay and elsewhere. He was happy to state that the general tenour of the communications with regard to the financial condition of India was hopeful, and encouraged the belief that in a short time the Government might be able, not only to dispense with this particular tax, as to the abstract inexpediency of which he did not dissent from the noble earl, but also to modify the Customs' duties of that country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 27. CIVIL SERVICE (INDIA).

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any and what memorials from those members of her Majesty's Covenanted Civil Service who were now in India, praying for the redress of certain grievances; and, if so, whether he had any objection to place the same on the table of the House?

Sir C. Wood said that the Indian Department had received one memorial, and others were on their way to this country. He did not think it advisable to present simply the one just received, though ultimately there would be no objection to present the whole of them.

INDIAN COMMUNICATION.

On the motion of Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, the Select Committee on Indian Communication was nominated as follows:—Sir J. Elphinstone, Lord J. Browne, Sir Frederick Smith, Sir H. Leake, Sir J. Hay, Mr. Thomas Baring, Mr. J. B. Smith, Mr. Gregson, Mr. R. Crawford, Mr. Smollett, and Mr. Beamish.

SCINDE AND PUNJAB RAILWAYS.

The report of the directors states that every exertion had been made by them and their officers to make arrangements for the accommodation and development of the traffic of the Scinde Railway. During the last rainy season the monsoon rains had set in with unusual severity, and had affected most injuriously the embankments of the railway, which had not been sufficiently consolidated in consequence of the rainfall of the previous seasons having been less than the usual average. The line was opened before it was sufficiently advanced and consolidated, and before an adequate supply of rolling stock and other appliances had been provided. The amount of the traffic had greatly exceeded the expectations of the officers of the company and of the Government. The directors confidently stated that the Scinde Railway, in its present most imperfect state, did more than pay its working expenses. A viaduct of 1,000 feet in length would connect the railway with Keamaree, the landing-place in the harbour at Kurrachee, and every effort would be made to hasten the completion of this work. The financial statement showed that from the commencement £1,441,316 had been expended. The interest account showed that £201,126 had been received, and £199,287 paid to the shareholders, leaving a balance of £1,839. The report on the steam flotilla stated that out of eleven steamers in various states of preparation, only one, the Stanley, was running on the Indus, and four were ready for service; that seven barges of 150 tons each were afloat, two being towed by the Stanley. The directors had entered into arrangements with the Government for the purchase of the four best steamers of the Government fleet now on the Indus for £45,000, and an application had been made for the transfer to the Indus Steam Flotilla of the workshops and other property at Kotree and elsewhere belonging to Government. The price of the steamers was to be taken in shares or stock of the company. The expenditure on capital amounted for the flotilla to £257,804, leaving an available balance of £28,051. The report of the directors on the Punjab Railway stated that for the section between Lahore and Unrutsur, thirty-two miles in length, much difficulty had been experienced in obtaining an adequate supply of sleepers and ballast for the permanent way, but it was expected that this section would be opened for traffic in the course of this month. With regard to the section from Lahore to Mooltan, 220 miles, the permanent way materials for a distance of twenty-seven miles had been deposited along the line, and there was a further quantity landed at Mooltan, and a still larger quantity expected shortly to arrive there. A portion of the Mooltan section, it was expected, would be opened before the end of the current year, and every effort would be made to have the whole of the line opened for traffic before the close of 1863. The financial statement of the Punjab Railway showed that £940,207 had been expended on it from the commencement, leaving an available balance of £271,157 to the credit of the company. The interest account showed that £100,005 had been paid to the proprietors, leaving a balance of £1,794 in hand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. N. P. Jacobs as Consul-general at Calcutta, for the United States of America. The Queen has also been pleased to appoint E. B. Andrews, Esq., to be Collector of Inland Revenue for the Island of Mauritius.

SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Singapore Gas Company, with a capital of £100,000, in shares of £5 each. The town contains about 5,500 houses, exclusive of public buildings, and land for the works has been conditionally granted by the Governor, while the municipality are prepared to arrange a contract for lighting the streets, &c., for a term of years. The calculations of profit are based on the assumption that coal must be obtained from England, but the belief is that much cheaper supplies will soon be procurable from the Labuan mines or from those of India or Australia.

CHINA AND THE TAEPING REBELS.—A crowded meeting of the Royal Geographical Society was held on Monday evening, March 24, Lord Ashburton, President, in the chair. Among those present were—Sir Roderick I. Murchison, the Duke of Northumberland, Lord Hereford, Count Strzelecki; Generals Sir A. Scott Waugh, Sir T. Phillips, Knollys, Portlock, Handcock, Monteith, and Fox; Admirals Sir George Back, Sir Edward Belcher, Hon. C. Elliot, and R. Gordon; Sir T. Fowell Buxton; Sir Joshua Rowe, the Dean of Westminster, Lord Alfred Churchill, M.P., Major King; Colonels Greathed, Stepney, Lardner, Yorke, and Holland; Captains Sir John D. Hay, Sir F. Nicolson, Collinson, Bedford, Hamilton, Pim, and Campbell, R.N.; Sir Digby Neave; Captains Mangles, Wilson, Allen Young, Hyde, Hand, Sprye, Johnston, and Oldershaw; Sir John Logan, the Hon. McCosh, Davies, Kinkel, Camps, Tidman, Seemann, Sherrin, Kins, and Milligan; Budroodeen Tyabjee Sahib; Messrs. Cyril Graham, Spenser St. John, Osborne Smith, Brooking, Charles White, Arrowsmith, Findlay, &c. Lord Ebury, Rear-Admiral Charles Eden, C.B., Mr. Alderman Finnis, Lieut.-col. Greathed, C.B., Lieut. E. H. Verney, R.N., Colonel C. P. B. Walker, C.B., Mr. J. Bowie, Mr. W. Caward, Mr. Archibald Hamilton, Mr. J. Sargood, Mr. J. Todd, Mr. F. Fox Tuckett, and Mr. E. Bean Underhill, were elected Fellows. Mr. Galton then read the first paper, by Lieut. Oliver, R.A., giving a description of his travels to the west of Canton. The president, in introducing Dr. Barton, author of the next paper, observed that it was of great geographical interest, as it was an account of the expedition which, under Colonel Sarel, Captain Blakiston, and Dr. Barton, endeavoured to ascend the Yang-tse-kiang, and to pass by Thibet into India, but was prevented by the jealousy of Chinese officials and the state of anarchy in the country. The paper, however, gave an account of Sechuan, on which no European foot had ever trodden, except that of the Jesuits. After the reading of Dr. Barton's paper, the president said it would be desirable to have more information respecting the Taeping rebellion, the causes of the weakness of the Government, and the Jesuit establishments in the interior. Mr. Consul Parkes, who was most warmly received by the crowded assembly, said it was with no ordinary feelings that he had seen Dr. Barton and his companions push off in their little junk from the squadron under Admiral Hope, on their expedition up the Yang-tse-kiang. After alluding to the difficulties of travelling in China, he said, that although some disappointment might be felt at the party not having reached India, yet great service had been rendered to commerce and science by their having traversed the length of the river, and ascertained its navigability as far as Ping-shan. With respect to the condition of the country, whole provinces had been made desolate by the rebels, and cities which at one time contained an immense population, and were the entrepôts of enormous commerce, were now almost extinct or in ruins. The rebellion first broke out in 1849, in one of the remotest provinces, and after three or four years, having acquired sufficient strength, the rebels made their way down to the Yang-tse-kiang, and thence along its course until they reached Nankin, which they seized and fixed upon as their headquarters. From this point they overran the neighbouring provinces, desolating a region 60,000 square miles in extent, with a population of 70,000,000 souls. At present they did not hold more than sixty or seventy miles of country bordering on that river, and, not possessing any flotilla, they could not impede its navigation. As a proof of the value of that river to commerce, he might mention that during eight months of last year, 152 foreign vessels and 170 junks in foreign employ passed up from Shanghai to Hankow, and it was estimated that trade to the amount of £10,000,000 would be done during the present year. He attributed the gigantic proportions of the rebellion to the discontent arising from the pressure of population upon production, the absence of poor-laws, and the inefficiency of the police. The Government had been accustomed to rule by moral suasion in the form of proclamations on large sheets of paper, daubed over with red ink. Adverting to the cultivation of the poppy, Mr. Parkes remarked that the Chinese were acquainted with the use of opium before we took it to them, and that the quantity imported from India bore but a small proportion to that raised in China, but was preferred on account of its superior quality. In reply to a question from the President, Mr. Parkes said, that as far as words went, the present Government of China gave some hope of improvement, and that it was scarcely fair to judge of them, as they had so recently come into power. After some remarks with reference to the Jesuit missionaries, he said that he had received a letter from Dr. Lockhart, at Peking, stating that he was visited by the best classes for advice; and, in his (Mr. Parkes's) opinion, hospitals would be found a most efficient instrumentality in the hands of Protestant missionaries. After a few remarks from Captain Blakiston as to the possibility of effecting a commercial communication between China and India, thanks were passed to the authors of the papers, and the meeting was adjourned to that day fortnight, when papers on the Fiji Islands will be read. The papers were amply illustrated by several views on the Yang-tse-kiang by Dr. Barton, and numerous Chinese sketches by Lieut. Oliver, R.A.—Times.

THE POPE IN INDIA.—While the Pope of Rome has scarcely a square mile of territory left which acknowledges his sway beyond the Patrimony of St. Peter, the States of the Church; when he is well nigh shorn of all temporal power, and his continued occupation of the Quirinal is but a question of days, we find him occupying his time in the completion of a Concordat with the King of Portugal, whereby India is partitioned out among a certain number of Portuguese bishops and vicars-apostolic, the whole to be under an Archbishop of India, who is to take up his residence at Goa. The nature of the arrangements hitherto in force for affording guidance and religious consolation in India to the servants of the spiritual father have been annulled; and we find that, with few exceptions, all subjects of Great Britain holding the Roman Catholic faith, who are members of that church are deprived of such exalted offices as they have hitherto held. It is certainly amusing to read the concordat alluded to from the calm matter-of-fact way in which a powerless old man, and the sovereign of an effete kingdom, presume to settle conditions for the spiritual partition of a dependency of the most powerful kingdom in Europe. We might be angry, but that we cannot help smiling at the impudence of the entire arrangement; nevertheless, we recommend the consideration of this subject to the High-Church party in India. It will afford them an opportunity similar to that enjoyed by their representatives in England on the occasion of the creation of the Archbishopric of Westminster, and the elevation of Cardinal Wiseman to the see. It is true that the Archbishop of India will find his palace of a somewhat shabby description, and devoid of the luxuries surrounding his more fortunate brother of Westminster; he may not perhaps appreciate to the fullest the poverty-stricken aspect of the Pontifical capital of the East, but nevertheless is he not to be Archbishop of India? His stipend may not equal that of a junior chaplain of the Reformed Church, but then there is the Primacy, and from his lofty pinnacle of spiritual eminence may he not look down upon the less exalted members of a blind and mistaken priesthood? We cannot calculate upon what mischief may arise from this stretch of authority on the part of the Father of the Church. We leave it, therefore, to those who, having the dignity of the Protestant faith and Church at heart, to busy themselves with what clearly comes within their province. The Right Rev. Dr. J. Fennally, vicar apostolic of Madras, writing on the subject of the deposition of himself and other of his countrymen in favour of Portuguese incumbents, says:—"Thereupon it will be my duty, after handing over all the property of the Madras mission, houses, lands, Government securities, &c., (verily a worthy mission worthy of appropriation by the Portuguese Church) to the new Portuguese or Indo-Portuguese bishop, to retire from this place and make out life elsewhere as best I can for the remainder of my days. My highest ambition has been to lay my bones in Madras, where I have served the Catholic Church for so many years, howsoever little profitable may have been my services. I am sure of feeling some regret on my retirement, but my determination to obey the visible head of the Church on earth rises superior to all such predilection." Dr. Fennally retires with a good grace, and in the surrender of the houses, lands, and Government securities of the mission to his brother Bishop of the Portuguese, affords some clue to the cause for this transfer of India (spiritual, not temporal,) to the Portuguese. The missions appear to be wealthy. We know that Peter's pence in Europe are like the traditional plums in ship puddings made in a gale of wind. We only suggest it. May not the holy father in God need the assistance of the son of the Church on the throne of Portugal, who may be disposed to give it in exchange for the houses, lands, and Government securities appertaining to missions in India such as that at Madras?—Englishman.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

SECOND EDITION.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopedic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c. of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Comode Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last; with her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are afoot which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £40,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Raneemuddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 39,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,

First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,

Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,

Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,

Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment,

and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

As the public will naturally expect to have some particulars of the bulk of the Capital required for this undertaking, the Directors, after examining the books of the Firm and from other sources of information, believe the following figures to be nearly correct; but the Company will not be bound by them until they have been correctly ascertained:—

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Raneemuddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 12th March brings an account of the disgraceful proceedings that characterised the Native Meeting convened by the Sheriff of Calcutta, for the purpose of voting a complimentary address to Lord Canning on his departure from India. As the requisition to the Sheriff was signed exclusively by native gentlemen, the European portion of the community would have shown only good taste and discretion in not intruding upon their coloured fellow-subjects. It is to be regretted that the natives did not confine themselves to their own mode of conducting such matters, instead of imitating English customs. Naturally distrustful of their unaided ability to draw up an English address, they applied in an evil hour for assistance, which threw open the meeting to men of every shade of opinion. Even then all disagreement might have been avoided had any sincere well-wisher, or, indeed any man of a generous disposition, pointed out to the framers of the address the impropriety of one particular phrase, if, at least, it was intended that the address should be held to emanate from Europeans as well as from natives. But in reality it was not so intended. The native inhabitants of Calcutta were simply desirous to express their own gratitude to Lord Canning for his beneficent administration, and had no wish whatever to associate the European residents in their graceful movement. The latter, so far as they were represented at the meeting, have little reason to congratulate themselves on the figure they made. By means of captious criticism and uncalled-for interference they contrived to distort a highly proper and regular expression of public opinion into a riotous and inconsequent assemblage, and have now the miserable satisfaction of reflecting that they have gratuitously insulted not only their departing ruler, but the entire native population of Calcutta. If they imagine that such ungracious and ungentlemanly conduct will be approved of by their countrymen at home, they are likely to find themselves egregiously mistaken.

By a telegram from Suez we learn that Lord Elgin assumed the Government of India on the 13th March, and that Lord Canning proposed to embark on board the Feroze on the 19th.

The prompt action taken by the English authorities in Central India has prevented the outbreak of a civil war among the Thakoors. The present Rajah of Dhuttea, Bhowani Sing, is the younger son of the late Rajah, but his elder brother, Urzin Sing, happens to be illegitimate. Nevertheless, the claims of the latter were not without numerous advocates, anxious for any change that would hold out the prospect of anarchy and plunder. However, a considerable force was immediately ordered to march to the support of the lawful prince, and the insurgents at once laid down their arms—their puppet or chief giving himself up to the Political Agent.

BENGAL.

NANA SAHIB.

The story is told of Jung Bahadur, whose assassination of his uncle and massacre of fourteen chiefs is so notorious, that on his return from England one of his eight brothers attempted his life. The now civilised Premier of Nepaul, deaf to the entreaties of his friends, refused to execute the conspirator, using an argument somewhat unintelligible to his followers—"What would the Times say?" Even in Khatmandu, in the very depths of the Himalayas, and with the real ruler of a country in which assassination is a virtue, English opinion, as represented by the press, has an influence. It is because the English press have lent a greedy ear to the self-contradictory statements regarding the capture of a pseudo-Nana Sahib, which appeared three months ago in the Kurrachee and Bombay papers, that we are now induced to state all that is really known of the existence and hiding place of the Nana. So long as these statements were confined to local journals, to whom the so-called capture of the Nana was as great a godsend as monstrous gooseberries to the provincial papers of England, we confined our notice to mere hints of their mistake, and a simple assertion of the fact that the Government of India know the whereabouts of the Nana. But now that the leading London papers have quoted these rumours, and the organ of the not always well-informed evangelical party has gone so far as to devote a leading article to the subject, and sees in the capture of an unfortunate fakir of Kurrachee "one of those singular coincidences which it is difficult to explain on any other supposition than that of Providential interference," it is our duty to tell the whole truth so far as it is known.

We can understand and have hitherto respected the disinclination of the Calcutta authorities to have the subject of the Nana's existence publicly discussed. There are always discontented spirits whom the fact of his still being in life would prevent from settling down into quiet citizens, and in whom the expectation of his return to Hindostan would excite the hope of a future rebellion. The Sikhs are now without a leader, the Ranees Chunda having become, as they express it, a "Mem Sahib," and her son, the Maharajah, having abandoned the faith and the home of his fathers. The Mussulmans know that their once titular sovereign, Bahadur Shah, lies under surveillance, an imbecile old man, quietly and slowly subsiding into the sleep of death. The ex-King of Oude, once our own creature, has no more influence than the so-called Nazim of Bengal into whose family his relatives have recently married. The mutiny showed how loyal to their Queen all the other chiefs of India are. There is not a creature with a name that would have the chance of rousing any large number of our native subjects to revolt, so long as we govern them with the hand of steel in the glove of silk, except the Nana, who represents the Marhatta line, and has most pertinaciously opposed and fled from our power, while he has most grievously wounded our honour. It would be well then, not only to extinguish this last flickering hope of the discontented, who are still being hunted out of the jungles of Lullutpore and nestle in every native state and in the purlieus of Delhi, Moorshedabad, Garden Reach, and Hyderabad, or watch the course of events from Mecca, but to stave the desire of baffled Nemesis by blotting from the earth for ever the monster of Bithoor, the butcher of Cawnpore. It is too late to speak of hushing up our knowledge of his existence. The natives, as is usual, knew it before we did, and are more familiar with the particulars of his flight and present mode of life than we are. Throwing off the mask of caution, we declare that the Government of India knows where the Nana is, and that the rupees set on his head?—to bring to justice the man who from his hiding place fans the hopes of the discontented, defies the laws of eternal justice, and laughs at the people whose vengeance he has so easily eluded.

Fifteen months ago we drew the attention of Government to a deposition made on his death-bed by a ryot of Goruckpore, who had been carried off as a syce by the Nana into Nepaul, and had succeeded in making his escape to his old village, where his landlord, an English planter, took down his dying words, questioning him narrowly. The deposition, of which the substance will be found in the Friend of India of 22nd November, 1860, was at first slighted by the authorities, and still more so when, on its being referred to Colonel Ramsay, our Resident in Nepaul, he declared that the Nana was indeed dead, though he allowed that the ryot's description of the country through which he passed was not inaccurate. So skilfully had the Nana contrived to undergo the act of so-called burning in the valley of Deokurh, that the statement as to his cremation reached Calcutta from many different quarters which had no connection with each other. This, added to the solemn asseveration of Jung Bahadur, and the somewhat careless consent of Colonel Ramsay, set the matter officially at rest. But there remained the deposition, the writer of which had certainly travelled the road he described, and in company with, as he said, the Nana, Bala Rao and Devi Buksh, whose persons he described. There is the universal belief of all intelligent natives, and especially of those of Benares, the sacred city between which and Nepaul there is such close connection. There is, moreover, the important fact that, after the so-called cremation of the three rebels in the valley of Deokurh, the widows did not mourn as is the custom of the Hindoos, and it was only months after, when the party reached Khatmandu and heard their story was not believed in Hindostan, that they saw their error and mourned with feigned intensity to make up for the delay. Colonel Ramsay, we understand, now allows the truth of the whole statement of the ryot. Jung Bahadur having already declared the Nana is dead, cannot be expected to change his opinion, when such a change might lead us to doubt his friendliness throughout the transaction.

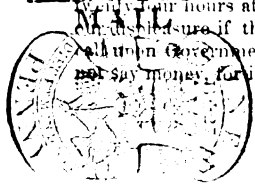

Without entering into further detail we may say that the Government of India at last agree with all well informed natives in believing that the Nana and his party are stationed beyond but near the famous temple of Sumbhonaath, which stands at the western head of the valley of Nepaul, in which, like Cashmere, Khatmandu nestles. Kirkpatrick, who visited Nepaul in 1803, says it is the oldest temple in the country, having been built by the Thibetans when they ruled the place. To this day the Dalai Lama sends devotees to its shrine of Boodh. Since the Goorkha conquest it has been surrounded by modern Hindoo pagodas, and thither many a worshipper toilsomely wends his way from the plains to gaze on the thunderbolt of Indra, the Aryan Jove. Here, between the elevation on which this shrine stands, and the Naga Arjoon range of snow-capped hills towering majestic to the skies, in nature's grandest scenery, defiled by man's most debasing idolatry, lives the felon whom limping but sure-footed justice may yet deliver into our hands, whom our ally and the knight of a right royal and Christian order must be asked perforce to capture and surrender. Villains as well as heroes, the Nana, like Hannibal, may anticipate their fate by poison. But let us have at least the body of the fiend who heeded not the wailings of Cawnpore, that the dogs may devour it.—Friend of India.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF'S MOVEMENTS.

Sir Hugh Rose has been a failure, so far as military administration is concerned, but we are bound none the less to notice his energy and vigour as a soldier. Accustomed as India has been to Commanders in Chief of the type of Sir William Gomm, the spectacle of Sir Hugh Rose, laying aside all state, and travelling courier fashion over six hundred miles of as wild and barren a frontier as the world can produce, is too remarkable to be passed over without an attempt to chronicle his movements. It is well known that for many months he has intended to make himself personally acquainted with our Trans-Indus border, and that a journey from Peshawur to the confines of Sind formed an important part of his projected tour of inspection for the winter of 1861-62. It was always his intention, with reference to the known character of the country, to travel with a reduced escort and staff, but it was only after his arrival at Peshawur, and after consultation with Brigadier-general Chamberlain, that the exact form in which the journey should be made was determined on. The simplicity with which it has been thus far conducted is remarkable. Not a single tent has accompanied his progress. Each day's journey, averaging from thirty to fifty miles, has been performed on horseback with an escort of a Duffadar and five troopers of Irregular Cavalry. He has depended for shelter and refreshment each day on the scanty resources of the frontier officers, and the result has been that he has seen more of frontier life and system in a few days than if he had paraded through the districts in ordinary state for as many weeks.

Sir Hugh Rose, after completing his inspection of the troops and posts in the Peshawur Valley, rode over from Peshawur to Kohat, through the pass which formed the scene of Sir Charles Napier's brief campaign in 1849-50. He arrived at Kohat on the 3rd of February, halted the next day, looked at the troops, consisting of a battery of artillery, a regiment of cavalry, and three of infantry—all of the Punjab Irregular force—examined the fort and everything worth seeing, and on the 5th commenced his arduous ride to Miltuncote, accompanied by Brigadier-general Chamberlain, commanding the Punjab Irregular Force, Major Roberts, V.C., Assistant Quartermaster-general, Lieutenant-colonel Sarel, Assistant-Adjutant-general of Cavalry, one aide-de-camp, and the staff officer of the Punjab Irregular Force—six officers in all. The officers commanding the several stations and districts on the frontier had received orders to provide relays of cavalry or artillery horses, and of riding camels and mules from the regimental establishments, for the very limited baggage of the party. Seven camels and nine mules were found sufficient for the latter purpose. The frontier officers had also been warned to have either tents or houses, according to circumstances, prepared for the party at each resting place. Bahadoor Khail, a frontier post midway between Kohat and Bunnoo, fifty-three miles from the former, and somewhat less from the latter station, was the first resting-place. His Excellency was contented with a small room in the keep of the fort occupied ordinarily by the officer commanding. The fort was built some years ago for the purpose of controlling the Bahadoor Khail salt mine, a great resort of the powerful Wuzerees tribe, who act as carriers of salt thence to various parts of Afghanistan and the intermediate hill tribes. It stands on the very edge of the British territory, facing a remarkable natural fortress in the shape of an enormous hill called the "Infidel's Castle," about fifteen miles beyond the border, and sees in reverse the low line of hills which separates the Wuzerees country from the valley of Bunnoo. Through this range the Koorrum river finds its way, and issuing into the plain fertilizes a portion of the Bunnoo valley and thence passes on to join the Indus. On the morning of the 6th the Commander-in-Chief rode through a very difficult and, until late years, dangerous defile, called the Soordak pass, and thence on to Bunnoo over the Wuzerees Tull, or pasture ground of the Nomad Wuzerees tribe, for a full description of which we must refer our readers to the pages of Colonel Edwards' book. At Bunnoo he was entertained by Lieutenant-colonel Green and the officers of the station. On the 7th he halted and looked at the brigade, consisting of a battery of artillery, a regiment of cavalry, and two of infantry, all, as at Kohat, of the Punjab Irregular Force. On the 8th the Commander-in-Chief rode on between thirty and forty miles to Paharkhey, a village at the mouth of the Bhaim pass which leads through the low range of hills dividing Bunnoo and Murwut from the plains of the Derajat, a defile which has only lately been reclaimed from being utterly dangerous and impassable without strong escort. Tents for the party had been sent on to Paharkhey from Bunnoo.

On the 9th his Excellency rode on to Tank, about thirty miles. This is the principal military outpost on the Dera Ismail Khan Frontier, and the head quarter of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry. Here he was entertained by Lieutenant Kennedy and his officers, accepting thankfully the scanty accommodation which such an outpost afforded. The 10th was devoted to visiting the outposts in the Gomul Valley and exploring the well-known Gomul or Gwalara pass, one of the three grand roads of communication between India and Afghanistan, the Khyber and Bolan passes being the other two. The Gomul is principally used by the Lohanee or Povidah merchants, whose athletic forms and Spanish complexions are no uncommon object at this season in the bazaars of Calcutta. The ground ridden over by the party this day was not less than fifty miles. On the morning of the 11th his Excellency looked at the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, and then rode into Dera Ismail Khan, forty three miles, where he was entertained by Lieutenant-colonel Vaughan and the officers on the station. On the 12th he saw the brigade, consisting of a battery of artillery, a detachment of the 51st Light Infantry, and two infantry regiments of the Punjab Irregular Force. The evening was devoted to inspecting the small fort which contains the magazine from which all the troops on the frontier south of Kohat are supplied. On the morning of the 13th the detachment of the 51st Light Infantry was put through a searching inspection, and this done, the Commander-in-Chief galloped off to look at a bund or dam in course of construction six miles above the station, which it is hoped will divert the stream of the Indus to the opposite bank, and thus save the town from destruction, which last Autumn appeared imminent. In the afternoon a grand durbar was held, and 170 individuals of various rank and degree were presented to his Excellency.

On the 14th the Commander-in-Chief rode out thirty-eight miles to Drabund, a village on the extreme frontier, opposite the pass of the same name, and facing the grand mountain of the Soolyman range called "Solomon's Throne." Here he passed the night in a few small tents which had been sent out from Dera Ismail Khan for his accommodation. On the 15th he rode along the frontier road to Vehowa, a small outpost forty-four miles below Drabund, and again passed the night in a camp extemporized for the purpose. On the 16th he rode on to Mungrota, thirty miles, and according to the latest accounts was to proceed from thence to Dera Ghazee Khan and Mittuncote, whence he will make his way to Mooltan and rejoin his camp at Ferozepore or Umballa. His tour thus far has not merely gratified a laudable curiosity, but may be productive of tangible good.—Friend of India.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT, 1860-61.

The report of the transactions of Government in the Military Department for the year 1860-61 contains a number of very interesting facts. We shall give as briefly as possible those of prominent importance.

The Hospital for Sick Officers, which was experimentally established in 1857 at Calcutta, has been placed on a permanent footing. This hospital is intended for sick and wounded officers of the army, navy, or civil service, who may wish to take advantage of it during their stay in Calcutta. The institution is to be self-supporting, and the experience of two years has shown that its establishment has been attended with the most beneficial results. Married officers, as well as single, may avail themselves of this accommodation—only in the former case the rather odd reservation is made of their being without families! What does this mean? If a sick officer has a child, is he to be denied the benefit of the institution? If so, why? And what measures do the Government contemplate in the event of an officer having a child born when in the hospital? Will he be turned out forthwith?

The scale of payment is as follows:—

|                                  |          |
|----------------------------------|----------|
| House rent monthly.....          | Rs. 10 0 |
| Mess (if a Subaltern) daily..... | 3 0      |
| Ditto, if above that rank.....   | 4 0      |
| Servants .....                   | 0 8      |

Very strenuous efforts have been made to reduce expenditure in the military department, efforts that have been crowned with greater success than we had any idea of.

All guards except those required for purely military purposes have been ordered to be supplied from the police. All departments applying for such guards to pay for the same.

In the cavalry, the proportion of horses has been fixed at 15 per cent. below the effective strength of the men in every mounted corps, in time of peace, and whatever the effective strength of men may be, the total number of horses shall not exceed 500 per regiment of British Cavalry, 175 per troop of H. A., and 120 per Battery of Royal Artillery, and 105 per Battery of Indian Artillery.

We pointed out the other day an instance of gross mismanagement with regard to cavalry horses, viz., the horses of the Carabineers, by which Government has been put to a most useless expense. It is too often the case that they squander with one hand while they scrape with the other.

The report gives the return of officers who have elected for general service, local and staff corps, but as it only brings it up to the end of the official year 1861 the abstract is of little or no interest.

The following is rather amusing. It looks as if the Military Secretary's department were anxious to enliven the dull details of their transactions with a little pleasantry. It is a heavy kind of joke, such as one might expect from a Military Secretary's department:—

"A disposition having been manifested in several parts of India to form Volunteer Rifle Corps, the Government of India, in a General Order No. 274, dated March 28, 1861, explained the conditions on which their organisation would be recognised and encouraged by Government.

"Volunteer Rifle Corps have accordingly been formed at the undermentioned stations in the Bengal Presidencies, as well as several stations in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, viz., at—

"Calcutta, Howrah, Rangoon, Allahabad, Lucknow, Fyzabad, Lahore, and Simla."

The following is an abstract of the European forces in the country on the 1st May, 1860, and 1st May, 1861:—

The cost of the "proposed" scale is Rs. 84,16,100 less than that of the former one.

The Native Infantry is to represent a total strength of 111,112 men of all ranks, native officers included. This is as against a total of 175,177 of all ranks on the 1st October, 1859, showing a reduction of more than 64,065 men of all ranks and a saving "fully equal to one crore of rupees, or a million sterling!" Never was money better saved. As regards cavalry the report states that the arrangements on the subject will be completed and finally announced early this year. But it is intended to effect a saving of about 12 lacs per annum, besides establishment, in this branch.

But the greatest reduction, a reduction we were not prepared to see, has been effected in the Commissariat department.

In Bengal the expenditure under this head has been reduced from 400 lacs per annum as in 1854-55, to 188 lacs; this reduction has been in a great measure effected by curtailing the transport establishment,—20,259 head of cattle, 616 elephants, and 23,133 camels having been sold.

The demands of other departments on the Commissariat have been reduced to the lowest figure, those of the Ordnance Department having been reduced from 174 to 9 lacs. And the report adds that the reduction of the Commissariat is still falling, and may be expected to fall to as low a figure as 108 lacs per annum.

This is undoubtedly a matter for great congratulation. There was avowedly under the old system a great waste of public money in the Commissariat department. But it must not be forgotten that the curtailing of the transport establishment alluded to so triumphantly must cripple our military resources and the efficiency of our army most tremendously. If a "pater familias" in a fit of economy sells his house, he may rejoice at having realized a sum of money, and got rid of property that required an annual outlay, but he must make up his mind to exposing himself and his family to the inclemency of the season. You cannot sell your carriage and horses and keep them too. An army that cannot move when it is wanted is practically useless. We hope the Government have not been premature in this matter. There is such a thing as false economy that is ten times more ruinous than the most prodigal expenditure. In Madras the reduction made in a similar way, and in the same department, amounts to a difference between 67 lacs, the estimate for 1860-61, and 125½ lacs, the expenditure in 1858-59.

In Bombay the reduction has been eighteen lacs for the year.

We sum up this rather dry detail of facts with the following extract from the report. We hope the arrangements alluded to below will effectually compensate for the loss of locomotive power the army has sustained in the sale of transport cattle:—

"Arrangements suggested by the Military Finance Commission, and approved generally by the Commander in Chief, have been ordered by Government for the re-organisation of the moveable columns, by which the expense is greatly reduced, while the efficiency of those forces for all ordinary purposes is maintained, and their readiness at all points to answer any immediate calls for service is ensured.

"Details of the arrangements are announced in a resolution of Government published in G.G.O. No. 247, dated 19th March, 1861.

"The strength and composition of these columns in the three Presidencies have been fixed as follows:

"BENGAL.—9 batteries of artillery field pieces 54, 9 battalions of European infantry, 7,650 non-commissioned rank and file; 6 squadrons of European cavalry, 840 rank and file; 12 battalions of Native infantry, 8,400 rank and file; 6 squadrons of Native cavalry, 780 rank and file; with seven days' supplies of all kinds for Europeans, and two days' rations, &c., for Native ranks as well as horses, together with spare ammunition at 60 rounds per man for infantry, and 20 rounds for cavalry; sick carriage being provided at 5 per cent. of the above strength."

Has anybody ever seen one of these moveable columns, or do they enjoy only a paper existence? —Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

POISONING IN OUDH.—The Oudh Gazette reports some more Oonao murders. Two bodies were found in a pool of water in the bed of the river Khar, almost naked and with the arms tied behind. There were marks of their having been dragged to the water from some little distance. The pupils of the eyes were dilated as is used in cases of poisoning by datura. Both bodies have been recognised as those of two men going to a marriage in a certain village. This murder is not classed with those known as the mysterious "murders of Oonao," as these have been confined to one circle, and the bodies were generally found with ropes round the neck, of which there was no trace in the present instance.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN CHITTAGONG.—It may be remembered that lately the Government of India sanctioned, as an experiment, the establishment of farms and factories among the Kookees of the Chittagong hills, for the growth and purchase of cotton. Inquiries were made by the Lieutenant-Governor, which led him to determine on establishing a factory or a small model plantation. The latest news of the intentions of the Hill tribes is very favourable. Rutton Poa, having comprehended the lesson taught by the penetration into the recesses of the Hills by the Expeditionary Force of last year, two other chiefs have made submission, and negotiations with a more distant tribe are in progress. The best place would be the Kurnafuolee River, which flows close by the Sudder Station, and forms the port of Chittagong, which can be entered by sea-going ships of a good size, except during a couple of months in the year. But now the Governor-general thinks a cotton farm would have no political effect on the tribes, and that it should be left to private enterprise, aided by such facilities as grants of land, police, roads, and other legitimate measures of assistance.

AMERICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—We have received the statistics of the American Methodist Episcopal Church for the year ending November, 1861. There were 17 Missionaries, 12 native preachers, 21 School Teachers, 93 communicants. The average Sabbath congregations were 371, the number of Sabbath scholars 233, the native orphans 167. The number of schools 18, day scholars, male 371, female 86. There were 57 baptisms during the year. Should the present state of America not prevent it, the Board intend to increase the number of missionaries to 25. They would then organise them as a Conference with power to manage their own affairs. The new missionaries would probably be posted to Oude.

DR. DILLON will succeed Major McCulloch as an agent in the Muneepore country. Major McCulloch has done good service there, isolated as he was from all civilisation. Though the danger from the King of Ava to meet with an agent first sent there is over, an officer is still required to check the savage restlessness which, as among the Kookees and all Indo-Chinese tribes, so frequently bursts forth in acts of cruelty.

DISTINGUISHED ARRIVALS.—Among some other distinguished arrivals that have lately honoured Agra is that of the god Krishna, who is, we hear, now "putting up" somewhere in the city. He has come in the form of a Brahmin, and passes his time chiefly in a swing, in which he sits while being swung by married women. His presence came to our notice in consequence of one of the ladies, who left her husband to swing the god, not returning to her family. Her husband has laid a complaint before the magistrate, and the god has been summoned to the Kutcherry to reply to the charge.—Delhi Gazette.

OFFICIAL BIOLOGY.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette tells a characteristic story of Sir Hugh Rose. He was expected at one of the European hospitals one morning, when it so happened that the bread did not "come up to the mark." The medical officer in charge said it was sour. The majority of the chief's staff having preceded him tasted the bread, and pronounced it good. The doctor insisted it was not, and while the debate was going on his Excellency appeared, and on tasting the bread declared it was sour. "Don't you think so?" he asked some of his staff, who, to the doctor's infinite amusement, instantly commended with Sir Hugh's opinion. So it beared the private soldiers laugh when they have been sternly questioned into declaring good potatoes to be bad, while the innocent officer suffers.

OPUM CULTIVATION.—A correspondent of the Harkara in the opium districts of Bengal says the cultivation of the poppy is remunerative enough to the ryot so far as the State is concerned. But there is the usual curse of all our administration, from which the ryot will not protect himself—the intervention of native middlemen. A Khattadar contracts with Government and receives advances, part of which he distributes among the ryots. But out of the sum not only does he get a large share, but also the native official at the opium agency by whom the advances are disbursed. The same difficulty exists in every household and in every cash transaction with a native, however just and liberal a capitalist he may be. The greatest oppression consists in this, that on the failure of the crop from natural causes, the Khattadar sells the cultivator out of house and home. It would seem from this writer's statements, derived at second-hand, however, that the State is to the ryot in opium what the planter was in indigo. Both seek to be just, but middlemen prevent justice.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The Lahore Chronicle with justice acknowledges the services of the Rev. Mr. Sloggett, Chaplain of Anarkullee, and about to leave. The Famine Relief Fund, which he so ably administered, is now wound up. It expended Rs. 10,10,945, of which the Punjab gave 2,30,000, the local Government a similar amount, and England and India the rest. Besides this donation, Government made advances to cultivators of rupees 275,000, to be repaid hereafter. It also gave employment on public works, which might otherwise not have been undertaken, and paid Rs. 325,000 in wages, and it remitted land revenue to the extent of Rs. 675,000. The unspent balance still remaining in the hands of the committee amounts to rupees 3,49,124-5-3, of which three lakhs are invested in Government securities. The interest is to be devoted to the support of 300 children left orphans by the famine, and the whole will form a reserve fund to be kept available for famine relief, primarily in the Punjab, and ultimately in any part of India in which famine may unhappily recur. The Agra committee have determined to endow a General Orphan Asylum with their surplus of Rs. 2,86,270, so as to accommodate 860 orphans.

THE DHUTTEA DISTURBANCES.—The Englishman has news from Gwalior of a dispute which has arisen consequent on the support given by certain thakoors to an illegitimate son of the late Rajah of Dhuttea, and who they have set up as heir to the ghuddee, in opposition to the legitimate occupier thereof, the Rajah Bhowanee Singh. The thakoors, who have for some time been inimical to the Rajah, have at length obtained possession of Oorjun Singh, his illegitimate son, and in his name, and under the warranty of his presence, occupied the fort of Seunda; and having collected a number of budmasies and bad characters together, have bid defiance to the Rajah and have attempted to collect the revenues of the Rajship, and in doing so have much harassed the people. At the same time there is a strong party in the State in favour of Oorjun Singh, and, of late, Rajah Bhowanee Singh has found some difficulty in successfully opposing the insurgents. Under these circumstances a force was despatched from Jhansi on the morning of the 22nd Feb. to the support, it is presumed, of the Political Agent and the Rajah. It is not intended to enter into hostilities, but simply to secure order, and, to the legitimate ruler, the maintenance of his rights. The column which on that morning marched out of Jhansi to the scene of hostilities was under the command of Major Bouchier, H.M.'s 52nd Regiment, and consisted of two companies H.M.'s 52nd Light Infantry; three companies H.M.'s 34th N.I.; head-quarters H.M.'s 16th Native Cavalry and two guns. The Brigadier returned to Gwalior at the same time. The impression among the natives is, that the knowledge that such a force has left Jhansi to enforce a return to order will be amply sufficient to ensure a cessation of the present dispute. Nor is it likely that any native, whatever his condition, would be so insane as to oppose the Government and so draw upon him such an overwhelming force as could be immediately marched against him from all quarters of the district. In this case, the authorities have doubtless acted with discretion; for by at once moving troops to the scene of action, they have made a demonstration which will ensure respect and due observance of their commands. Were this the course usually pursued, we should hear of fewer acts of rebellion and opposition to the Government. If every demand of the Government were made at the head of a force sufficient to compel compliance therewith, it would be for the good of the country at large, inasmuch as it would at once demonstrate to the unruly the determination of the Government to allow of no opposition to its will, but to enforce its orders fully and entirely. If it is worth while to make a demand, it is worth while to make it also evident, that we mean to enforce it, and make recusants pay the costs.

THE DHUTTEA EXPEDITION COUNTERMANDED.—Information was received in Agra on the 26th of February that the force under orders for Duttea was not wanted. The rebels have surrendered, and the troops return to quarters. The details of the force ordered out are as follows:—Wing of H.M.'s 13th L. I., 31st N. I., wing 41st N. I., 14th Bengal Cavalry, 2nd battalion 22nd Brigade Artillery, two 10-inch mortars, one 8-inch ditto, one 24-pounder, one 18 pounder, and one 8-inch howitzer. The force was under Colonel Tombs, V.C., and not under Lieutenant-colonel Knatchbull, as at first stated. In addition to this, a force was ordered from Jhansi, and another from Jabour, but the strength of the latter we do not know. The cavalry marched on the 21st, and Captain Hovenden went on the 22nd to reconnoitre the rebel's fort, which is said to be a place of considerable strength. A company of artillery was on its way down from Meerut, but it was recalled, as it was found it would not be wanted. Arrangements were completed here for forwarding it on to Gwalior by bullock train, had it been required. The great strength of the force ordered out, apparently so disproportionate to the strength of the enemy, and the importance of the interests concerned, had led to surmises that there was a good deal behind the scenes that the public were unacquainted with. There was a report, founded, we believe, on substantial grounds, that the rebels in Duttea had been in correspondence with some of the independent States, and had been endeavouring to induce them to join, and set the "pot boiling" again. And it is stated that one or more of the chiefs of the States thus addressed peached, and so the murder was out. We do not ourselves place any great confidence in these rumours.—Delhi Gazette.

LAHORE, Feb. 16.—At last the locomotive has arrived! So great an event could not pass off without some notice, and the immense concourse of people who had assembled near the "Char Borjee," on the Mooltan road, was a convincing proof that to the greater portion of those present the sight of the much talked-of engine was a new and novel one. Tents were pitched for the accommodation of visitors, and the band heralded the arrival of the "monster" with the thrilling notes of "See the Conquering Hero Comes." It was dragged by one hundred bullocks, four abreast, with two elephants most systematically propelling it forward from behind, by pressing their heads against it. Every road and bye-path was thronged with natives, whose wonder was strongly depicted on their astonished countenances, and to this day crowds of them make a diurnal visit to see the "iron horse," as they call it. The line will be formally opened on the 3rd of March.

DISSOLUTION OF THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEER CORPS.—The officer commanding the Calcutta Volunteer Rifle Regiment having reported to the Lieutenant-governor that, at a meeting of the members of the corps, held for the purpose at the Town-hall, on the 24th of January, 1862, it was decided by a large majority of those present to dissolve the corps, the Lieutenant-governor has confirmed the proceedings of that meeting, and announced the dissolution of the corps. Captain Malleon has been directed to cause all the arms and accoutrements, and other stores, the property of the Government, which were entrusted to the members of the corps, to be returned into store.

COLONEL BROOME is gazetted as Inspector-general of Ordnance, during the absence on sick leave of Colonel Scott. Lieutenant-Colonel Maxwell will act as superintendent of the Cossipore Foundry.

UGLY RUMOURS.—Reports are in circulation of a military outrage of a very serious nature having occurred at Meean Meer. A commanding officer of one of the Hill regiments stationed there is said to have been dragged from his horse and assaulted by a private of the regiment. According to the Delhi Gazette a very ugly rumour is going about of three officers being missing, who are said to have been murdered somewhere between Gwalior and Jhansie. "And it is stated that the remains of their servants have been seen in the jungle. We give the report as it has reached us, coupling it with the expression of a hope, and our belief, that it is unfounded."

NANA SAHIB.—The Bombay Gazette:—"The last we had heard of the supposed Nana of Bithoor was that he was to be sent from Sind to the North-West Provinces to be subjected to a microscopic examination by a medical gentleman who had lanced him. We now see it stated, however, that he is still at Kurrachee, and in order to make the most of an idle prisoner, he is employed as a writer in the Collector's Office. It is not precisely known what he is writing, but there seems to be no doubt about the fact." The Phoenix:—"Everybody knows that the Nana is still alive, and further took it for granted that the Government knew his whereabouts. The man is in all probability in Nepal; but how to lay hold of him is another question. We very much doubt that Jung Bahadoor would give him up under anything short of a threat of war, and the Government at home would never sanction a war with a friendly Power for the non-surrender of a political refugee. It should, however, be easy enough to bring the Nana within the category of criminals, and to the surrender of such, seeking refuge in his territories. Sir Jung Bahadoor should make no objection; though if we remember aright it is not very long since the Indian Government refused to permit the pursuit of Nepalese runaway delinquents within the British frontier."

TIRHOOT SALTPETRE.—"Our advices from Tirhoot," says the Englishman, "lead us to fear that the manufacture of saltpetre, which has hitherto been carried on to a considerable extent in that district, is likely to fall off very considerably this season. When the high prices which have, until lately, prevailed were first realised, the Tirhoot zemindars raised the rents of the land on which the crude saltpetre is manufactured. So long as the crude saltpetre manufacturers obtained prices for their manufacture which enabled them to meet the exorbitant rents claimed, they preferred submitting to the extortionate demands of their landlords to abandoning the land out of which they still derived a profit, however small. Now, however, that the price of crude saltpetre has fallen so considerably that they can no longer pursue their callings to a profit at the high rents demanded by their landlords, they have nearly all ceased its manufacture; and our letters, which are up to the 18th Feb., inform us that, up to date, but two thousand maunds had been made this year against a hundred thousand maunds of the previous year. It is confidently asserted, moreover, that in the Tirhoot district, the quantity of saltpetre manufactured this year will not exceed ten thousand maunds, whereas the average annual production of refined saltpetre is not under five hundred thousand maunds."

SIKKIM.—We have, from other quarters, further news from Darjeeling, but of vastly different import from the last which reached us. We then gave the purport of a message from the Bootials demanding from the Government a sum of Rs. 2,000, accompanied by a threat that, if the amount was not paid at once, they would come and take it. We have now the reverse of this—the substance of a petition addressed by the Rajah of Sikkim to the British Government, representing the straits to which he is reduced by poverty, caused by loss of territory, and the cessation of the allowance heretofore made to him by the British Government for the occupancy of Darjeeling. It appears that when the Lieut.-governor of Bengal was at Darjeeling at the close of last year, he granted an audience to Cheboo

Lama, the Vakeel and Dewan of the present Rajah of Sikkim, who then represented the lamentable condition to which his master was reduced, owing to the perfidy of the late minister, and the consequent confiscation of territory which was made by the British in 1849. The Lieut.-governor urged upon the Dewan the necessity that existed for the encouragement of trade and agriculture by the Rajah within his yet remaining patrimony, and the advantage which could not fail to accrue to himself and his people therefrom. Since then it would appear that the Rajah has fallen into greater difficulties still, and hearing that Dr. Campbell was about to leave Darjeeling and resign his appointment prior to his departure, he forwarded to him a petition which he prayed him to lay before the Governor-general. In this petition the Rajah represents that since the Darjeeling Morung was confiscated by the British Government his family has become overwhelmed with poverty; that his father was mainly dependent upon the stipend he received from the Government in consideration of his allowing the occupation of the Morung by the British; and that, with the loss of that, he has lost well nigh his sole means of subsistence. He therefore prays that, in consideration of the good understanding which has been restored between him and the British Government by the treaty recently entered into, that Government will not allow him to continue in his present deplorable condition, which cannot but reflect disgrace not only upon himself but upon the Government which reduced him to his present state of poverty. Dr. Campbell, in forwarding the Rajah's petition, represented that there was no question as to the difficulties with which the Rajah was encompassed through the abject state of poverty to which he is reduced by the confiscation of the Darjeeling Morung, and the loss of the Rs. 3,000 a year he received for it prior to its confiscation; that his present difficulties and past troubles were brought about by no hostility of his, but by the treachery of his late Dewan; and that, in consequence, he would urge upon the Government of India to grant a life pension to the Rajah. To grant a life pension so long as the Rajah remains on the guddee would, in our opinion, be a sure means of creating further troubles on his death. Pension him by all means, if not to do so can be cause of casting any reflection on the Government; but, as it never answers to keep stipendiaries in power, let him, on the receipt of a pension, vacate the guddee he is too poverty-stricken to fill without it. We have had enough of maintaining puppet sovereigns on their thrones at the expense of the public. It neither redounds to the credit, nor adds to the strength, of the British name.—Englishman.

ROAD MAKING.—We are glad to see that the coolie country of Chota Nagpore is to have roads at last. A main line through Palamow from Oontaree near the Soane river, which branches to the Grand Trunk road at Shergotty and at Chowparan, will give two outlets for the districts of Sirgoojah and Palamow, terminating on the Grand Trunk road, with a base of thirty-five miles between them. The westernmost is a direct line to Gya and Patna, and the easternmost runs through the high lands of Ramghur, where cotton cultivation has been successfully introduced. Half of the work will be carried out this year. The Garrow country in Assam, so recently entered by our invading troops, is to be civilised by roads. There will be one from Gowaiparah round the foot of the hills to Kurreebaree, and thence to the boundaries of Sylhet; and the other right across the Garrow hills. They will serve to bring cotton into the market from the Garrow country, which is admirably adapted to the growth of cotton of the best description. The sum of Rs. 40,000 is to be spent on the Darjeeling cart road. When completed next year, there will be an excellent carriage road from the Ganges to Darjeeling Bazar. The rise of about 7,000 feet from the plains to the ridge of the Sinchal spur will be at the uniform and easy gradient of 1 in 30.

MEEAN MEER.—It will be remembered by our readers that cholera raged very severely in the North-West and the Punjab during the hot weather of last year, and that of all the stations where our troops suffered from the ravages of this disease, Meean Meer was the most grievously devastated. Five hundred English soldiers fell victims to this malady at that single station. This was the more remarkable because at the neighbouring civil station of Lahore there was no loss of life from this cause, nor even among the natives in the large adjoining city. Of course speculation was rife all over India as to the causes which had conferred this dismal distinction upon Meean Meer, and a medical commission was sent up from Calcutta partially, if not principally, to inquire into the subject. Some people entertained a suspicion that the troops had been poisoned; one writer published a suggestion that the mortality was owing to the copper cooking pans being imperfectly tinned. Another solution of the mystery is now given. We quote the Allahabad Gazette:—"The well water at Meean Meer has been found, on analysis, to contain considerable quantities of sulphuretted hydrogen gas, animalculæ, and other noxious ingredients. This will be another nail in the coffin of that unfortunate station." Probably the discovery is owing to the efforts of the medical commission. At any rate it is a very useful one, and now, as the evil is discovered, a remedy may be applied.

THE BHOOTAN DISTURBANCES are assuming rather serious dimensions, and the conduct of the Bhootan authorities may necessitate a move into that State, and possibly a military occupation for some time. The advance of troops from Caragola Ghaut has, doubtless, had the effect of deterring the Bhootanese from descending into the plains, as it was anticipated they might do; but they have not been idle; nor have they waited to see what steps we might take. They have, on the contrary, taken the initiative, have advanced into Sikkim, and carried off with them hence, as prisoners, a small party of Sikkimites, men and women, numbering in all thirteen. As there must be many sites in Bhootan equally favourable as Darjeeling to the growth of the tea and coffee plant it might not be disadvantageous to confiscate a portion of the Bhootan territory, and by its sale to planters, pay the cost of the occupation.

DESTRUCTION OF BARRACKS AT AGRA.—Three of the barracks in the infantry lines at Agra were destroyed by fire on the 24th of February. They had only just been rethatched and put in order for the approaching hot season. The fire originated from the toy cannon of a young lad. The wad of the cannon, which was of rag, alighted on the roof, which was soon in a blaze. Captain Walter and his officers were soon on the spot, and the fact of the destruction being so limited is due to the exertions of the 35th Regiment, guided by the officers. The wind was high, and it is fortunate that none of the houses in cantonments caught fire. The regimental magazine was removed in time.

NEPAUL.—Letters from Nepaul inform us that on the 5th February Katmandoo went into mourning, and was startled by the firing of sixty minute guns from the Nepalese batteries as a mark of respect and sympathy on the part of the Durbar for her Majesty the Queen of England, in the loss she and the British public have sustained in the death of the Prince Consort. The Durbar has also indited a letter of condolence to her Majesty, expressive of sympathy for her affliction on the present lamentable occurrence. Jung Bahadoor was still in the Terai, but was expected to return to Katmandoo in the course of the current month.

MORAR (GWAJIOR), Feb. 28th.—The force that left cantonments on Monday the 24th returned yesterday, as the young Rajah had given himself up to the Political Agent, from fear of the Europeans and heavy guns, of course! The fort, which is said to be the strongest in Bundelcund, is nicely situated on the banks of a pleasant river, where there is a waterfall and several temples, tomb, &c. It is now garrisoned by two companies of the 34th N. I., from Jhansie. The 14th Bengal Cavalry are also out there. There is some talk of blowing it up.

H.M.'s 43RD REGIMENT arrived in Calcutta from Madras on the 22nd February, and entered Fort William.

THE NATIVE MEETING ON FEB. 25. — Owing to the utter want of arrangement, the body of the hall, the seats and tables, were taken possession of by an unmannerly and unruly mob, whose ceaseless shouts and restless endeavours to see and hear what was going on, rendered it impossible for more than a score or two immediately around the Sheriff to see or hear anything. A long table had been arranged down the hall at right angles with what was intended for a platform, the seats at which table were apparently intended for the magnates of the expected audience. The table was unceremoniously appropriated by the mob, whilst the actors in the programme seated themselves, not upon, but around the platform, making the focus of the proceedings a very hot and most unsavoury similitude of a bear-pit. In the middle of the proceedings the police made a raid upon this table, the only result being that its occupants squatted instead of standing upon it, and made rather more row than before, if that were possible; whilst now and then the smashing of lamps added emphasis to demonstrations of applause given to what was mere dumb show to every soul more than two yards from the speakers. At a few minutes after four o'clock, Baboo Heralaul Seal having moved that the Sheriff do take the chair, Rajah Radhakant Bahadoor then moved the first resolution:—"That this meeting desires to record its high sense of the eminent public services of the Right Hon. Earl Canning during his administration of British India, marked as his career has been by consummate ability and rare judgment, by unswerving rectitude of purpose, and by a large, liberal, and enlightened spirit of justice and mercy, which have secured for him the gratitude of the teeming millions of this country." Baboo Ramgopal Ghose seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously. Baboo Romanath Tagore moved the adoption of the following address, which was read by Mr. John Cochrane:—"To His Excellency Earl Canning, Viceroy and Governor-general of India. —We, the inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity, venture to approach your Excellency, on the eve of your departure, in order to express to you the regret felt by us all on your resigning the government. During the eventful period of your administration, we have never failed to admire the justice and impartiality which have always characterised your actions. It is with mingled feelings of respect and gratitude that we call to mind your humane and merciful conduct to our unfortunate and misguided countrymen, exercised at a time when, by most men, the principles of moderation would have been forgotten. We thank your lordship for the late extraordinary reduction of taxation which, at the very time it lessens the burthens of the poor, furnishes the best proof of the prosperous condition of the country. We are grateful for the many liberal measures which have adorned your administration; for the principles of justice so constantly inculcated by you, rendered doubly dear by being blended with a humanity dictated by wisdom and moderation. In the establishment of the Councils of the Empire we recognise an anxious desire to forward the interests and well being of India. We thank your Excellency for the valuable privilege which you have conferred upon the community by allowing the redemption of the landed revenue; and we are especially grateful for the careful protection of the interests of the public creditor, which is apparent in the face of the proclamation issued by your lordship. At no time has your Excellency been ever wanting in promoting the welfare of your fellow-creatures; the cause of education never had a warmer friend. We need not enlarge on your many noble and charitable actions. We lament the existence of the present disputes in Bengal, and the bad passions created by them. In accordance with the benevolent suggestions of your Excellency, we earnestly trust that these our better days may give rise to kinder feelings, and that resentments of every kind among all classes of society may pass away and be forgotten. If such should be, it will not be the least cheering reflection in the mind of your lordship when parting from the land you have governed so long. We look upon your Excellency as one who has saved this country from great and impending calamity: the results are before us: a mutiny suppressed; public credit maintained; and peace universal. Nothing now remains but to bid your Excellency farewell. Safe may you return to your native land; the good wishes of all attend you. Think, at times, kindly of a people by whom you will always be held in respectful and grateful honour. Once again farewell. In the far land of the West, if justice and humanity be ever honoured, you cannot but hold a most distinguished place." Mr. Cochrane was about to second the resolution, viz., "That the Address just read be presented to Lord Canning on the occasion of his retirement from the Viceroyalty of India," when the Sheriff rose to suggest that an omission had apparently been made in the opening words of the address, viz., "We, the inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity." This should be altered to "We, the native inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity." He saw around him many hundreds of natives, but only two or three of his own countrymen. The address spoke of the rebellious sepoys as "our misguided fellow-countrymen," and he for one did not recognise sepoys as his "misguided countrymen." The whole requisition had been signed by natives, and emanated from the native community, although expressing sentiments generally approved of.—Mr. Piffard here interrupted the Sheriff, and said that he had seen European names signed to the requisition.—The Sheriff replied that such a requisition had never been received by him. The address did the natives honour, but for all that, it was an address put forward especially by the native community.—A Native was here heard to remark that it would be well to say "the Natives and two European gentlemen."—The Sheriff was here about to put the resolution to the vote, with the substitution of "fellow-subjects" for "fellow countrymen," when, Mr. Walter Brett, editor of the Englishman, moved as an amendment, that for the words, "We, the inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity," should be substituted "We, native inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity, with the concurrence of the European gentlemen whose names are appended." This amendment, however, was negatived, after which the original motion was put and carried. Baboo Ramapersaud Roy next moved the third resolution:—"That his lordship be solicited to allow a marble statue of himself to be taken for the purpose of being erected in the city of Calcutta as a memorial of his lordship's successful administration of the British Indian Empire." This resolution was seconded by Rajah Pertab Chunder Sing, and supported by Mr. James Hume, the Hon. Rajah Dinker Rao, and Moulvie Abdool Lutef. A deputation was then appointed to wait upon his Excellency the Viceroy, and also a committee to receive subscriptions. The usual vote of thanks having been proposed to the Sheriff, the meeting, amidst much noise and uproar, separated.

DISTRIBUTION OF MEDALS TO HER MAJESTY'S 104TH FOOT.—The medals for her Majesty's 104th Foot were distributed early on the 28th February, by Major-general Wheler, who addressed the regiment as follows:—"Men of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers. I so address you, because as the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, you served with distinction in those battles, which I am about to allude to, and earned for yourselves those decorations you now wear, and that which it will be my pride and pleasure to present to you on this day. You are now her Majesty's 104th Regiment of Foot, and, as such regiment, I am satisfied you will never disgrace those colours which you have heretofore so bravely defended, through every hardship and danger which attends a soldier's life. It is in name only that the regiment is changed. Nothing can ever change the nature of British soldiers. I will now tell you, as briefly as I can, where the regiment has been chiefly engaged, and where it always distinguished itself. The regiment was raised in 1839, and was first employed under Sir Charles Napier in Scinde—then in the 2nd Sikh war, at Ramnugger, Chillianwalla, Goojrat, the pursuit of the Sikhs and Affans to Peshawur, under the illustrious Sir Walter Raleigh Gilbert, and lastly in Pegu. I must not pass over one remarkable passage in the history of this regiment when, at Chillianwalla being attacked in front and from behind simultaneously, wheeled its rear rank about, and captured the guns. The crowning passage in your history, and for which you are now to receive the medal and clasp, was your conduct at the siege of Delhi, and it will ever be remembered in the annals of warfare. The siege and capture of Delhi was nothing remarkable as the siege and capture of a fortress. For in comparison with Bhurtpore and Mooltan, the fortress of Delhi was simply a matter of no great difficulty to a strong and well appointed army. But the siege was, indeed, remarkable for the incidents pertaining to it. The city had been taken by the mutinous sepoys, who calculating on the prestige of the name attached to the place, as the capital of the Mahommedan rulers, held it until our available troops could be assembled. It is remarkable because with so small and inadequate a force we held our own, and kept the enemy where they had congregated in vast numbers, until we were reinforced from the Punjab, and until we could collect troops from China, from England, and elsewhere. It was remarkable for the manner in which we gained time, and time was all we wanted. That time was gained by the bravery, the fortitude, the endurance, under all difficulties—the unceasing watchfulness of the small but gallant band, which daily, nay hourly, had to repel the formidable attacks of the enemy. What share the 2nd Fusiliers took in those desperate struggles is a matter of history, and could not be better told by any one than Lord Clyde, who said that the regiment had done as good service as any corps that had distinguished itself at the siege; and Lord Clyde is no mean authority on that point. All of you fought nobly, and would do so again. I am sorry not to see on the parade ground this morning the officer who had the great honour to command the regiment on so very trying an occasion. I regret also the cause of his absence. He is on the sick list. I allude to Major Boyd, and I am satisfied that he, who knew the worth of the corps so well, will feel as proud, on witnessing the token this day to be given to his men, as he will feel when he takes his own from my hand." Colonel Birch, commanding the regiment, returned thanks to Gen. Wheler, on behalf of the officers and men of the regiment, in a brief, but expressive, and well-delivered speech.

PROMOTIONS IN THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—Mr. M. Kempson, Inspector of Schools, is appointed Director of Public Instruction in place of Mr. Reid, c.s., who has gone to Europe on furlough; Dr. Anderson, of the Agra College, becomes inspector, and Mr. C. Pearson, M.A., now professor, becomes Principal of the College. Mr. Templeton becomes Principal of the Bareilly College, and Mr. K. Deighton, B.A., Professor in the Agra College. Mr. Kempson's appointment is a good one.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN THE PUNJAB.—The most striking measure of the year, the Punjab Government report, with reference to the dispensing of Criminal Justice there, has been the investiture of some of the principal subject chiefs and jagheerdars with criminal jurisdiction. This is a course which Lord Dalhousie, who was not considered generally very favourable to the encouragement of a powerful native aristocracy, had approved of in 1849. "There may be cases," that eminent statesman said, "in which it may be expedient to invest jagheerdars with police powers subordinate to the local civil authority; these should be treated as special cases. The Governor-general believes that in the Cis Sutlej Province there are several states in which the assumption of police powers by the British Government has been quite unnecessary, and in one or two cases very inexpedient and much opposed to the interests and wishes of the chiefs who have deserved well at our hands; and he will be glad to concur in a recommendation which he understands has for some time been contemplated by some of the civil officers, to modify the stringency

RELIGIOUS NEUTRALITY.—The Magistrate of Tanjore reports to Government on the charges brought against the Tahsildar of Munnargudi by the Rev. W. C. Simpson. The charge appears to have been that the officer in question violated the principle of religious neutrality, by giving the aid of the police when on duty to the people in the drawing of the idol car at their annual festival. In that village, as during the great festival of Juggernaut in Serampore, and many other places, it is a gratifying fact that real difficulty is now found in inducing even drugged low-caste men to pull the car, or submit to hook-swinging. The Government order says:—"It is evident from the foregoing papers that there was some movement on the part of the Government officials on the occasion in question. The Government consider that the notice taken of the matter will doubtless have a good effect, and that no special orders from them are called for."

RANGOON.—The Rangoon Gazette notes the arrival of Colonel Phayre, recently promoted to be Chief Commissioner of Rangoon, who was received with great enthusiasm by the inhabitants, the volunteers forming a guard of honour on the occasion. Hopes are entertained that Colonel Phayre will shortly induce the King of Burmah to enter into a treaty or some other arrangement by which our commercial relations with him may be improved. The volunteer movement is not prospering at Rangoon. One of the local papers expatiates on the moral and physical advantages to be derived from drill, and suggests that they should be combined with exemption from the Income-tax. Rangoon, the writer says, is "flooded" with young men, who can scarcely remain impervious to his appeals.

MADRAS AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—Among the articles for the International Exhibition contributed by Madras are some fine specimens of furniture, ornamented with carved representations of Indian objects. The principal articles are a rosewood frame to receive a glass, two oval frames for oval glasses, a bureau de dame, and a grand drawing-room sofa.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN BRETT.—Rangoon papers announce the death of Captain Brett, commander of the Lady Canning, formerly in command of the steamer Enterprise. The deceased officer rendered good service to the State while in the latter vessel employed on the Irrawaddy stations in 1853-54 in the suppression of river dacoity.

THE HON. THOMAS PYCROFT has been appointed provisional Member of the Madras Council, in room of Mr. Morehead, about to retire from the Service.

COTTON IN CUDDAPAH.—The Government offered some time back to let individuals have land rent-free for five years, provided that the said land, or a portion of equal size was cultivated with cotton. The Collector of Cuddapah has misunderstood the orders, and concluded that the cultivation is to be pursued for five consecutive years on actually the same identical plot of land. He, of course, finds the cultivators unwilling to take land on those conditions, as they consider it necessary to alternate the cultivation with a grain crop. The collector also says: A prize of rupees, Rs. 200 or Rs. 300 adjudged on the spot, will have a greater effect in stimulating care in the cultivation and clean picking of the cotton crop than the knowledge of a larger prize to be adjudged elsewhere, in which the cotton cultivators appear to take no interest, and for which they are unlikely to compete.

BOMBAY.*MISCELLANEOUS.

CHANGES AND CHANCES.—Mr. Michael Scott (Ritchie, Steuart and Co.) and Mr. T. F. Gray (Dirom, Hunter, and Co.) have been appointed commissioners of Income-tax for the town and Island of Bombay, vice Messrs. R. Strong and W. F. Hunter, resigned. It is understood that Mr. Young, c.s., will not return to India, and it is very doubtful whether Mr. Spooner will do so either, now that Mr. Inverarity is appointed to succeed Mr. Reeves in Council. Mr. A. D. Robertson will, we presume, be confirmed in the appointment of chief secretary, and Mr. Davis, upon the retirement of Mr. Jenkins, succeed to the commissionership of Customs. Mr. Mansfield, it seems, and not Mr. Ellis, is the commissioner elect of Scinde. The Hon. Mr. Reeves retires from the 12th of March. Mr. B. H. Ellis is appointed to act as chief secretary to Government. Mr. M. H. Scott (Ritchie, Steuart and Co.) has been appointed by Sir George Clerk a member of the local Legislative Council.

OPIMUM.—The following Government Gazette Extraordinary was issued on Saturday, March 1st:—Notification.—It is hereby notified, by direction of the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council, that the duty on Malwa opium will be reduced to 600 rupees per chest, from and after the 1st October 1862.—Bombay Castle, 1st March 1862.

LIBEL CASE.—A somewhat grave case of libel is pending in the Court of Adawlut at Kurrachee against Mr. Coates, a railway contractor of Mooltan. The suit is instituted by a Mr. Dunolly (Dunolly and Co.), who acted, it seems, as agent for the defendant, in the receipt of railway stores at the port, and their transmission up the Indus. Not satisfied with Mr. Dunolly's accounts, some errors in which are admitted to have occurred, Mr. Coates seems to have publicly charged Mr. Dunolly, during that gentleman's absence in Calcutta, with fraud, embezzlement, absconding, and we know not what else. The case, we think, should not have gone into court. Mr. Coates should have frankly apologised for the hasty injustice he had shown Mr. Dunolly.

THE KURRACHEE SMALL CAUSE COURT, established 15th August last, has been successful, though not so decidedly as the Courts of the N.W. Provinces. From 15th August to 14th December the suits filed and tried numbered 556, the average per month being 139. 395 were decided in favour of the plaintiffs, 37 for defendants, 104 cases were dismissed, and 20 compromised. The amount claimed was Rs. 35,076-8, giving an average of Rs. 63 in each suit. The sum awarded to plaintiffs amounted to Rs. 22,880-13: and that disallowed, dismissed, and compromised to Rs. 12,195 11. The details of suits filed were as follows:—

| From Rs. | 1   | to  | Rs. 10 | ... | ... | 144 |
|----------|-----|-----|--------|-----|-----|-----|
| "        | 10  | ... | 50     | ... | ... | 243 |
| "        | 50  | ... | 100    | ... | ... | 73  |
| "        | 100 | ... | 300    | ... | ... | 74  |
| "        | 300 | ... | 500    | ... | ... | 22  |

The average duration of each suit was six days, and the average total costs of suit incurred by parties 10 per cent. The receipts were in excess of the expenditure by Rs. 347-7-5, the amount of the former being Rs. 2,884-1-7.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.—Invalids of H.M.'s British regiments, viz., the Royal Artillery, 1st battalion 18th regiment, 3rd battalion 60th Rifles, 1st Dragoon Guards, 1st battalion Royals, 17th Lancers, 43rd, 68th, 91st regiments, 74th Highlanders and 69th regiment, eleven women and twenty five children, embarked for England on the 25th February, on board the Barham, under charge of the Honourable A. E. Harris, of H.M.'s 43rd Light Infantry. The 10th regiment N.I., now on its way from Dinapore towards the Bootan frontier, is to be stationed at Titalyah, Punkabaree, and Sillegorie, with its head-quarters at the latter place, it being equi-distant from the two former. The 38th will proceed at once to Darjeeling. The invalids, who are at present at the convalescent depot at Senchal, and who are ordered to England, are still detained there, although the season for moving European troops through the Terai and Purneah is fast drawing to a close. The Commander-in-Chief's camp, from Peshawur, reached Lahore on the 27th of February, and will be pitched between the Residency and the race-course. The head-quarters' wing of H.M.'s 94th Regiment was to March from Meean Meer to Julundur, on the same day. H.M.'s 79th Highlanders halted on the 23rd on their way to Nowshera, and were inspected by Major-general Bechar, in the absence of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who rejoins his camp at Lahore. Orders have been issued to the departments concerned to make the necessary preparations for the reception of four hundred men and officers of H.M.'s 92nd Highlanders, coming down to Fort William. They left Dinapore by steamers for Sahibgunge, a railway station on the Ganges opposite Garagola, and from Sahibgunge they will come down by rail to the Presidency, where they are expected to arrive about the 2nd of March. The rest of the 92nd Highlanders will follow when steam carriage is procurable; and on their reaching the Presidency it is intended to send a wing of the 43rd Light Infantry, now garrisoning Fort William, to Dum-Dum; as an entire European regiment, even at its full strength, is not sufficient to perform the duties in the fort. The 17th Bengal Cavalry have marched from Cawnpore for Segowlie, leaving a squadron at the former station. It is decided that the 7th Royal Fusiliers march from Nowshera, en route to Ferozepore, on the 2nd March. The 79th Highlanders cross the Chenab on the 24th or 25th Feb. Captain Lumsden, Assistant Quartermaster-general, is now at Jhelum, making arrangements for quartering two troops of the 7th Dragoon Guards there, during the present hot season. This may be taken as a notice for the regiment to prepare for an early stay at Peshawur. There are now about 350 men on the March from Lahore to Peshawur, to join for the 21st Hussars. They were to be at Wuzerabad on the 24th Feb. Colonel Harris was to leave Mooltan on the 3rd March, to assume command of the Brigade at Barrackpore; Major Salisbury will then succeed to the command of the 101st Fusiliers. This officer has arrived with a large detachment for the regiment, consisting of recruits from the late 6th European Regiment. We understand that the Lahore Light Horse, for some time encamped on the Esplanade of the Fort, for the purpose of taking part in the brigade movements in which the troops at the Presidency have lately been engaged, return to Dum-Dum in a few days. H.M.'s 19th Foot, under command of Colonel Mundy, C.B., arrived on the 26th Feb. at Meean Meer.

MR. CHARLES FORJETT, Deputy Commissioner of Police, it is said, will retire from the service in April or May next. There are few men belonging to the unenvied branch of the Indian Civil Service who have done better service to the State than Mr. Forjett; and his loss will be as much felt by Government as it will be regretted by the public. Both as a public officer and as a private individual, he is held in the highest estimation by all classes of the community. About two years ago, the European and native inhabitants of Bombay presented him with a very valuable testimonial in token of the regard in which he was held. Mr. Forjett's successor has not yet been nominated, but it is rumoured that Mr. Souter, who has earned a high reputation in the mofussil, will take up the Bombay baton. Mr. Souter has more than once distinguished himself, both in the Southern Mahratta country and in the Dekkan. It will be remembered that it was he who captured the Chief of Nurgood. Since then he has been more than usually successful in his operations against the refractory Bheels within his division; in fact he may be said to have coerced into tranquillity the districts in which insurrection periodically manifested itself. Mr. Souter is young, active, and energetic, all recommendations in his favour, and is, moreover, well acquainted with the manners and customs of the natives of the country.

VACCINATION IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY AND SCINDE.—It is most gratifying to find that there was a very large increase in the number of persons vaccinated during the year 1860 over the previous year; and also a very considerable decrease in the ratio of doubtful and unsuccessful cases in favour of the year under report. The total number vaccinated in 1860 was 274,433 against 252,760 in 1859, giving an increase of 21,673 cases. This increase speaks well for the growing enlightenment of the people, as vaccination is making progress against very strong prejudices. This successful invasion of ignorance and prejudice is further proved by the facts that almost as many women as men received vaccination during the year, and that the number vaccinated above one year of age more than doubled the number vaccinated under one year. In regard to sex, there were 148,459 males, and 125,974 females; in regard to age, there were 88,944 under one year, and 185,489 above one year. Out of the 274,433 cases of vaccination, 251,477 were successful, 12,997 unsuccessful, and 9,999 doubtful; the ratio per cent. of successful cases to the number vaccinated being 91·6. This is certainly a very gratifying result, and shows that every possible attention is being paid to this important matter by the medical department of the public service. The scheme of vaccine operations which has produced these admirable results is that of Dr. Peet, the very able Principal of the Grant Medical College, to whom the public service is indebted for many wise and useful measures. The statistics of small-pox during the year under report are extremely satisfactory. Amongst European troops there were, out of a strength of sixteen thousand, only forty-two cases, and four deaths; amongst native troops there were out of a strength of thirty-seven thousand only fifty-five cases and two deaths, and in the galls of the Presidency only one case and no death. In the civil hospitals there were fifty-five cases of the disease treated, and fifteen deaths, the greater number of which occurred at Aden. The prophylactic treatment of this terrible disease is more effectual than the attempt to curb it when it has taken hold of its victim. The physician cannot arrest its course. He cannot do more than attempt to moderate its violence. About two in three of those who take the small-pox die, supposing they have not been vaccinated. If vaccinated the chance is they do not take it, however much exposed. If they do take it, the symptoms are mild, the disease seldom fatal.—Bombay Gazette.

COLOMBO, March 3.—Unlike the previous half of February, the second fortnight has been very favourable to the preparation and shipment of coffee. Accordingly, up to the 26th February six ships had sailed, with 32,205 cwts. Plantation and 9,371 Native. Our total shipments from 1st October, 1861, to end of February, 1862, are:—Plantation, 217,821 cwts.; Native, 72,452 ditto; total, 290,273 ditto. And this without including the cargo of the Titanica, which cleared on the 27th, and took away:—Plantation, 7,341 cwts.; Native, 2,041 ditto; total, 9,382 ditto. So that up to the end of February the total export reached 300,000 cwts. This is a figure far in advance of previous seasons at the same period, showing that if the crop is small great expedition has been used in getting it forward. The increase in Plantation is most marked, and even Native shows an increase on last season. Our friends interested in coffee, and with good means of information, hold that the great bulk of the coffee is already gone, and if the round 400,000 is made up, that is all we can expect. They point as proof to Colombo stores empty of coffee, and to carts returning from the interior unladen, or proceeding to Badulla at this early period of the season. A few think differently, and believe that, somehow, the half million will be made up. We must confess that, looking merely at the result of previous seasons, when a large falling off was, at an early period, predicted, we rather lean to the belief that the total out-turn will be nearer 300,000 than 400,000. We trust this may be the case for the sake of our friends the planters.

For the succeeding crop all the signs are good—fine sunny weather, with occasional gentle showers. The fear seems to be that the crop may ripen all at once, and that there may not be hands enough to pick it.

The Planters' Association of Ceylon as re-organised have held their first meeting. The report submitted did not paint matters couleur de rose. Curiously enough, speechifying seems to have been ignored: at any rate the resolutions are given, but no speeches have been reported. We must confess that we regret this. Abstract resolutions are good, but they are often barren and difficult of comprehension without a report of the discussions which preceded them.

It is stated that consequent on the approaching departure of the Deputy Queen's Advocate for England, Mr. R. F. Morgan, at present District Judge of Colombo, and who has acted as Puisne Justice of the Supreme Court, and Queen's Advocate of Ceylon, is to act as Deputy Queen's Advocate. We have been told that this report is not destitute of foundation. Some such arrangement either is, or at any rate has been, in contemplation.

The Feroze, with Lord Elgin on board, sailed for Calcutta at 9.45 this morning.—Colombo Overland Observer.

SERVICE FOR STAFF CORPS.

March 1.—No. 22.—It is notified for general information that under a recent decision of the Govt. of India, an officer who had elected (or who, not having before elected, might, on his entering the staff corps desire to elect) the old furl. regulations, carries with him into the staff corps so much of his service (authorised leave included) as had been passed in Indian limits and no more; and that to entitle him to retire on a pension of any particular rank he must serve so many more years as would with that service complete the full period of service prescribed for such pension, with the liberty of availing himself, after his entry into the staff corps, of the privileged periods* of absence allowed in para. 30 of the new furl. regulations.

For instance, a capt. who, on entering the staff corps on Feb. 18, 1861, had served 24 years, counting as service for retirement under the old rules, and had been absent 6 years on leave to Europe, would enter the staff corps with a capital of service of 24 years only; and, before he could retire on the pension of a lieut. col., he would have to serve 4 years longer, of which 3 years might be passed on leave.

2. With reference to the foregoing, officers who at date of entering the staff corps had not made election of furl. regulations are requested now to report under which furl. regulations they desire that their service to that date may be calculated.

2. The new head dress is to be a plain native turban of crimson muslin, or other cloth, that for native officers being of the same pattern as those for the men, but of a finer description of muslin, with gold thread border and ends. The pattern and colour of the turban may be established regimentally.

3. The C. in C. directs it to be understood that this change in the head dress is not compulsory, but is left to comdg. officers of corps to introduce it or not as they may deem expedient.

THE INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

THE Committee of the Indian Mutiny Relief Fund cannot be charged with undue haste in submitting to the subscribers their final Report on the administration of the large sum of money confided to their stewardship. Dilatoriness, however, is the only fault that can be found with them. They have, beyond all question, displayed great patience and judgment in disposing of the numerous claims for relief at one time made upon them, and it must also be conceded that they have throughout evinced a proper regard for economy—a virtue of rare occurrence. The total receipts, it appears, amounted to £475,901. 4s. 10d., of which £435,405. 9s. 9d. were the direct fruits of subscriptions, while the balance was made up of £36,850. 11s. 3d. interest on securities, and £3,645. 3s. 10d. repayment of temporary loans. On the other hand, the outgoings up to the present time have been no more than £254,845. 1s. 3d., thus leaving a balance on hand of £221,056. 3s. 7d. The expenditure was in this wise:—Remittances to India, £140,286. 18s. 7d.; Donations in this country, £92,667. 4s. 1d.; Loans, £11,335. 10s. 6d.; and expenses of management, £10,545. 8s. 1d.—the last item including £4,418. 9s. 9d. paid for advertisements. The actual sum, however, at the disposal of the Committee is £246,069. 12s. 9d., as several local committees hold among them £25,013. 9s. 2d., and it is fondly hoped that a further addition will be made by the gradual repayment of outstanding loans. On the last day of 1861 there were 412 widows of soldiers, seamen, &c., 760 orphans of soldiers, seamen, &c., 63 widows or relatives of officers, 69 orphans of officers, and 142 disabled soldiers, making a total of 1,446 persons in receipt of relief from the Fund. The question then naturally suggested itself—how long each of these individuals could continue to benefit by the Fund without exhausting it. The answer is most satisfactory. The capitalized value of the present allowances is estimated at £245,477. 11s. 4d., from which may be deducted the sum of £19,129. 0s. 5d. on account of remarriages of widows and deaths. The capital, therefore, actually required to provide for existing liabilities may be stated at £226,348. 10s. 11d., plus expenses of management, at five per cent. £11,317. 8s. 6d: in all, £237,665. 19s. 5d. Now, as the balance in hand on the 31st December, 1861, was £246,069. 12s. 9d., there still remains over and above all demands the sum of £8,403. 13s. 4d., of which £6,000 are to be applied to providing a competent education to as many orphans as possible, while the balance is “held available for such cases of distress among the sufferers by the mutiny as may be proved satisfactorily to the Committee.” Thus closes not the least glorious chapter relating to that terrible convulsion which for so many months filled the nation with sorrow, indignation, and affright, while it called forth deeds of unrivalled heroism and Christian charity. Already the retrospect is not altogether dark.

BREACHES OF CONTRACT BILL.

It will be within the recollection of our readers that at the height of the Indigo disturbances the Planters demanded with loud outcries and characteristic vehemence that breaches of contract should be punished as a criminal offence. As the law stood redress could only be obtained by civil process, and even then after such long delay, such comparatively heavy costs, and such positive inconvenience, that victory was only a shade less ruinous than defeat. It certainly did not afford reasonable protection to the capitalist who, in accordance with the old established custom of the country, was induced to make advances to his necessitous neighbours in consideration of services to be thereafter rendered. A measure was therefore introduced into the Legislative Council, by Mr. Beadon, having for its object “to provide for the punishment of breach of contract for the cultivation, production, gathering, provision, manufacture, carriage, and delivery of agricultural produce.” Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, however, probably actuated by a pardonable dislike to special legislation, intimated his intention to repeal any such Bill, even though sanctioned by his Excellency the Viceroy. It was accordingly withdrawn, and a Draft Report, containing certain amendments, was prepared by Sir Barnes Peacock, but never presented to the Council, as that Legislative body was itself in the mean time abolished. Since then it has appeared to the Government of India that the principle of Mr. Beadon's Bill was undoubtedly sound so far as it went, but that it did not go far enough. Not only should the fulfilment of agricultural contracts be enforced, but every contractor should be compelled to discharge his lawful obligations, of whatever nature they may be. A new Bill has, therefore, been drawn up by Mr. Ritchie, which provides that if substantial consideration be given and received on account of any lawful engagement, and the recipient refuse to execute his part of the mutual undertaking, it shall rest with the civil court to decide whether such breach of contract has been caused in bad faith and without any reasonable excuse. The Calcutta papers object to these conditions, and affirm that a native appearing before a native magistrate will always succeed in making his excuses valid. But surely it is only fair to require that a “substantial” consideration should be given on the one side, and that the other should not be held answerable for causes of failure beyond his control. An inundation, a civil commotion, the inroads of marauding savages, an epidemic, and other such counter-acting agencies might utterly incapacitate the most honest man in the world for doing what he had pledged himself to do. And under any of these circumstances it would be very hard that, in addition to his inevitable misfortunes, he should be fined or imprisoned, because he was not more than human. Should the non-fulfilment of his engagements, however, arise from dishonesty or culpable negligence, judgment will be recorded against him, and such damages awarded to the plaintiff as shall fully indemnify him for any losses he is likely to incur through the defendant's laxity of principle. If the damages are under 50 rupees the defendant will be liable in execution to three months' imprisonment; if above 50 but under 500 rupees, to six months; and for any larger sum to two years. But an important difference is made between imprisonment for simple debt and for breach of contract. In the latter case the plaintiff is not bound to supply subsistence money, the defendant being compelled to maintain himself, or failing to do so to work for the food provided him by the Government. This measure is intended to apply to every kind of contract and to all classes of society. Europeans come under its penalties as well as the natives, and equal justice is meted out to all alike, whatever their creed or colour. It is not necessary, however, that the consideration should have been paid in money, but it must be something substantial, and not mere earnest money to bind the bargain. “The tradesman who has sold and delivered his goods, or the landlord whose land has been held by a tenant, is as much entitled to protection in respect of the money receivable by him, as the capitalist or planter, who has advanced his money, is entitled to such protection in respect of the goods or produce he is to receive in return.”

As the Friend of India justly observes:—“The two curses of our Indian subjects are their dishonesty and their love of advances. The great recommendation of this Bill is that it will terrify from the former and prevent the latter, even more effectually than it is acknowledged to have done in the Presidency towns already. The Bill encourages capital, while it not only does not sacrifice but recognises the highest principles of right, honesty and mercy. Acting as a terror to evil doers it will form the security and the advantage of them who do well, by substituting for the usurious rates at which advances are made, either low interest or cash payments.”

THE NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL.

WE gather from our Serampore contemporary that the people of India are again about to suffer, in consequence of the thoughtless profusion of their European rulers. Encouraged by the splendid success of the Mysore family, another claimant for redress of pecuniary wrongs has applied to Sir Charles Wood for the modest sum of £300,000, which he asserts to be due to him. This new applicant for substantial justice is ninth in descent from the notorious Jaffier Khan, alternately the creature and the treacherous enemy of the English. False to his own master, Soorajood-Dowlah, Mer Jaffier was created Soobahdar of Bengal, by Colonel Clive, though at that time the Emperor of Delhi was still nominally sovereign of Hindostan. Some years later, indeed, Shah Allum conferred upon the English the Dewanny of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, by which they were empowered to collect and administer the revenues of those provinces. The civil and military Government, however, was not then assumed by the East India Company, though no long period of time was permitted to elapse before the usurpation was made complete. But though unjust and rapacious on a grand scale, the Company or its representatives never refused to bestow immense sums of money upon individuals altogether unworthy of such liberal treatment. In this prodigal spirit they granted an income of £160,000 per annum to the dissolute puppet who styled himself "Nawab Nazim of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa," but not a word was said about the perpetuation of the grant. Nevertheless, from the year 1770 down to the present time, this enormous sum has annually been lavished upon the tawdry ceremonials and profligate pleasures of the titular princeling who claimed to represent the double-dyed traitor, Jaffier Khan. Debarred from all rational pursuits, and deprived of all motive for honourable exertions, each succeeding Nazim plunged deeper and deeper into extravagance and debt, until Lord Wellesley was in some measure compelled to place a check upon such wasteful expenditure. We cannot, indeed, accord much praise to the means adopted by the noble marquis, which wears very much the appearance of "a job." He appointed a Governor-general's agent to reside at Moorshetabad, and "give his whole time and attention to Nizamut affairs." Now, "Nizamut affairs" were actually beyond his jurisdiction, and all that such an officer really could do was to remonstrate with the Nazim on his unseemly conduct, and draw an enormous salary for offering advice that was certain to be rejected. A very large fund, however, has gradually accumulated since 1838, in which year the present Nazim succeeded to the title. As he was then only eight years of age, the Agent drew no more from the Treasury than was actually wanted to cover current and legitimate expenses, leaving a considerable surplus undrawn. Prior to that time, indeed, the "Nizamut Deposit Fund" had swelled to a goodly amount from various sources, and notably from the annual sum of £20,000 set aside by the Nazim. The balance due to the present Nawab cannot, therefore, be less than £300,000, nor does any alternative appear but to pay this, or repudiate a legal claim. It matters not how little the Nazim may be entitled to our respect or sympathy. The fact remains, that a portion of his annual income has been year by year allowed to accumulate until the amount is so huge that payment has become extremely inconvenient. If the case be as it is here stated, it is obvious that the Government have displayed gross carelessness, and that an Agent is altogether useless in any sense. But while recognising the justice of this demand we cannot concede the propriety of continuing the pension to the Nazim's successors—at least, not to the present extent or in the present form. A grant of land would probably be more to his true advantage as well as to our own, while the people of India would no longer be called upon to pay for the vicious indulgences of a coarse debauchee.

PEGU PRIZE MONEY.

Captain JERVIS asked the Secretary of State for India why the Pegu prize money, arising from the sale of prize property captured in Pegu in 1852 and 1853, and ordered to be distributed by Order in Council of the 12th of September, 1860, had not yet been so, and when it would be.

Sir C. WOOD said he was afraid he could not say when the money in question would be distributed. The Royal Warrant authorising the distribution had been passed in Sept., 1861, and sent out to India. In order to prevent delay as far as possible in the matter, notice had been issued by the Prize Committee at Calcutta to the effect that no application for any portion of the money could be received after the 31st of December last. It was not until that date, therefore, that the number of applicants was known. It required, he might add, some time to compare the prize rolls, but when that was done the distribution would take place.

RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The House having resolved itself into committee on this subject,

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that papers would be presented that night by the Secretary to the Treasury, containing the correspondence between the Government and the two telegraph companies, which would give the House a fuller and clearer view of the transaction which it would be asked to authorise than could be readily conveyed in a brief statement from himself. The matter was rather intricate. The company which originally undertook to establish this telegraph, having failed in its design, proposed upon certain terms to give place to a new company, so that the Government had arrangements to make with both companies. The terms made with the old company were, perhaps, more liberal towards it than on simple principles of equity it would have been entitled to; but the question was whether it would not be more for the public interest to deal with the company, even on such terms, than to leave them in possession, because there were no means of ousting them without their free assent. The terms made with the new company were fair and equitable, and though they appeared to offer it the possibility of obtaining an interest of even 25 per cent. on its capital, still it must be remembered that the property came into its possession in a worthless condition, and that it was invited to give value to that property with its own funds, without bringing the public under any new liability as far as it was concerned. The project was in a very unfortunate position, and the House would, he thought, agree that the Government had acted wisely under the circumstances in giving encouragement for the accomplishment of a very useful public object. The line of telegraphic communication towards India had been lengthened by what had already taken place, and hopes were entertained of still greater and more beneficial results from this arrangement. The resolution he had to propose preliminary to bringing in a Bill to give effect to the arrangement would convert the annuity now payable to a joint-stock company into a regular annuity charged upon the Consolidated Fund. The right hon. gentleman concluded by moving a formal resolution on which to found a Bill accordingly.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY asked whether the original contract had really been so drawn that there was no help for the country except to pay an immense sum for a scheme having no results?

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he had no option, in honour, but either to concede such terms as the old company chose to demand or to leave matters precisely as they stood, with the property wholly useless, and yet an annuity of £32,000 payable to them.

Mr. WALPOLE asked whether the law officers of the Crown had been consulted and had given an opinion to the effect just stated by the right hon. gentleman.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the law officers of the Crown, about eighteen months ago, declared that, under the terms of the contract, the Government were not legally bound, and that being so the Government felt that as an executive they would not be authorised in paying to the company their annuity. They then had to look to the original intention of the contract, and they found on examination that there was no doubt the intention was that the payment should be unconditional—that was to say, it was not to be conditional on the continued success of the undertaking. They, therefore, last year brought a Bill before the House, that it might exercise a judgment on the matter. The House passed the Bill, empowering the Government to treat the contract as unconditional, and thereby the annuity became an absolute obligation.

Lord FERMOY hoped that as gutta-percha had failed as an insulating medium the Government would guard against its use by the new company.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the Government were determined not to interfere with such a question, but to leave the company free to choose between gutta-percha and india-rubber, or any other article.

Sir J. D. HAY said that the preparation of gutta-percha had been as yet very unsuccessful, and that the only perfect insulation was that procured by india-rubber. As her Majesty's Government had appointed a commission to consider the subject, he trusted that the Government would not deem the matter unworthy of their attention.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER had only meant that it was not the business of the Government to fish up the cable from the Red Sea.

Mr. CONINGHAM had understood the right hon. gentleman to say that it was inexpedient for the Government to charge itself with the decision of the relative merits of gutta-percha and india-rubber.

The resolutions were then agreed to.

DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The third and last of the biddings for bills of exchange on India, advertised on the 22nd of January, took place on the 1st of April, when the tenders for Rs. 40,00,000 (£400,000) were opened in the presence of two members of the Council of India, and of the Governor and Deputy-governor of the Bank of England. The official minimum declared was, for bills on Calcutta, 1s. 11½d. per rupee, and on Bombay and Madras 2s., being the same as on the two former occasions. The whole amount has been taken. All tenders above the minimum are accepted in full. The rates of allotment at the minimum will be, to tenders on Calcutta, about 40 per cent., on Bombay about 23 per cent., and on Madras in full. Although the amount of bills on India (£1,200,000) originally announced as about to be drawn and offered for tender in the London market has now been completed, it is understood that, owing to the satisfactory condition of the Indian Treasury, further draughts, to the extent of £300,000 per month, will continue to be made.

MR. LAING ON INDIAN FINANCE.—"The state of the cash balances, says Mr. Laing, affords an unerring test of our real position, as there have been for the past year no loans open, and no accumulation of arrears or liabilities. All that has to be allowed for is the return to England of the £1,000,000 which was sent here in bullion last spring under apprehension of the possible results of the famine; and of £2,000,000 more which will be due to England on the balance of accounts of the year. Of the total expenditure of the empire about £9,000,000, in round numbers, is paid in England for home charges, stores, interest on debt, guaranteed railway interest, &c., while we pay here for England about £7,000,000 in constructing railways and on other accounts; so that a balance of about £2,000,000 is due by India to England to square the accounts of the year and establish an equilibrium. Setting aside this £2,000,000 and the £1,000,000 remitted in bullion, as belonging to England, our Indian cash balance on the 1st of the present February was £13,400,000, having been £12,680,000 on the corresponding day of 1861, and £14,286,000 at the commencement of the current financial year on the 1st May, 1861. The inference is irresistible, that during this period our receipts have more than equalled our expenditure."

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who willfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of encyclopaedic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to man and horse."—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunder-struck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the name and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 2, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under review will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstanding, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c. &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Directors of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last, with her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are afoot which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £10,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend on the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Rancemooddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 39,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,
First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,
Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,
Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,
Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

|  | Rs.       | £.     |
|--|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                               | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies                | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|  | 3,82,500  | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                         | 3,50,000  | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                        | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                   | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, G.s, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                         | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                 | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                        | 13,800    | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                      | 65,500    | 6,550  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a confectioner's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Rancemooddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ult. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th of March is more than usually interesting to general readers—partly, perhaps, because owing to the break-down of the Sul-tan the bulk of the papers intended for Marseilles have been forwarded to Southampton. However, we are at least in a position to give the various resolutions unanimously carried at an influential meeting of the European residents in Calcutta, convened for the purpose of preparing a farewell address to Lord Canning. The address itself is in excellent taste, and duly appreciative of his Excellency's able and enlightened administration, especially during the last three years. By telegram from Egypt we learn that Lord Elgin took over the Government of India on the 13th March, and that his predecessor was to leave on the 19th on board the Feroze.

Of the little wars on the eastern frontier there is nothing to record, except that the Khassiahs have been greatly irritated by a somewhat arbitrary proceeding on the part of the Deputy Commissioner of Gowhaty, who had arrested and thrown into jail the independent Rajah of Nungklow, on account of some revenue disputes arising out of an estate held by the latter within the British territory of Kamroop. Assuming the case to be as here stated, it is evident that the conduct of the English official has been not only harsh and impolitic, but positively unjust and indefensible. On the other hand, conciliatory measures are first to be tried in Assam, but should they unfortunately fail to produce the desired effect, General Showers has received instructions to act with all possible promptitude and vigour.

The financial condition of India, as far as it can be judged from the cash balances in the Government Treasuries, appears to be most satisfactory. At the end of January these stood as follows, contrasted with the corresponding periods of the two preceding years:—

BENGAL.

PUBLIC MEETING TO ADDRESS LORD CANNING.

Calcutta has redeemed itself in a spirited manner from what threatened to be a great and irretrievable mistake on the part of the great majority of its European community. In the face of much discouragement, open and covert, from the few whose fixed opinions appear to be stronger than their temper, and too much for their judgment, about four hundred of the leading men of the non-official community, and members of all the services, met on the 7th of March, in compliance with the sheriff's summons convening a public meeting, to consider an address to Earl Canning on his departure from India. The names of the gentlemen who were nominated to form the deputation to present the address will show that every section of the community was well represented, and the meeting included a large number of others of all classes of the official world whose position precluded them from taking any active part in the proceedings upon the platform. In addition to the speakers and official gentlemen on the platform were the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, the Rajah of Kupperoottullah, and Rajah Dinkur Rao, and a few influential natives were also present in the hall. The perfect unanimity and evident good feeling which characterised the proceedings showed that the promoters of the movement were right in their judgment of the general feeling; and its manifestation was of a nature to be most gratifying to the Viceroy. The Sheriff of Calcutta having been moved to the chair, read the requisition convening the meeting, and Mr. Peterson moved the first resolution:—"That this meeting, on the departure of Earl Canning, desire to express their high sense of the public services rendered by his lordship in the Government of India."

Mr. D. Wilson seconded the resolution, which was carried by acclamation.

Mr. Walter Brett then moved that the following address be adopted:—

"TO H.E. THE RIGHT HON. EARL CANNING, G.C.B., VICEROY AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

"YOUR EXCELLENCY,—We, European and Armenian inhabitants of Calcutta, in public meeting assembled, desire to express to your lordship, on your retirement from the Government of India, our high appreciation of the great measures which have restored confidence in the stability of the empire, which have strengthened the bonds that attach the people to their Government, and which are calculated to secure the continued peace and prosperity of the State, as they have already restored its financial credit.

"We desire also to thank your Lordship for the liberal concessions made in regard to the tenure of land; and for other measures which have promoted the investment of capital in this country, and opened the way for the beneficial influences of European enterprise; and for the admission into the Councils and the Magistracy of men of experience, property, and influence, unconnected with Government, but deeply interested in the well-being of the country.

"In acknowledging these benefits, we can now only regret that you are about to leave India before these and other beneficial measures, which your Lordship has initiated, can be fully carried into operation.

"We hope to see your Lordship, on your return to England, holding a prominent position in the Imperial Councils; and we are confident that the interests of the Indian Empire will always find in you an able and liberal advocate; and, in that hope, we wish your Lordship a respectful farewell."

Mr. Walker seconded, and Mr. J. B. Roberts supported this motion, which was also carried unanimously.

Mr. R. Molloy then moved the third resolution:—"That the Sheriff be requested to sign the address on behalf of the meeting," which was seconded by Mr. Henry Cowie, and carried.

Mr. E. D. Kilburn next moved, "That the following gentlemen be deputed from this meeting to accompany the Sheriff to present the address to Earl Canning, viz:—Stewart Douglas, Esq., Henry Cowie, Esq., A. Walker, Esq., E. D. Kilburn, Esq., George Browne, Esq., H. Knowles, Esq., P. Keith, Esq., Wm. Moran, Esq., Jas. Hills, Esq., P. A. Cavorke, Esq., Seth A. Apcar, Esq., F. Lamouroux, Esq., P. Sagrandi, Esq., George Dickson, Esq., W. S. Fitzwilliam, Esq., Wm. Spink, Esq., C. Lazarus, Esq., J. Remfrey, Esq., D. Wilson, Esq., C. Gould, Esq., E. Drummond, Esq., c.s., R. Temple, Esq., c.s., H. Bell, Esq., c.s., H. L. Dampier, Esq., c.s., C. K. Dove, Esq., George Kellner, Esq., Walter Brett, Esq., A. T. T. Peterson, Esq., Joseph Graham, Esq., Thos. H. Cowie, Esq., T. B. Judge, Esq., Ven. Archdeacon Pratt, Rev. A. B. Spry, and Rev. J. Richards."

The motion was seconded by R. L. Eglinton, Esq., and carried unanimously.

On the motion of H. B. Harrington, Esq., c.s., seconded by the venerable Archdeacon Pratt, the thanks of the meeting were voted to the Sheriff, and the business concluded.

THE NEW CURRENCY.

Saturday, the 1st of March, was an important day in the history of India. Then for the first time those currency discussions and bills, which were begun by Mr. Wilson two years ago, were amended by Sir Charles Wood and finally passed into law under the care of Mr. Laing, bore fruit. It may seem a small thing that on that day the privilege of issuing notes so long enjoyed by the three presidency banks ceased, and that new notes bearing the imprimatur of the Government of India for the first time were issued as a legal tender. But in reality the issue of these notes was the beginning of a revolution in the currency, and in all commercial transactions and prices in India, which promises to work out even greater results than it has done in England. What Mr. Laing's scheme lacks in breadth, as compared with Mr. Wilson's, it possesses in prudence. Its progress may be slower, and the profit it yields to the State at the outset less, but, on the other hand, prices will not be so suddenly affected by the withdrawal of too large a portion of the metallic currency, nor will the ever suspicious natives, whose fears are fed by the shroths, be so suddenly alarmed. The interest arising on the minimum amount invested in Government securities in accordance with the provisions of the Currency Act, less the three-fourths per cent. payable to the banks, will be the immediate profit of the circulation, and a permanent rise in securities the result of such purchasers as Mr. Laing and the three banks entering the market. But, if there is any truth in Indian statistics and English analogies, if, indeed, silver to the extent of a hundred millions has been sent into circulation during the last quarter of a century, then we may expect that, in five years at most, the limit of four millions beyond which the paper currency must be represented by bullion will be far exceeded, and India will cease to be a very large extent to drain Europe of her silver.

On 1st March also the Bank of Bengal for the first time discharged the duties hitherto performed by the Treasury. The day was a very trying one for beginning a new experiment. Not only did the dividends of the Five per Cent. loan fall due, not only had extensive payments to be made to officials, but there were salt and commissariat tenders to be received. Considerably more than one million sterling of money passed through the hands of the bank officers, as receipts and payments. It seemed as though circumstances had combined to test the bank up to the verge of certain failure. But the bank proved equal to the strain, though its machinery was new, and its four additional branches only just established. There was some crowding on the first day, but who that has rushed from room to room and stair to stair in that labyrinth of intricate windings in the old Treasury building, over which the sub-treasurer so long presided as tutelary genius, was not grateful that the delay was so comparatively trifling, and that it was merely temporary? Even taking Saturday as a type of what may be expected, the public have reason to be grateful for the change. How much more thankful will they be, when in one building, with all the regularity and despatch of the Bank of England, the hitherto bewildered military officer or civil clerk will be able to draw his pay and place it to his account or remit it to England, without worrying delays.

By means of its five branches at Rangoon, Dacca, Patna, Benares, and Mirzapore, the Bank will soon make the new notes familiar in places where hitherto its own has been unknown, or negotiable only at a heavy discount. The profit on its own circulation, which it destroys as it comes in, will no doubt be large. The Bank has undertaken immense responsibilities, and the tax-paying public, as well as the State, will see that it is equal to them. The new notes cannot yet be in the hands of our readers out of Calcutta, and away from the immediate vicinity of the branch banks, so that a description of them may not be unacceptable. One before us for Rs. 20 has the following superscription in bold letters on white ground—

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Promise to pay the Bearer on demand the sum of TWENTY Rupees.

1861 July 12 Calcutta 12 July 1861.

20 RUPEES FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

J. HYDE.

On the right hand side is an effigy of the Queen's bust enclosed in a garland. Over the words "promise" and "demand" is the English number of the note repeated, and below these the value in Bengalee, Persian, Nagree, and Hindee. In the tissue of the note, as a water-mark its value is thrice entered in words and figures, the words "Government of India" occur, and below are the signatures of "Jas. Wilson" and "Canning." Forgery is thus defied as much as is possible. Capt. Hyde is the Master of the Mint. The intrinsic value of each note is, we believe, a penny farthing, or more. The notes have two faults—one artistic and one most seriously practical. The Queen is represented to the hundred and eighty millions of her native subjects as a youthful lady decked out exactly like the pictures on ivory of Sultanas sold by the Delhi artists. And the number of the note does not appear in Bengali, so that already it is received with distrust by the bazaars, who have no ready means of registering it so as to avoid fraud. This last mistake should be at once corrected by stamping the number in the vernacular. The notes were made in England, specimens having been prepared even before Mr. Wilson left for India.—Friend of India.

THE STAFF CORPS.

The most injudicious delay which prevents a final settlement as to the pay and qualifications of the Staff Corps of the three Presidencies is not less detrimental to the public service than the long suspense which attended the absorption of the Indian into the Royal army was injurious to private rights. In numbers, and in some respects in importance, the Staff Corps excels the civil service. From the able officer who presides in the Foreign-office, and him who was recently nominated Military Secretary, down through all the grades of civil office in the non-regulation provinces and military appointments throughout the empire, the Staff Corps extends its ranks. It is calculated to meet the objections on public grounds that have been raised against the extinction of the local army, by training a body of officers, the elite of the army, of great Indian experience grafted on more than mediocre abilities. Whether as a civil or a military body, the Staff Corps is of the utmost importance to the empire. We deprecate, therefore, the delay which prevents the publication of the rules of examination applicable to its several grades, and a decision as to the pay attached to its individual offices. Just six months ago we sketched the outlines of a scheme of consolidated staff salaries, submitted by the Controller of Military Finance to a committee of Calcutta Secretaries appointed to report on the subject. Only now is that committee about to send in their report to Government. We fear it must be referred to England for approval, so that nothing definite will be settled till near the close of the year.

The scheme differs somewhat from that of the Controller, of which we gave an outline last August. Though on the whole not so favourable to officers as that was, the new staff pay code will be accepted, we believe, as not unfair, and the very moderation of its recommendations will probably secure instant approval from both the Calcutta and the Westminster authorities. The Controller's scheme, it may be remembered, classified all military staff appointments, which are on the same footing, at the highest rate, as if held by a major general, and drew out a gradation scale for other ranks, nearly approximating to that contained in the Royal Warrant. The new plan, we believe, deals with each staff appointment separately, adding to the Staff Corps pay what is thought to be a far additional allowance. In answer to more than one complaint of the delay, and more than one excited inquiry as to the hopes of officers, we may say that commandants of native regiments will be better off under the scheme recommended by the committee than under the controller's, of which we gave an account.

The Gazette of yesterday (March 5) contains several of the long-delayed Staff appointments, and that of Saturday will probably complete the list, for after that day Lord Canning's power will be almost at an end. Major W. A. Thomson, Commandant of the Body Guard, succeeds Col. Colin Mackenzie as Governor-general's agent at Moorsheadabad, on a reduced salary, and is succeeded in the command by Captain Delane. We regret the revival of this office of agent, which adds to the so-called Nazim's position an appearance of uncalled for dignity, while it embroils us in intrigue, corruption, and insult. Colonel Mackenzie becomes Superintendent of Army Clothing. Colonel F. D. Atkinson succeeds Colonel Hannington as Controller of Military Finance. Few of the departures this season from India will so injuriously affect the public service as that of Colonel Hannington. The most accomplished military accountant who has ever filled the office he resigns, we trust he will be able in England to lend the weight of his advice and experience to the authorities who are now entangled in all the intricacy of the military funds. An admirable appointment is that of Colonel H. B. Lumsden, c.b., as Brigadier of the Hyderabad Contingent, his place in command of the guides being taken by Colonel A. T. Wilde, c.b. Mr. N. C. Wake, c.b., of Arrah celebrity, deserves the important office of Superintendent of Darjeeling. As a committee is about to "sit on" the commissariat, there will, we believe, be no change there at present. The central provinces are still destitute of a chief and a judicial commissioner.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR HUGH ROSE and party arrived at Mooltan safe and well on the morning of the 24th of February, having ridden more than seven hundred miles in seventeen days, the Commander-in-Chief having most thoroughly inspected all the stations and outposts on the route. He was, at the time of our correspondent writing, about to commence at once upon Mooltan, inspecting the European and native regiments, regimental institutions, establishments, &c., which it was calculated would occupy two days; and intended to start again on the 26th for Lahore, on to Ferozepore on the 28th, catching up the head-quarters camp a few marches from Umballah, which station his Excellency expected to reach on the 3rd. It was estimated that his work at Umballah would occupy eight, or possibly ten days; after which Simlah, and comparative repose until after the rains, when his Excellency will descend from the hills again.

LAHORE LIGHT HORSE.—The destination of the Lahore Light Horse, now and for some time past encamped on the esplanade of the fort for brigade movements, is altered, and the regiment goes to Barrackpore, where a military committee has been ordered to select a site for the horses, and the men will go into barracks.

THE THAKOORS.—We (Englishman) have on more than one occasion lately alluded to the Thakoors as men naturally turbulent in disposition, and at all times opposed to order. These men, inhabiting as they do a wild and mountainous country, the descendants of robber chiefs who in days of yore held in subjection the entire population of the plains within the vicinity of their strongholds, have ever been the foremost in every insurrectionary movement which has taken place, either under the ancient Mahomedan or present British rule. Central India has ever been, as it is to day, the favourite scene of their exploits; for, notwithstanding the numerous wrongs received at their hands by the peaceable cultivators of the soil, they find there the means of eluding the officers of justice they might seek for in vain in other localities. The impenetrable jungle, the lofty and well nigh inaccessible mountains, the main features of this portion of the British Empire in the East, afford to the Thakoor and his adherents the shelter they require. And the ancient name borne by one and all of them excites the sympathy of the people for the descendant of some ancient house, to whom in years gone by their fathers and their fathers' fathers have owed allegiance. Those of the Thakoors who opposed themselves to the British in the troublous days of 1857-58, when they found the tide of battle set strongly against them, made their way, with such followers as still clung to them in their fallen fortunes, deep into the hills and jungles of Mehwar, Bundelcund and the Vindyan range. Thither followed them more than one man of note who had figured conspicuously in the ranks of the rebels. They were kept constantly on the move, for the British troops followed them perseveringly in every direction, even penetrating into those fastnesses they had learned to look upon as inaccessible to regular troops. But, notwithstanding all the efforts of the British commanders, but trifling success attended their endeavours to capture the men they were most earnest in seeking. Favoured by the people who yet revered the well-known names of their ancient rulers, whatever might be their followers, their safety was invariably secured. Two of the Thakoors, conspicuous for their acts of rebellion, are yet at large, and though one is notorious for the successes which attend him and the band of robbers he heads, and for the mischief he does, and the loss he inflicts upon those on whom he preys, even the sufferers from his depredations will not give information which would lead to his apprehension; and all the efforts of the local police, aided by the military, have as yet failed either in securing his person or dispersing his band. In Meywar, the son of a Thakoor, whose relations with the British Government are friendly, has gathered together a band of some fifty Bheels, who are ever in a chronic state of disaffection, and has made for the hills, to ally himself with Feroze Shah and the small party of rebel and disbanded sepoys who yet keep together under his banner. The name assumed by Feroze Shah is Futteh Jung, and aided by the young Thakoor and his fifty Bheels, he is said to be meditating joining the party of that tribe who are now in open hostility to the British Government, and of trying his fortunes once more in the field in opposition to British troops. If he carries out this intention, which it is to be hoped he may, he will probably give his enemies the opportunity they have long looked anxiously for—to number him with those rebels who now sleep their last sleep.

SUKUT.—The Khasia affair is likely to put on another phase. Hitherto the Khasias proper have been very quiet; the trouble has been with the Khasias at Jaintia. The Rajah of Nungklone in the Khasia hills is also the choultry of a small fiscal division of pergunnah in Kamroop, known as Bordwar. In his own hills he is an independent chief, and one of the most powerful of the Khasia rajahs. The Deputy Commissioner at Gowhaty found some fault with him in regard to revenue matters, and sent up at once to Nungklone, got the rajah seized, brought to Gowhaty, and shut up in jail. The Khasias are, as a natural consequence, dreadfully exasperated; they have closed up the road to Cherra, and threaten all sorts of vengeance. There are no troops to spare from Gowhaty; all that could be sent have been sent towards Jaintia under the command of the adjutant and three doing duty officers; and the Bhooteas threaten an invasion, so that the remainder of the corps with the commandant, Major Campbell, must stay for the defence of the capital. By the way, there is an advantage in being below the ordinary height of mortals. Major Rowlett, Deputy commissioner at Cherra, accompanied Colonel Richardson out into Jaintia, and they had a skirmish with the Khasias, when one of the enemy's bullets passed clean through Major Rowlett's hat, about a couple of inches above his head. If any man of ordinary stature had been in his place the ball would certainly have passed, if not through his body, at least through his skull.—Englishman's Correspondent.

CAPTAIN T. W. MERCER has been desired by the Government of the Punjab to proceed at once to Jummo, for the purpose of accompanying his Highness Maharajah Rumber Singh to Chumba, whither, as stated by us some short time since, he was about to proceed on a visit of ceremony. Captain Mercer will accompany the Maharajah both to and from Chumba, and has been authorised by Government to both make and accept the complimentary presents usually made on the occurrence of so auspicious an event in the family of a native potentate, as the marriage of one near in blood, and to the throne. To give importance to Captain Mercer's mission, a small guard of British troops has been detailed to accompany him, and attend upon his steps during his deputation to the Maharajah.

MR. DOWLEANS, the secretary to the Calcutta Committee of the Great Exhibition to be held in Hyde-park in May next, has been appointed special agent to the Government of India to the same, and will proceed to England immediately to carry out the objects of the agency. During the absence of Mr. Dowleams on his mission to England Dr. Palmer will officiate as a member of the Municipal Commission.

LIEUT. COL. L. C. BOURCHIER.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has conferred upon Lieut.-col. L. C. Bouchier, junior lieut.-col. of H.M.'s 89th regt., the command of H.M.'s 98th regt., in succession to Col. D. Rainier, employed on the Brigade Staff, and "seconded." We are glad to see this economical diminution of the number of superfluous lieutenant-colonels employed in India.

DARJEELING MOUNTAIN TRAIN.—The Government has ordered the preparation and equipment of a mountain train battery of artillery for service at Darjeeling and the adjacent territories, and twenty five gunners from the artillery companies at the Presidency, and from the local company of artillery, have been told off to proceed at once to Darjeeling and complete the mountain battery for service. The artillery will be a most useful and serviceable addition to the strength of our military force at Darjeeling, and we are glad to hear that it is to be permanently kept up. The possession of artillery is of paramount importance in the estimation and in the fears of natives; and the formation of a mountain train battery, in this instance, may, at a comparatively small outlay, save us hereafter much of the expense and annoyance with which our little border wars are always attended.

CASHMERE.—H. E. the Viceroy and Governor-general has perused with interest the report of General Van Cortland on Cashmere for the year 1861, and has signified to the General his satisfaction with the same. His Lordship has, moreover, desired that an expression of his gratification may be conveyed to the rulers of Cashmere, for the civility and attention which is now invariably shown to European visitors and travellers in Cashmere; marks of good will and feeling which he is fully aware can be ascribed solely to the example set to their subjects by the rulers themselves, and which must at all times prove a source of pleasure and gratification to the British Government, while it more firmly cements the bonds of union and good feeling now so happily established between the two nations.

DELHI, Feb. 26.—The prisoner Moghul Beg, convicted of the murder of Mr. Simon Fraser and other Christians, in the place on the 11th May, 1857, is to be hanged in front of the Lahore gate of the palace, close to the scene of the murders, on the 14th March, the Judicial Commissioner having confirmed the sentence passed upon him. The summing up of Mr. Melvill is brief, but very able. There is some hitch about the site recently selected for the Delhi Memorial Monument on the ridge near the Fagan battery. It now appears that the ground selected belongs to a native, one Salig Ram, treasurer to the Delhi Court. I fancy this objection will involve the formation of another committee, when I have reason to believe the flag staff tower, in itself a fitting memorial, the 11th May, 1857, will be the site selected. Perhaps after this is done some other Government well-wisher will turn up and claim the ground as his. The worst part of this business is that the work had already commenced, and now there will be the usual amount of correspondence and consequent delay. The brigade was out yesterday morning under Colonel Chamberlain, of the 1st Bengal Cavalry (Skinner's horse). I am told that it was beautifully handled and a sight worth seeing. A detachment of H.M.'s 19th regiment marched through a day or two ago en route to join the head quarters.

SAUGOR AND NERBUDDA TERRITORIES.—Of late a new interest has been given to these portions of the Indian Empire by the report of Captain Pearson on the Mundla district and the highlands of Central India generally, and from its forming a very considerable portion of the new province of Central India. Some true and trustworthy picture of these territories has long been wanted. There has been a vague and undefined idea in men's minds that in Central India is to be found what the European most requires to render his settlement in India attractive, viz., a generous soil and genial climate. Statistics have been, and still are, in a very great measure wanting, but the paper before us helps to make up some portion of the deficiency. In a previous number of the Calcutta Review (72) was an exceedingly interesting article, treating of the highlands of Central India, which assisted in some measure to supply a modicum of the information required; the last number of that periodical has the same object in view. In one respect it provides statistics of value, and that with reference to temperature. The result of thermometric observations taken four times a-day by Captain Pearson indicate the average temperature of the Saugor and Nerbudda districts:—1800. November, 62.5 deg.; December, 58.8 ditto; 1861, January, 55.0 ditto; February, 62.3 ditto; March, 73.8 ditto; April, 86.2 ditto. And the temperature of the ground at six and a-half feet below the surface in Agra, Jubbulpore, and Nagpore, is thus represented by Mr. Schlagintweit's figures:—1856. Agra, from February to March, 74 deg.; Jubbulpore, in December, 72 ditto; Nagpore, in December, 84 ditto. In Nagpore, during December and January, the temperature from sunset to sunrise is exceedingly low, and hoar frost frequently covers the ground. A difference in the temperature six and a-half feet below the surface of 12° would indicate an amount of latent heat, ever existent in the earth, which must account, it is presumed, for the higher temperature during the day of Nagpore over Jubbulpore, where frost is seldom experienced. Except that from the fact of frost lying on the ground at all, we are inclined to believe there must be some mistake in the figures given. "These territories are equally attractive from their rich and varied scenery. Extensive ranges of hills stand out in high relief, sinking by gentle gradients into the plains; mountain streams, fringed with trees of the greenest foliage, add to the beauty of the scene." The soil is varied in character, and, in spite of very much rugged and uncultivated land, is richer and more productive than that of any other part of India. This alone adds much to the intrinsic value of these districts; but coupled as it is with a pleasant, agreeable, and healthy climate, it renders them of great importance as localities in which the European may settle with advantage to himself and to the State. Apart from the various qualities and description of soil with which these districts are blest, they contain within them much mineral wealth. "Coal is found at Mowpaul, at Nursingpore, in the Bactool district; on the banks of the Sakur and Towah Nuddes, and at Semata Ghat. Nodular iron ore is found among the carboniferous rocks of the Nerbudda Valley. Already has the native iron been applied to works of public utility; the iron suspension bridge in the Sagur district is made of native iron." In Mundla, and towards Sahagpore, extensive tracts are covered with high green grass. The rotation of crops is known, and they are so abundant, that grain is obtainable at half the price at which it is procurable in the North-West Provinces and Behar. Moreover, the natural facilities for artificial irrigation by means of canals, revertments, and water-works, offered by the undulating or hilly surface of the entire of these districts, through which flow rivers, the beds of which are never devoid of running water, are of no inconsiderable importance, and especially so to the European settler.—Englishman.

MR. W. S. WELLS, the officiating magistrate of Bancoorah, has, we are informed, acquired for himself the good will of the people of his district by the promptness with which he redresses grievances, the courtesy of his manner, and the facilities offered by all classes of the people to approach him. What appears to have given most satisfaction is his having called the Rajah of Pachete to account for the illegal confinement of a man, who, by means of his friends, contrived to bring the subject to the magistrate's ear. Mr. Wells was at the time on circuit in the district, and on the complaint being laid before him he at once proceeded to the spot and instituted an inquiry, causing the liberation of the man the Rajah had placed in duress. The magistrate returned to Bancoorah, and summoned the Rajah to appear there to answer the charge brought against him. It would appear that the prompt action of the magistrate has taken the Rajah by surprise, and has in some measure lessened his self-confidence; for report has it that more than one gentleman of the legal profession has been retained to conduct the defence in the pending trial. It may do these native zemindar gentry some good to find that they cannot take the law into their own hands with impunity.

MR. H. C. WAKE has been gazetted to succeed Dr. Campbell as Superintendent of Darjeeling. It was to the determined courage and unwearied watchfulness of this gentleman that the British residents of Arrah were enabled to hold the house in which they located themselves against the mutineers in 1857. For his prowess on this occasion Mr. Wake was created a Companion of the Bath, and until his present appointment he has filled the office of Collector and Magistrate of Dinapore. From the energy of character displayed in the defence of the house at Arrah by Mr. Wake we may anticipate the speedy subjection to reason of the refractory Bhootanese. It is not likely that he who defied an army of disciplined troops, with a handful of his fellow-countrymen to back him, will permit a horde of semi-savages long to disturb the peace of the sanitarium over which he holds command. The Soobah of Dalimcote will have to alter his tone, and in lieu of demanding payment for a forfeited mehal, forfeited through the acts of aggression on the part of his master the Deb Rajah, he will have to sue for forgiveness for the threatening attitude his people have assumed at Domohone. The orders issued by him to store supplies and re-collect the forces at Domohone, which had been scattered by the appearance of small-pox among them, will have to be rescinded, and the Soobah of Dalimcote and the Deb Rajah may consider themselves fortunate if they are not called upon and made to make good the expense they have caused the Government to incur by the threatening attitude they have for some time past persistently assumed. The threat to take by force the sum demanded from the late superintendent, as well as that to reoccupy the Fallacottah Mehal, should the rent of it not be paid, are not likely to be allowed to pass unrebuked, if unpunished, by Mr. Wake.

PAPER CURRENCY.—It is rumoured that in consequence of the new notes of the Paper Currency not being numbered in Bengallee and other characters, the native Mahajuns, particularly in the Mofussil, where the English language is little understood, intend to memorialise the local Government on the subject, on the ground of great difficulties having been recently experienced by them in making proper entries of such notes in their account books.

THE KIRWEE PLUNDER.—The largest portion of the prize jewels, gold and silver articles, &c., captured by the force under Major General Sir George C. Whitlock, K.C.B., has been transferred, under military escort, to Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s premises for sale, and the whole of this magnificent property will be ready for public inspection at their show rooms on and after Wednesday, the 12th of March. The first day's sale will take place on the 2nd June.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the 7th March, in Fort William, the son of Mr. Plowden, Commissioner of Burdwan, expired from the effects of a fall from his horse. The unfortunate and much regretted boy was buried on the following evening. It seems that his horse some evenings since ran away with him, and ran violently against Mr. Steinbelt, C.S., when both riders were thrown, but whilst the latter was hardly shaken, Mr. Plowden remained senseless almost up to the time of his death.

CHOTA NAGPORE, Feb. 28.—I have to acquaint you that the business which caused the assembly of the Sumbulpore field force having been brought to a peaceful conclusion, consequently the force was broken up. The 9th military police battalion and detachment Behar irregular cavalry commenced its march towards Chota Nagpore on the 10th instant, and arrived at its destination on the 25th instant, making double marches of it at some stages. The 8th battalion, at the request of the commander, stands fast at Sumbulpore until it receives orders to return to its legitimate duties at Cuttack. The Sebundee levy reverts to its original duties at Sumbulpore. Before breaking up the force the commanding officer tendered his thanks to the respective commanding officers for the excellent discipline that existed throughout the force, and it was equally gratifying to know that not a single crime or offence of any kind was brought to the notice of the commanding officer since their arrival at Sumbulpore. This reflects great credit on all, and we are sure that had there been occasion for the force to take the field against the rebels, that it would have distinguished itself by its gallantry as it has done by its exemplary conduct and discipline. The whole of the police force will be undergoing a change very shortly; we trust the European officers attached to the 9th battalion will not be affected in any way by it; the detachments under their respective commands are in a very inhospitable outstation, and exposed to a trying climate.—Hurkaru.

BENGAL.—We understand the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal will at last carry out the recommendations of the committee appointed to report on the introduction of the new constabulary into Madras, the report on which has been upwards of two months before him. Mr. Carnac is spoken of as Inspector-general, and his appointment would be as unexceptionable as that of any other who could be named. We are not sure if the good people of Howrah will appreciate the dignity about to be conferred on them, by raising their now petty subdivision of the zillah of Hooghly to the position of a separate zillah. As the town of Howrah is fast treading on the heels of Calcutta, and will maintain its importance even when the bridge at Ishapore carries all the passenger traffic of the Gangetic valley into the capital, we should have preferred to have seen it assimilated to Calcutta in the administration of justice. It is as much an English town as the metropolis, and is as essentially a part of Calcutta as Southwark is of London. Now that its police is subject to the jurisdiction of Calcutta the union should be made complete. Howrah will be always the great place of export for the produce conveyed by rail down the Gangetic valley.

mentation, and it may be beneficial as extending to stamps on receipts. If the use of them, however, be required for hoodies it will be detrimental to the traffic of the bunnys in the cantonments, in as much as they must compete with the bunnys in the city, who will use no stamps. I am happy to find that the residency is constantly increasing in population, containing several opulent banking establishments. I hear the same thing of the cantonments of Secunderabad. This should be an incontrovertible test to the people of this country of our better system of government and of the justice of our rulers. But I question whether the many will ever be disposed, in spite of the test, whatever that may be, to admit it. The Minister, all believe, is copying what he can of our rules and systems, but he has many a head of the monster to crush before he can go the whole course.—Englishman.

MARINE SANITARIUM.—Government has sanctioned the proposal of Dr. Macpherson, of Madras, and Captain Fraser, engineer of the Alguada Lighthouse, to make Callagouk or Curlew Island a marine sanitarium and watering-place. Convicts will undertake the preliminary works, a party of two hundred being set aside for this purpose. They will be employed in opening up the island, clearing building sites, facilitating the natural drainage of the island, and constructing the roads we recently described.

THE MADRAS HUNT.—At a meeting which took place after the hunt-dinner on Saturday, March 8, it was proposed by Colonel Denison, and seconded by Captain Hutchison, that the following gentlemen be requested to act as a committee, for the purpose of obtaining a pack of hounds from England for the next cold weather:—Mr. Vans Agnew, Colonel Fenwick, Mr. Brecks, Major Grant, and Mr. Dalzell. Three of these gentlemen who were present having consented to act, it was proposed by Mr. Brecks, and seconded by Mr. H. Hicks, that a hunt-dinner take place on the 1st Saturday in April, when the committee will report progress. The meeting then resolved on a motion proposed by Mr. Vans Agnew, and seconded by Mr. Morris, that harriers be obtained, and not foxhounds. A subscription list was circulated, and Rs. 1,500 at once subscribed by those present, and it was intimated that the governor, the commander-in-chief, and the chief justice would give the proposal their most cordial support.

NAWAB OF THE CARNATIC.—We see from the Bombay Saturday Review that the claimant to the Nawabship of the Carnatic, emboldened like so many of his compeers by the Mysore job, has issued "the Carnatic Catechism," in which, after the fashion of ecclesiastical productions of the same kind, members of Parliament, "heads of all law institutions," "social and political clubs," "colleges and universities," and native princes, are fully informed as to the claims of Azeem Jah. The case seems to be this, as put by the claimant. Prince Wallah Jah, in 1750, is said to have been made hereditary Nawab of the Carnatic. The nephew of his eldest son "succeeded, and he had two sons, Azum Jah the elder, who became Nawab in 1819, and Azeem Jah the younger, who is the present claimant. Azeem Jah died in 1825, and left a minor son, who was placed under the regency of his uncle, Azeem Jah, and who finally died without issue in October, 1855." Lord Dalhousie then declared the line extinct, with the concurrence of the Court of Directors and Madras Government, the succession, according to native law, having failed. Azeem Jah was offered a lakh of rupees annually, which he declined. We cannot go into the case here, but Azeem Jah's claim seems to us almost baseless as Golam Mahomed's. Yet he refuses his pension, and spends his money on lawyers, declaring that "the present tract will be immediately followed by others, for the purpose of more fully explaining and advocating the same cause."

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The Madras Examiner protests against coolie emigration from the Southern Presidency, saying with truth "the day is fast approaching when we shall regret most bitterly the introduction of the practice, and find ourselves, perhaps, unable to discontinue it." Of the Pondicherry slave-trade the writer says:—"A company for carrying on the traffic in humankind, has been established at Pondicherry, with an agent, Mr. Cammiade, we believe, at Madras. If the poor creatures were shipped from here, there would at all events be less risk of their being maltreated or forced than if they were put on board at Pondicherry. We do not by this mean to say that there is no humanity among the Pondicherrians, comparable to that which is met with in Madras. But it is well known that coolies have been ill-used in French territory, in a manner to which we think a parallel could not be found in ours."

THE JAIL AT OOTACAMUND is finished. The Star says:—"There are in all thirty-six cells, eighteen on the ground, and eighteen on the upper floor. The central halls into which these cells open are perfect repeaters of sound; we were astonished with the intensity given both to the voice and the footstep. Each cell has a turn-up bed, to be put out of the way during the day, a table fixed to the wall, a stool, a basin, and a slender piece of wood for opening the ventilator. We are not quite sure of the advisability of this appendage, for there is no saying what a 'Jack Sheppard' will do with it. In addition to this 'garniture' there is to be a bell fixed in the niche of every door-way, which, when pulled, will throw out a label containing the number of the cell which has made the call. This apparatus is not yet finished, but it will be put into operation immediately. All the cells have an appliance for furnishing them with warm air, which will be heated to a regulated temperature. Then come the patent cooking stoves, water-closets, courts for the exercise of the prisoners, spring gates, and an insalable outer wall. Lastly, we must allude to the apartments for the governor of the prison, the office-room, and the entrance chamber."

MUTINY MEMORIAL.—The committee appointed to erect a hall in Madras as a memorial of deliverance from the mutiny, have stopped the building from want of funds, and have resolved, with their diminished balance, to buy the premises known as "Pharaoh's Shop" for the purpose. There the various religious societies will be accommodated and meetings held.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BRIbery IN BOMBAY.—A serious case of attempting to bribe an electric telegraph signaller has come before the Bombay Police Court, Henry Fisk, a signaller, was waited on by two natives who declared they were sent by Hemabhoj Premabhoj, a rich man. They offered Fisk Rs. 1,000 if he gave their master a copy of the telegrams announcing the arrival of the China mail at Galle, and the rates of the opium sale in Calcutta an hour before anybody else could see them. Their master would make ten lakhs by the priority of information, and five of these would be divided among the two bribers and the bribed clerk. Fisk told them to call again, but meanwhile informed his superiors, and the police were hidden in his room during the next interview. Fisk pretended to be afraid, but was promised that they would engage the best lawyers in Bombay for him if he were discovered. One of the telegrams came, and the prisoners called again to ask why it had not been supplied. Fisk says, "I pretended to be ignorant of the arrival of the telegram. He asked me to give him a receipt for forty rupees as money borrowed from him, and then he said that he would give me the money. He said that I was to give him the receipt to avoid suspicion. I evaded giving him a receipt. I repeatedly asked him if Hemabhoj Premabhoj had sent him for a receipt. Both prisoners assured me that Hemabhoj Premabhoj had desired them to obtain a receipt from me." On this the constables apprehended the scoundrels.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, March 1.—The London Mail of December 26th, due here on the 9th ultimo, arrived on the 15th, a few minutes before the outgoing Mail left harbour.

The London Mail of January 10th arrived here on the 27th ultimo, bringing on the welcome news of America having complied with our demands in the affair of the Trent.

The past fortnight is somewhat barren in news of interest both as regards China and Japan. It is not likely that any movement hostile to the peace and security of foreigners will be made in the latter country, while an embassy—probably the most important both as regards its numbers and the rank of the officers composing it, that ever left the shores of Japan—is engaged in visiting the principal cities on the continent of Europe. Most likely the anti-foreign factions, which have caused us so much annoyance in Japan, have, for the present, abandoned their machinations; and it is only to be hoped that the intelligence which the ambassadors send home from time to time during the progress of their interesting tour may tend to dissipate much of the unfriendly feeling which yet exists towards foreigners among the most influential classes in Japan. At the same time much will depend upon the stamp of man who is appointed to succeed Mr. Alcock as Minister. It has been said, and with perfect truth, that Ministers for such countries as this are like poets—born not made. There are certain physical qualities of spirit and temper, which are more frequently in requisition in such situations than energy and intellect; and as a recent mail brought us information to the effect that Mr. Laurence Oliphant had not given an answer to the offer of the appointment we now refer to, it is only to be desired that he will be able to weigh and appreciate the peculiar duties of this office, and to decline it if it does not suit his natural genius. One thing the English Government may rely upon—and we have reason to believe they are aware of it—that something more is wanted in a Plenipotentiary than a mere knowledge, however complete and extensive, of diplomatic or consular business; much, if not all, of that kind of duty may be done by subordinates, but in the Minister himself there must be personal qualities which will not only enable him to perceive the current requirements of his position, but to meet them happily, whether the doing so demands shrewdness or courage.

From Pekin there is no political intelligence; everything appears to be going on smoothly at the capital, and the Prince of Kung is the man of the day. By a letter from Pekin, it will be seen that new honours have been paid to Prince Kung, until it does not seem possible to lift him any higher. It is very satisfactory to see the Chinese Government for the first time in the hands of a ruler who is friendly to foreigners; but it is much to be regretted that, notwithstanding the lapse of many months since the new Government was settled, no steps have been taken to prosecute the civil war with more rigour, and so restore prosperity to many a distracted and ruined province. It is true that nothing has been heard of the Northern rebellion for some time, but the likelihood is that it eats its way still in quarters beyond our means of communication; one thing is certain, that if any victory had been gained over the formidable band that were last heard of at Cheefoo, it would have been duly reported at Pekin, instead of which, the Imperial army has scarcely been heard of since the capture of Nanking. The only exception to this has been in the case of a force of Imperialists under Colonel Ward, an American, who have lately been active in driving away a large body of rebels from a village in the neighbourhood of Woosung, where the latter had barricaded themselves.—Overland China Mail.

LIFE IN CHINA.—A letter from Pekin in the Overland Friend of China, dated Pekin, February 4, says, "We began fires here on the 5th of November last, the popular Guy Fawkes-day in England, and during the quarter of a year that has since transpired the weather has been growing colder and colder. It is not improbable but the cold has already reached its greatest excess, and within a few weeks we look for the approach of mild spring season. This winter term has been very fine indeed; the sky, with the exception of one or two days, has been clear, cloudless, and bright; the temperature vigorous and bracing, the wind, when it blows, is very sharp and cutting; snow has fallen in small quantities only twice, and both times during the night, and not in the daytime. Frost, of course, has been severe, and formations thereof are now exceeding thick. The lowest point to which a registering thermometer here has fallen was on the 24th of January, when it stood, at 7 A.M., at 0°6. The sports of men and boys upon the ice show their enjoyment of the season; and their exercises in sliding, skating, and sledging bring forcibly to our minds the glee with which, 'once on a time,' all these frolics were entered into at home. When the winter set in the Mongols began to arrive in regular caravans, which they do every year at the same time from their northern locations—with dromedaries and mules laden with the slain yellow sheep, the common sheep, also hard, butter, tallow, and cheese, poultry, pheasants, rabbits, and other game, all perfectly frozen, and a variety of furs, felt rugs, and skins. The number of the arrivals this year has far exceeded the number last year, owing, probably, to the panic no longer existing about foreign soldiers on the spot. And now that the Mongol visitors are returning to their own homes the Korean tribute-bearers are arriving. Within the last few weeks both Mongols and Koreans have excited the curiosity of the Chinese as much as the foreigners from Europe—British, French, and Russians—have moved their inquisitiveness. The Mongols are, doubtless, a dirty people, and very coarse in their examination of the strange English, who produced such marvellous revolutions in the capital of China last year. Still there is a deference paid to said foreigner on the part of the Mongol which one does not find in the impertinent Korean. The new year has opened under the style of 'First year of his Imperial Majesty Tungche.' Firing of crackers, and the free use of other fireworks, so popular among the Chinese on such an event, have this year been stopped, on the plea that the empire is in mourning for the deceased father of the reigning sovereign. Notwithstanding, the people have exchanged mutual visits as enthusiastically as before; and the Fair of Pekin has opened now, and will continue open for half a month longer, in the south-western corner of the Chinese city—the great resort at the new year for boys, girls, papas, and maumas in search of toys of every conceivable form. The local authorities seem at this juncture to be devoting all their strength and time upon a ponderous stone, intended for the tomb of his late Majesty—about sixty tons in weight, now in its progress from the original quarry to the Imperial mausoleum. The are five hundred mules and quadrupeds employed in dragging it forwards. They have just passed the eastern gate of the Imperial city. Meantime their Majesties the Empress Dowager Mother of the State and the Empress Dowager Mother of his Majesty Tungche, have united to confer the special privilege on Prince Kung, as the able Prime Minister of the Empire, of entering within the gates of the forbidden city in his sedan and four."

THE STRAITS.

SINGAPORE.—Of the importance of Singapore there can be no question: its geographical position, its many natural advantages, situated as it is in the midst of the richest countries of the earth, with its spacious harbour, attracting to it the produce and wealth of the lands which surround it on all sides, every day makes more and more important the advantage which Singapore must offer to the sovereign which owns it. The great changes which are rapidly taking place in China, in Japan, in Cochin China, in Borneo, and all the islands of the Eastern Archipelago, involving as they do the presence of representatives of more than one powerful European nation in the Eastern Seas, make the possession of Singapore a matter of the first importance. It is naturally the port of call between India, Ceylon, Aden, and China, as well as of Cochin China, Java, Manila, and the numerous islands of the China Sea. It can scarcely fail to be a necessary coaling station. And as the numerous powerful steamers of the various steam navigation companies which are now rapidly rising into existence are drawn towards it for coaling and other purposes, the rich, valuable produce of the Spice and other islands of the Indian Archipelago will find its way into the harbour of Singapore as the most promising mart within its reach. Singapore was purchased by the English from the Sultan of Johore in 1819 for 60,000 dollars cash, and a life pension of 24,000 dollars per annum. The name, Singapore, was adopted by Sir Stamford Raffles from the Dutch, they having so named it as the nearest pronounceable approach to its very unpronounceable native name. If England ever allows herself to be dispossessed of this island she will deserve to lose that vantage ground which it gives her over all nations trading to China and the numerous localities to the eastward.—Englishman.

VOLCANIC ERUPTION.—The following additional particulars regarding the volcanic eruption on the island of Makian, written from Ternate, are taken from the Java Courant of the 1st March:—"Two days previous to the eruption the inhabitants of Makian noticed that the mountain was apparently in motion, while they heard a frightful subterranean noise, which filled every one with fear and anxiety, and caused many to flee to the neighbouring islands. Thereafter the mountain burst, as it were, in three, and threw out great masses of lava, ashes, and sand, in all directions, the result of which was that fifteen villages were wholly or partly buried. According to the accounts received up to the present time, 320 persons were killed and 47 wounded by this catastrophe, while the greater part of the population of Makian, which was at least 6,000 persons, has taken refuge on the neighbouring islands. By the care of the Sultan of Ternate, some hundreds of destitute persons have been brought to Ternate from Motir, while his highness has sent all the vessels he could dispose of to afford assistance to the unfortunate fugitives. The fate of many is still unknown, but it is almost certain that a great many persons lost their lives in the sea, after their rapid flight from the doomed island. The beautiful island of Makian, which might almost be styled the storehouse of Ternate, where tobacco grew so well, and from whence Indian corn, fowls, and kanari oil were exported in great abundance for the supply of the neighbouring islands, has been wholly laid waste. Thick clouds of smoke still continuously flow from the crater, and the lava overflows the island so that it is still impossible to approach it. On Tidore and Almahira much damage was done by the showers of ashes and sand which fell there. Seventy-three dwellings were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable, while the young crops were buried under these showers. The island of Bachian was not much damaged by the sand and ashes which fell there, and the fugitives from Makian, who had reached to the number of 1,100, were being well cared for by the native authorities."

Certificates of no Demands.

Financial Dept.—The following letter from the Sec. to the Govt. of India in the financial dept. to the address of the military finance commission, No. 1,196, dated Feb. 10, 1862, is published for the information and guidance of the heads of depts:—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 5,342a, dated the 9th inst., with enclosures, from which it appears that Col. McCally, comy. gen., Madras, having applied to the military accountant there for a "Certificate of no Demands" to accompany an application from him for leave to retire from the service, without furnishing the necessary documents which would have enabled the controller of military finance to ascertain that the funds taken up by Col. McCally in his capacity of comy. gen. had been applied by him in accordance with the sanctioned estimates, the controller suggested that Col. McCally should be required to give a reasonable amount of security to meet any objectionable charges which might arise after his departure, and for which the Govt. might consider him justly responsible, and that following this recommendation, the Madras Govt. directed the controller to require Col. McCally to furnish reasonable personal security to guard them against possible loss.

2. The principle laid down in this case should, you recommend, be extended to all cases of officers drawing funds or authorising expenditure.

3. In reply, I am desired to observe that there can be no question regarding the correctness of the principle of holding heads of departments personally responsible for the issue of funds on the authority beyond the limits of the Budget sanction, and that any measure that would enforce this responsibility is in itself desirable. Notwithstanding that the direct orders of Government prohibit the issue of funds in excess of the grant for any particular department of the public service, it is possible that such excess may be authorised by the head of a department under circumstances that would not justify the issue; and in such a case, his Excellency in Council is clearly of opinion that some security should be demanded from the retiring officer; but his Excellency is also of opinion that, as pecuniary responsibility already attaches to the Executive officer at whose disposal the funds are placed, and who deposits substantial security for the correct appropriation of such funds, a declaration by the retiring officer that he has not authorised the issue of funds to executive officers beyond the limits of the sanctioned grant for his department, or in cases where such limits have been exceeded, a personal guarantee to meet any claims of Government arising out of such excessive issue, will sufficiently establish the principle of personal responsibility, and secure the observance, under ordinary circumstances, of Budget limits.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN BENGAL.

IT is impossible to refrain for any length of time from reverting to the Cotton Question. It is one which embraces interests of such immense magnitude, that no journalist would be justified in giving it the cold shoulder. And just now reticence would be unpardonable in a paper devoted to Indian affairs, seeing that a very important and exhaustive work on the Cotton Trade of Bengal has quite recently been compiled by Mr. Joseph Medicott, under the direct instructions of the Governor-general in Council. In the present article we propose to confine ourselves to a brief analysis of Mr. Medicott's generalisations as expressed in the Introduction, reserving for a future opportunity a more detailed notice of the very interesting information he has so diligently compiled.

Mr. Medicott's conclusions harmonise with those we ourselves have long since arrived at. Without doubt, any quantity of cotton can be grown in Bengal, only that other produce is more profitable to the agriculturist. It is equally indisputable that in quality the Bengal cotton is far inferior to the American, and is not likely to be much improved unless a permanent and lucrative market be opened in Europe. The trade has existed at least since 1783, when 114,133 pounds were exported to England, but it was not until 1818 that the competition between India and America fairly commenced. In that year 247,000 bales of Indian cotton were entered, against 207,000 bales of American, but from that time the latter gradually went ahead, and Indian produce has come to be regarded merely as a supplementary supply to make up for any deficiencies of the western crop. It is admitted that the Indian shippers had chiefly themselves to thank for the disfavour with which their cotton was looked upon. The Court of Directors repeatedly complained of the foulness, dirt, and leaves, which deteriorated from the value of this important article of commerce, and also—strange to say—of the increasing length of its staple. So late as 1829 they recommended that the Upland Georgia should be taken as the standard of value, at the same time according equal praise to several short-stapled Indian varieties. For some reason or other the supply from the East fell off to a considerable extent, and thus the English manufacturers were naturally induced to adapt their machinery to the material which they received in the greatest quantities. The difference in quality was certainly not such in 1847 as to justify the preference shown to American cotton, could the two have been procured in equal quantities.

For nearly three-fourths of the Manchester manufactures the Indian cotton was found to be well suited, provided it could be obtained for 15 per cent. less than the American. At the late meeting of the Cotton Supply Association at Bury, Mr. Burn declared that it was suitable for at least two-thirds of the yarn annually spun in Great Britain. As for the uncleanness, the loss after skutching might be set down at 20 per cent., while upon good average American it was 12½. The difference, therefore, was only 7½ per cent., which was more than covered by the difference in price; but it must be borne in mind that Mr. Burn alluded to cotton from the Bombay Presidency, which is decidedly superior to that from Bengal. That Indian cotton is deplorably foul is not to be gainsaid. Nor is this surprising, when we consider that the cultivator finds quite as ready and almost as high-priced a market for a dirty and adulterated article as for one in a clean and first rate condition. Then the middleman is positively benefited by adding extraneous matter before disposing of his purchases to the exporters, while the latter "are guided by the orders they receive from their constituents at home, and the execution of these orders is always limited to time. They are thus wholly dependent on the cotton to be found" on the spot, "whatever be its quality." The price even is beyond their control, for the English market is regulated by the advices from America, the stock in hand, the state of the money market in Great Britain and America, and the banking operations of the two countries. Of the gradual improvement of the system of cultivation those who are most familiar with the Indian ryots appear to entertain no doubt. They argue that the native agriculturists are most careful with the crops that require care, and that they have neglected cotton simply because the difference in the price between good and bad samples was too small to justify the outlay of time and labour. But if a permanent demand arose, and a reasonable price were offered for superior qualities, they are too much alive to their own interest not to bestow greater attention upon this kind of produce likewise. But the question arises, Will not other crops in any case prove more profitable than the growth of cotton? As Mr. Medicott points out, it was always predicted that the banks of the Ganges Canal would be covered with cotton plantations, but the event has not fulfilled the prophecy. It has been found more advantageous to cultivate grain and other crops of primary importance, and the same result has followed wherever the means of transport have been facilitated. Cheap conveyance is manifestly essential to the very existence of the cotton trade, far more so, indeed, than quickness of transit. Everything, however, depends upon the permanence of the European demand. Should the civil war in America continue for another year, the English manufacturers will be compelled to adapt their machinery to the short Indian staple, and then the natives will soon recognise the necessity of paying more attention to the cultivation of the raw material, upon which such mighty interests are dependent. It is a goodly course, and the stakes are worth running for. Which, then, shall be the winners—the freemen of British India or the slaveholders of North America?

JAPANESE POLITICS.

THE current number of Blackwood contains a very interesting paper, entitled "Political Tragedies in Japan," which throws quite a new light on the system of government in that island-empire. In the first place we learn that the treaty negotiated by Lord Elgin some four years ago is probably invalid, so far at least as many of the great Japanese nobles are concerned. It so happened that at the very time his lordship imagined that the Tycoon had ratified the treaty, there was no such personage in existence. The last Temporal Emperor had died prior to Lord Elgin's arrival, and his successor had not yet been elected. But even had the Tycoon been alive, it now appears that he ranks only fourth in the empire, and that his acts are not binding upon twenty-four of the first men in the island. In ancient times the functions of Spiritual and Temporal Emperor were discharged by the Mikado, until at a critical period he was compelled to appoint the celebrated Taiko Sama generalissimo of the forces employed to suppress a dangerous rebellion. With the aid of twenty-four loyal princes Taiko Sama succeeded in restoring order, and also in placing in his own hands the supreme temporal power of the State. The lands of the conquered rebels were taken from them and divided into upwards of three hundred feudal tenures in the gift, not of the Mikado, but of the self-created Tycoon. In process of time these holdings have increased to the number of six hundred, besides a host of titular nobles in attendance on the Emperor or on the principal grandees. The lineal descendants and representatives of the twenty-four princes who co-operated with Taiko Sama receive the investiture of their rank from the Mikado, and considering themselves the social equals of the Tycoon, they have usually applied themselves to the practically independent administration of their respective principalities. The greatest of these is the Prince of Kanga, whose revenue is estimated at nearly three-quarters of a million per annum, and who can bring into the field an army of 30,000 fighting men. He has also a spiritual office, which renders him inferior to the Mikado alone, and makes him the second personage in the empire. Now, Taiko Sama left three sons, the founders of the three families of Owari, Kewsew, and Mito, from one of whom the Tycoon is necessarily chosen. As a fact, however,—with one sole exception, when a member of the house of Owari was elected—that office has remained in the hands of the Kewsews. With a view to compensate the Mito family for their practical exclusion from Government, the Mikado raised their chief member to a titular rank which gave him precedence of the Tycoon. The election of that great officer of State rests with the twenty-four grandees, none of whom would condescend to take an active part in public affairs. No first-class Daimio, or noble, would accept office of any kind, but an assembly of 180 nobles possessed of not less than £35,000 a-year select 13 of the inferior Daimios, five of whom constitute the first, and eight the second Council of State. So long as the constitution was respected by the reigning Tycoon and his thirteen elected Councillors, the great lords employed themselves in governing their own territories without interfering with their nominal ruler, or allowing him to interfere with them. But when the fundamental law prohibiting all intercourse with foreigners was violated by the treaty with Commodore Perry in 1852, the late Prince of Mito at once placed himself at the head of the Opposition, and the Tycoon was assassinated. A successor, however, was again chosen from the Kewsew family, and he in his turn was poisoned for concluding a treaty with Mr. Harris in 1858, and admitting him to an audience. Most of the Councillors also perished, though one survived who was a host in himself. Ikamonokami was not only the leader of the Liberal party but hereditary regent in the event of a minority. He was further supported by the Princes of Kanga and Satsuma, both of whom were allied by marriage to the reigning family. A boy prince was therefore elected Temporal Emperor, with Ikamonokami as Regent. The Prince of Mito, however, was not thus to be baffled. In the month of March, 1860, "seventeen of his most devoted retainers waylaid the Regent one wet day as he was entering the gate of the Tycoon's palace; and although the scene of the attack was within sight of his own door, not a hundred yards distant, and he was surrounded by five hundred of his followers, and attended by two Daimios, each with an equal number, this handful of resolute men cut their way to his norimon or palanquin, decapitated its occupant before he had time to escape, or the guards by whom he was surrounded (who were encumbered by waterproof coats) could interpose, and carried off his head in triumph. The assassins were, however, so hotly pursued that the bearer of the Regent's head would have been captured had not one of the gang, with great presence of mind, cut off the head of a wounded comrade, and holding it aloft, led off the pursuers on a wrong scent. When at last overtaken, he threw the wrong head to the infuriated Yaonin, who surrounded him, and ripped himself up." But the chief nobles were so indignant at this unparalleled outrage that they sent a peremptory order to Mito to disband his followers and put himself to death. The only notice the Prince deigned to take of this missive was by beheading the messenger and raising the standard of revolt. His last hour, however, was at hand. A follower of the Prince of Kanga disguised himself as a carpenter, and obtained employment in the Palace of Mito. As no artisan is permitted to carry a sword he had provided himself with a revolver, and taking advantage of a favourable opportunity he shot the Prince, and then expedited himself into the next world by means of the "happy despatch." The Prince had time before he died to call his people about him, and to dissuade them from immolating themselves on his tomb. He pointed out to them that all the recent animosities between noble families had sprung from permitting foreigners to violate the sacred soil of Nipon, and he called upon his hearers to avenge his death and restore peace to the island by the extermination of every European. His nephew inherited his title, and likewise his antipathy to foreigners, and a few months afterwards occurred the midnight attack upon the British legation, which has already been described in this journal. The assassins were summarily punished on the spot by the native escort, but it has never yet been discovered how many of the great nobles were privy to the assault. This only is known, that "no first-class Daimio has ever been brought into personal contact with a foreigner." Their antipathy, therefore, is nothing more than an hereditary prejudice, which can only be removed by degrees as the more enlightened men observe the good effects of intercourse with Europeans. This, too, is certain: the latter will never again permit the Japanese empire to be closed against them, and if the Daimios are well advised they will calmly accept a position which they cannot refuse without inevitable destruction. At the same time, it is clear that great delicacy and forbearance should be exhibited in our relations with the Japanese, until they learn from mature experience to place confidence in British honour and single-mindedness. The writer in Blackwood, to whom we are indebted for these details and of whose individuality there can be no doubt, bears honourable testimony to the generally good deportment of the English merchants who frequent the ports of Japan, and also to the excellent understanding that exists between them and the middle and lower classes of the Japanese. "Time and experience," he says, "can alone produce harmony, but there is no ground for supposing that this desirable result is unattainable." "A personal intercourse," he continues, "between the first-class Daimios and leading foreigners would do more than anything else to remove a prejudice founded upon an antiquated law; and the conciliation of a few of these grandees would remove the possibility of an external rupture or a civil war."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

PAPER MONEY IN INDIA.

Mr. H. BAILLIE rose to move an address for copy of the agreement entered into by the Government of India with the Bank of Bengal, for the issue of paper money in India. The establishment of a paper currency in India was a question of importance. It had excited considerable interest among the commercial classes out of doors, and, naturally enough, some difference of opinion existed upon the subject. A paper currency would, no doubt, be a great advantage to the commercial and mercantile classes in India. It would enable merchants to pay sums of money in distant parts of India with far less trouble and expense than at present. So far it would be a great commercial convenience, but that commercial convenience would be very dearly purchased if the currency to be established were not based on sound financial principles. A general feeling prevailed that if there was to be a paper currency in India, the paper to be issued should proceed from a bank authorised by the Government, with a separate department of issue, like the Bank of England, but that the paper should not be issued by the Government itself. The reasons for that were sufficiently obvious. India was a country peculiarly sensitive, and peculiarly liable to sudden commercial and monetary panics. These panics sometimes occurred in India without any assignable cause, and it during one of them a run for coin or bullion should take place, which it naturally would do, to such an extent as to induce a suspension of cash payments as a temporary expedient, it would be far better that this should be done by a bank rather than by the Government itself. In the former case the Government might come forward to assist the bank, to proclaim the frivolity of the panic, and to offer to accept the notes of the bank; but in the latter case, where the notes were issued by the Government itself, the Government being unable to meet its engagements would stand discredited in the eyes of the people, and would be practically insolvent. It might be said that this could hardly occur to a Government which usually kept from £14,000,000 to £15,000,000 cash balances in its treasury. That, however, was a delusion which prevailed in this country, even among those who professed to instruct the public on matters of Indian finance. Those persons seemed to suppose that the cash balances in the Indian treasury were as available resources to the Indian Government as would be the cash balances in her Majesty's treasury to the Government at home, and that, therefore, they might be used as a security for an issue of paper money. To a certain extent that might be true, but to a certain extent it was fallacious. What were called the cash balances in the Indian treasury were cash balances in about 300 treasuries, scattered over every part of the Indian empire. Some of these treasuries were 1,000 miles from the seat of Government, and, with the usual modes of conveyance it would take two months to bring the balances from those distant treasuries to the treasury at Calcutta. It was obvious, therefore, that these cash balances could not be made available at the seat of Government for any sudden commercial panic, and that the only cash balance which could be made available under such circumstances would be those that might be found in the treasury at Calcutta. Now, the cash balances in the Calcutta treasury usually amounted to about 10 per cent. of the whole, so that if we calculated the cash balances in all the Indian treasuries at £15,000,000 we might assume that there was about £1,500,000 in the treasury at Calcutta which might be made available for a commercial panic. It was useless, however, to discuss that question, because, by an arrangement to which he was about to call attention, the cash balances were made to disappear and vanish altogether from the scene. When Mr. Wilson was first appointed Financial Secretary to the Government of India, he left this country fully prepared to carry out a system of paper currency in India. He had the advantage of consulting the Secretary of State for India, than whom there was no one either in or out of that House who from his previous studies or his great knowledge of the subject would have been able to give him better advice, and he also consulted the Governor and the Deputy-governor of the Bank of England, who expressed themselves favourable to his views. Accordingly, Mr. Wilson did not lose much time after his arrival in India before he published his programme, which was contained in a Minute dated from the Camp at Meerut, on the 25th of December, 1859. That Minute had been justly characterised by the Secretary of State for India as a very able document. Mr. Wilson did not conceal from himself the difficulties with which he would have to contend in first introducing into our Indian empire that great invention of modern civilisation, the abuse of which had caused such incalculable evils in almost every country in Europe, as well as in America. He understood the character of the people; he knew how suspicious they were of modern innovations; and, therefore, he endeavoured to take every possible precaution to secure the confidence of the people in the convertibility of his notes. How, then, did Mr. Wilson propose to carry out his plan? He proposed that a paper issue should take place, the security being two-thirds of Government Stock and one-third of coin. That plan came home to this country, and was submitted to the Right hon. gentleman the Secretary of State for India, who disapproved of it, being of opinion that it did not give sufficient security for the convertibility of the notes. The proposal of Mr. Wilson therefore was disallowed, and very properly. The Right hon. gentleman had not left them in doubt as to what were his views on the subject. They were expressed in a despatch to the Governor-general after Mr. Wilson's minute; and the despatch might be considered as the answer to that minute. In that despatch it was stated by the Right hon. gentleman that so indispensable was it in the first instance to establish confidence in the notes, that beyond the reserve of coin and bullion in the hands of the Currency Commissioners it should be provided that the cash balances in the Indian Treasury should be available to meet any unforeseen demand in payment of the notes. The plan of the right hon. gentleman was briefly this—that there should be an issue of £4,000,000 on Government securities, but all beyond that should be secured by coin; but he was so anxious to secure the convertibility of the notes that he further provided that the cash balances of the Indian Government should be available to meet any unforeseen demand for the payment of the notes. But, in spite of these instructions, the Indian Government had devised, and actually carried into effect, a plan, he presumed under the presiding genius of Mr. Laing, far more dangerous than the scheme of Mr. Wilson—providing as it did that Government notes should be issued on the security alone of Government stock. He referred to the agreement of the Indian Government with the Bank of Bengal for keeping the cash balances, the allowances that were to be paid to the Bank, and the investments the Bank was to make when the balances exceeded £700,000, the combined result of which would be a profit to the Bank of not less than £100,000 a year. This would account for the enormous rise of 10 per cent. in the price of the Bank shares that took place on this transaction becoming known. He concluded by moving an address for a copy of the agreement entered into by the Government of India with the Bank of Bengal for the issue of paper money in India.

Sir C. Wood (who was very indistinctly heard) was understood to say that the hon. member had correctly enough stated the early proceedings with reference to the establishment of a paper currency in India. He believed that a paper currency there, resting on sound foundations, would tend much to develop the resources of India, and promote its commercial interests. The late Mr. Wilson had proposed a plan for that purpose, which in some respects had not been deemed satisfactory. Directions had therefore been sent out from this country on the subject, and an Act had been passed in entire conformity with those directions. It did not provide for the issue of notes for £4,000,000 without security, but £4,000,000 was the limit beyond which the issue was not to extend. He had heard with surprise of the arrangement which had been made by the Government of India with the Bank of Bengal. It was not in accordance with the instructions which had been sent out, and it undoubtedly was one such as he should not have been disposed to sanction. But the hon. gentleman would see that in this case, as sometimes happened in Indian matters, they were in this difficulty—that an arrangement had been made in India, on the faith of which persons were acting, and it would not be fair now to disturb it. The arrangement was, however, only a temporary one, which must come to an end in five years; and he could assure his hon. friend that there was very little chance of its being renewed. The hon. member was under a mistake in saying that the notes were issued upon Government securities. For every note issued by the Bank coin had been deposited, and at this moment there was coin deposited to the full extent of the paper issue. The temporary arrangement with the Bank could not, as he had stated, very well be overturned. The terms on which it should hereafter be renewed would require very careful consideration, and the hon. gentleman would allow that he was only exercising a sound discretion in now refraining from entering upon that point. As to the production of the papers now asked for, he would suggest that the hon. member should postpone his motion for a short time.

The motion was then, by leave, withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 11. THE ARMY IN INDIA.

Mr. BLAKE asked the Secretary of State for India what arrangements had been made with regard to the position of the medical officers of the late East India Company's army on amalgamation with the Queen's forces; whether it was still intended that the term "service in India," used throughout the warrant of the 13th day of January, 1860, should be restricted to actual residence in India, exclusive of leave; and whether the senior medical officers of her Majesty's Indian army would be considered entitled to promotion to the rank of Principal and Deputy Inspector-General and Inspector-General of Hospitals, as heretofore, or were those appointments in future to be filled by the medical officers of her Majesty's Royal Army.

Sir C. Wood replied that the revision of the medical establishment for India awaited the report of the Government of India, which was expected very shortly. The Royal Warrant required a service in India of twenty years, in any rank, to qualify a staff or regimental surgeon for the rank of surgeon-major. The rule having been found productive of hardship in individual cases, it was determined by her Majesty's Government that a period of two years (the period allowed under the furlough rules to count as service for pension) should be allowed to reckon as part of the period qualifying for promotion to the rank of surgeon-major, in addition to all leave taken in India. The grades of Principal and Deputy Inspector-General, and Inspector-General of Hospitals were of recent date as respected the Indian service. The future organisation of the medical department of that service would receive the fullest consideration.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADORS.—The Salut Public of Lyons gives the following account of the Japanese Ambassadors:—"The great event of the day is the arrival here of the Ambassadors of Japan. The embassy is composed of five ambassadors, twelve officers, and some servants. The chief is a man of about fifty years of age. The Japanese have an intelligent physiognomy, although their countenances are not very prepossessing; the nose is large and flat, the lips thick, the eyes oblique, the complexion sallow, and the head large. Their hair, of a jet black, is raised up on the head, which gives the younger portion of them a rather feminine appearance when seen from behind. Several of them have the head completely shaved, but none have the slightest appearance of a beard on the face. They are generally dressed simply in garments of dark colours, and with little ornament. They wear a silk tunic, trousers of white muslin, and sandals of yellow leather. They all wear in their waist-belt a dagger more or less richly chased, according to their rank or dignity. They have on their heads a kind of Chinese hat in straw, those of the ambassadors being gilded on the inside. The Japanese are very sober. They usually drink liqueurs and rice water; and as regards food they prefer boiled poultry. They sit at table, use knives and forks, and season everything they eat with pepper and spice. They are remarkably clean in their manner of eating, as well as in their daily habits. They do not appear to be at all annoyed at the curiosity which they excite. They appeared astonished at the princely luxury of the hotel at which they have alighted, and where they occupy the splendid apartments on the first floor. In the evening every part was lighted up in the most brilliant manner, and an immense crowd collected in front of the house." The Ambassadors arrived in Paris on Monday evening, and alighted at the Hotel de Louvre, where apartments had been prepared for them. They were received at the Lyons Railway Station by M. Feuillet de Conches, introducer of Ambassadors, and a detachment of cavalry escorted them to their hotel. Among the anecdotes narrated of the Japanese Ambassadors during their stay at Marseilles, it is said they presented a cigar to each of the policemen placed at the door of their hotel to keep off the crowd. The cigars were composed of tobacco and opium, and they made the smokers quite drowsy. The next police inspector who passed was surprised to find his men asleep at their post. Curiosity was excited at Lyons three days ago by seeing some foreigners wearing pointed shoes, similar to the Chinese, and having on their heads high and ill-formed oilcloth caps. They were ascertained to be Asiatic merchants, who had come from Bombay with different valuable productions from the English possessions, intended for the Exhibition of London. These strangers, who speak English with facility, left for Paris to proceed to their destination.

THE GARRISON OF THE ALUMBAGH.—The annexed "general order" has been addressed to the army:—"Horse Guards, March 24.—Her Majesty having been graciously pleased to grant to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who comprised the garrison of Lucknow, in 1857, the permission to reckon an additional year's service towards pay and pensions; and having been pleased to extend this boon to the force which entered that place, under the late Sir Henry Havelock, in September of that year, is now further pleased to direct that the troops composing the detachment left by that officer in the Alumbagh shall also participate in the above advantages. The additional year's service, in all such cases, is allowed to reckon towards the qualifications for 'medal and gratuity.' The grant is to be entered at once in the record of service of all those who are entitled to its advantages. By command of his Royal Highness the General Commanding in Chief.—JAMES YORKE SCARLETT, Adjutant General."

PLYMOUTH, April 8.—The East India and London Shipping Company's screw steamer Indiana, 2,365 tons, C. R. Suckling commander, landed her pilot and proceeded hence at noon this day, having left Gravesend punctually to her advertised time, for Madras and Calcutta direct. She had a full general cargo (including some Government stores, &c.), and a good complement of passengers, amongst whom were, for Madras, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Wait and family, Mr. J. Malpas, Lieut. and Mrs. Scott, Lieut. Crawford, Lieut. Bailey, Mr. E. B. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter, Major Gore, Mr. J. A. Moultrie, Ensign C. H. Sandford, &c.; and for Calcutta, Miss Rowe, Master Shelly, Capt. and Mrs. Sedgrim and family, Mrs. Kaas and family, Mrs. Morton, Miss Spitta, Capt. Duffrie, Ensign Carey, Mrs. Frank Brown, Ensign Fitzherbert, Ensign Clark, Miss Henderson, Cornet G. A. Wilson, Capt. and Mrs. Cody, Mr. and Mrs. Eden and family, &c. We understand that in addition to the magnificent fleet of steamers already owned by this company they have lately purchased the well-known S.S. Mauritius, to enable them to meet the increasing demand for steam communication with India, and also to ensure more effectually the regular despatch of one of their steamers from England and India monthly. For the future one of their fine vessels will leave Gravesend on the 15th of every month, thus meeting the wishes of that large portion of the community connected with our Indian empire.

NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—A meeting of the Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company was held on Friday; Mr. H. Haymen in the chair. The report stated that the requisite tools and engines had arrived safely at Calcutta, and had been received at the collieries. The operations at the mines are announced to be making satisfactory progress, four seams of coal having been found, of which one of twelve feet thick is now being worked. It is estimated that sufficient coal can be raised from this seam alone to supply the requirements of the next twenty years. No calls will be made in the current year. On the completion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to Jubbulpore, which has been unfortunately delayed by the failure of the contractors, a considerable accession of profit is expected to accrue to the company. After a short discussion the report was adopted unanimously.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—At a general court of the East India Company, held at No. 3, Lothbury, on the 9th inst., Mr. John Harvey Astell, M.P., and Mr. Lestock Robert Reid, were re-elected directors; and at a court of directors on the following day Colonel William Henry Sykes, M.P., was unanimously chosen chairman of the company for the year ensuing.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The steamer with the outward Bombay mail on Saturday took £1,500 in gold to Alexandria, and £29,695 in gold and £13,860 in silver for Bombay.

COST OF CHINA.—In December last, the latest return, we had 5,837 troops of all arms at the different stations in China—2,025 at Tien-tsin, 745 at Shanghai, 272 at Taku, 1,019 at Kowloon, 1,776 at Hong Kong. The cost of the troops in China for the year 1862-63 is estimated in a return just issued at £278,077. What naval expenditure is incurred about China the return does not show. In the Civil Service Estimates there is to be voted £288,810, consisting of £67,208 for the mission and consulates in China, and for miscellaneous expenses, and £221,611 for loss in supplying the Treasury chest there.

CEYLON COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Ceylon Company, with a capital of £500,000, in shares of £20 each, to assist in the development of the resources of that island, where the rates of interest are very high, by making advances to the planters on lands, crops, and other approved securities.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—The annual meeting of the Agra and United Service Bank was held on Saturday, Mr. G. Gordon Macpherson in the chair, when the report, announcing a dividend and bonus at the rate, together, of 12 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, was adopted unanimously, after some discussion. In answer to questions, it was mentioned that the gross profits of the past year show an increase over 1860, but that there has also been an augmentation in the expenditure. The Government securities have been diminished, advantage having been taken of the current high prices to realise a portion, and to employ the proceeds as required in the general business of the bank.

APPOINTMENT.—(Downing-street, April 9).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Cephas Mark de Joux to be Secretary to the Council of Government and Registrar of the Land Court for the Island of Mauritius.

GOVERNORSHIP OF LABUAN.—(Downing street, April 10).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Jeremiah Thomas Fitz-Gerald Callaghan, Esq. (now Administrator of the Government of the Island of Labuan), to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Labuan and its Dependencies.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, considerably lower than those now charged by this or any other Company, but differing from the old system in respect that no reduction takes place on the insured returning to Europe or proceeding to any other part of the world not chargeable with an extra premium.

According to this method, the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

The following are Specimens of the New Rates:—

"It would be impossible to over-estimate the utility of this work to members of the military profession as a comprehensive exposition of the law especially applicable to them, and to the practice of military tribunals; and it would be difficult to speak in terms of commendation too high of the manner in which it has been executed."—Morning Chronicle.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter of the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last. With her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £40,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Ranceemooddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 30,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,

First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,

Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,

Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,

Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

|  | Rs.         | £.     |
|--|-------------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                               | 4,500 (400) | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies                | 67,500      | 6,750  |
|  | 3,82,500    | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                         | 3,50,000    | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                        | 1,45,000    | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                   | 1,60,000    | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                | 1,48,000    | 14,800 |
| Fittings, Gas, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800      | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                         | 21,000      | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                 | 75,000      | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                        | 13,800      | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                      | 65,500      | 6,550  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Ranceemooddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

for weak and relaxed constitutions, are especially recommended to persons residing in India and other hot climates. Their immediate action is to disperse that unpleasant feeling of relaxation and languor, by constringing and invigorating the muscular and nervous system, and strengthening the whole frame. By supplying the waste to which all weak constitutions are liable, they arrest that premature decay of nature so common in all hot climates. In boxes, 1s. 1½d.,

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 14th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE telegrams lately received have not only anticipated, but have also exaggerated the tenour of the news brought by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of March. The departure of Lord Canning and the installation of his successor are naturally the most important topics of comment in the local journals, which, for the most part, sketch the character and career of the late Viceroy in alternate light and shade. The various farewell addresses presented to his Excellency, together with the appropriate answers they elicited, will be found in another page.

Disturbances still continue in the north-eastern frontier of Bengal, the Garrows having again descended from their hills and plundered the village of Soosim, but without personal injury to the inhabitants. On the other hand, the Rajah of Nustung, one of the most powerful chiefs in the Khassiah States, has evinced his unswerving good faith towards the paramount Power by allowing free passage through his territory to British troops acting against his refractory neighbours. It might not, perhaps, be amiss to reduce some of the troublesome tribes beneath his rule, and make him answerable for the peace of the frontier. It is, at least, easier to treat with one Prince, possessed of real influence, than with half-a-dozen semi-independent and wholly barbarous chieftains. The Bhootanese, it appears, have been daunted by the firm attitude of the detachment of the 18th Regiment stationed along the frontier, and have accordingly fallen back from their advanced positions. It is clear, however, that something more must be done than merely repelling the attacks of these turbulent mountaineers.

A nephew of the notorious Nana Sahib, named Rao Sahib, has been endeavouring, though in vain, to excite an insurrection in Hyderabad against the Government of the Nizam. Fortunately that able Minister Salar Jung obtained timely information of the intrigues that were on foot, and at once took efficient measures to expose and counteract them. The chief conspirator thereupon sought safety in flight, and has not since been heard of. His game was a bold one—his aim being to restore the Mahratta power, and finally try conclusions with the British Government. This insane project has been disconcerted by the vigilance of the very man whom the Nizam was so lately on the point of dismissing with disgrace.

Mogul Beg, the instigator of the murder of the Rev. Mr. Jennings and his daughter, Captain Douglas and Miss Clifford, in the palace at Delhi, has undergone the extreme penalty of the law in front of that bloodstained building.

The Cabul correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states as a positive fact that a Persian army, fifty thousand strong, has been despatched against the oft-beleaguered town of Herat, on the western borders of Afghanistan. This statement must be accepted with due allowance for native exaggeration, though it is by no means impossible that the Shah-in-Shah may have been tempted by the rapidly increasing infirmities of Dost Mahomed, and the generally troubled state of his kingdom, to make another demonstration against that much coveted outpost. It remains to be seen whether the British Government will again interfere to repel the assailants. Any such intervention is scarcely probable in the present state of public feeling.

We invite the attention of all who are interested in the subject of cotton cultivation in India to Mr. Edmonstone's admirable minute on the capabilities of the North-Western Provinces. The Maharajah of Gwalior, it will also be observed, has abolished the transit duty on cotton throughout his territories.

Sir George Clerk, we rejoice to learn, has so far recovered his health as to be able to remain at his post for another month or two.

ADDRESSES TO EARL CANNING.

At eleven o'clock on the morning of the 17th March the Sheriff of Calcutta was received at Government House, attended by a deputation of about forty gentlemen, representing the European and Armenian merchants, civilians, bankers, traders, planters, railway, clerical and professional classes, who at a public meeting held in the Town-hall on the 7th March, had adopted an address to Lord Canning on his retirement. Precisely at the appointed time his lordship entered the throne-room, and after the usual courtesies, the Sheriff read and presented the address, which has already appeared in this journal; to which, in his usual earnest and impressive style, Earl Canning made the following reply:—

"Gentlemen,—I receive your friendly farewell with pleasure, and I thank you for it.

"After the trials through which the British Empire in India has passed, it is satisfactory to me to be assured that you appreciate the measures by which the attachment of the people to their Government has been strengthened, and confidence in the stability of the State restored.

"The foremost of those measures were the exercise of mercy and forgiveness as soon as authority had been vindicated, and the reposing of trust and responsibility in classes which previously had no share of either.

"The restoration of financial credit is beyond controversy.

"The measures relating to the tenure of land, to which you have referred as opening the way to the beneficial influences of European enterprise, will not, I hope, disappoint you. It is not merely the employment of European capital which, in framing those measures, has been had in view. They have a further and a higher scope. England has before her one of the most difficult problems that State policy can be called upon to solve; the drawing together with harmony and without injustice to either side, two great races, radically different in everything that forms the character of men, but which, by the course of events, are being gradually brought face to face. And I know no measure which is more likely to teach to each side its duty to the other as fellow subjects and neighbours than one which shall enable the interests of both to be bound together more permanently than by those uncertain, precarious, and fleeting ties which have hitherto characterised the connection of Englishmen with the soil of India.

"Gentlemen,—I am obliged to you for your expressions of regret at my being about to leave India, and for your good wishes. The interests of this country will for the rest of my life seldom be absent from my thoughts. But I am far from thinking that it is upon the exercise of high official power alone that those interests depend. Year by year larger influences than those of mere official position will be brought to bear upon the relations of England with her greatest dependency. That which I look to with the greatest confidence is a correct knowledge and appreciation of India and her wants by the Parliament and the people of England; and it behoves us all most earnestly to desire that such public opinion should be just and well founded, and, above all, generous towards the people of India.

"Again, gentlemen, I thank you for your courtesy, and I wish you heartily farewell."

At half-past four p. m. the clergy of the diocese of Calcutta were received by his lordship, and the Bishop of Calcutta read the address, as under:—

"My Lord,—We, her Majesty's faithful subjects, the Bishop, Archdeacon, and Clergy of the diocese of Calcutta, residing in or near the Cathedral City desire respectfully to represent to your Excellency the assurance of our regret at your departure from India, and our parting wishes for your future happiness.

"We venture to think that a special address from the clergy on this occasion is not inappropriate; since, under your Excellency's administration, the direct Government of India has passed to the British Crown; so that your Excellency is the first viceroy and actual representative in this country of her whose supremacy over all estates of the realm, whether they be ecclesiastical or civil, the Church of England willingly and thankfully acknowledges. We congratulate your Excellency that at the close of six years of unexampled anxiety, you are enabled to leave India in restored peace and apparent security, with many most hopeful signs of material advance and prosperity, and some, as we trust, of improvement in higher things also. We look back with thankfulness upon extreme perils courageously overcome, grave difficulties solved, law and order vindicated, the visitation of famine thoughtfully and energetically met, and important changes carried to a successful issue under your Excellency's wise superintendence, and we rejoice that God's providence, in spite of much temporary evil, has placed in your hands such opportunities for good, and so largely blessed your undertakings. We are sure that history will do justice to the dignified calmness and self-possession which your Excellency maintained during the most terrible crisis through which the British rule in India has ever passed, to the moderation, so worthy of the head of a Christian Government, which you displayed after victory, to the uprightness and impartiality of your rule, and to its invariable recognition of the great truth, that duty, and principle, and the acknowledgment of the rights of others are the only sure foundations of power.

"But we feel that the clergy are also bound to thank your Excellency for the attention which you have paid to those great interests which are more specially entrusted to their guardianship, and for the additional provision made for the spiritual welfare of European Christians in this country. We owe it to your advocacy that her Majesty has been pleased to grant an addition to the number of chaplains, and to your orders that many churches have been built, especially in the newly-annexed province of Oude, where in every military station the church has risen simultaneously with the barrack and hospital. And while in purely military stations it will generally be allowed that places of worship should be altogether provided by the State, we are no less grateful to your Excellency for the liberality with which Government has helped and encouraged voluntary efforts for the erection of churches in smaller places, by adding to the free-will offerings of various congregations.

"In like manner we thank your Excellency for the liberal assistance lately promised towards the foundation of schools for the benefit of Christian inhabitants of India who are unable to send their children to England. We believe that there is scarcely any want more pressing than that of education for such children, and we rejoice to know that the measures lately taken are already beginning to bear fruit, in schemes for the establishment of schools in several of the large towns of the diocese.

"We now respectfully bid your Excellency farewell, and we assure you that the petition which we offer up in our church service for the Governor-general of India is not, in our estimation, one which concerns the office only, but that it also refers to the personal needs of him who holds that office. It is our earnest prayer that the blessing of the Father and of our Lord Jesus Christ may go with you from India, may comfort you in all sorrow, and strengthen you for the fulfilment of every duty to which His providence may call you."

In reply to the above address his Lordship said:—

"My Lord Bishop, Mr. Archdeacon, and Rev. Gentlemen,—It is a great pleasure to me to receive this address. I thank you for it sincerely; for its spirit of loyal reverence to the Crown, for the favourable opinions which it expresses regarding the course of Government which has been followed in India during the last few years; and, especially, for your testimony that it has been a course worthy of a Christian rule.

"I hope it has been so. And I am further encouraged to believe that it has, because testimony to the same effect has been tendered spontaneously and publicly by many who, not being Christians themselves, were not called upon to scan the acts of the Government from that point of view, or to bear witness to the fruits of a faith not their own.

"I regret that, for reasons which are easily intelligible, it has not been in the power of the Government to do even more towards the supplying of church accommodation, and of spiritual aid to our congregations than your Lordship has described. Financial considerations have limited the means."

"I shall hear with undiminished interest of the progress of the schools of which your lordship has spoken, and of which so worthy a beginning has been made on behalf of a class of our fellow-subjects for whom the means of education have been too much neglected.

"My Lords and Rev. Gentlemen,—I am very sensible of the kindness of your expressions towards myself personally.

"I cordially and respectfully return your farewell, and I pray that God will bless your endeavours to make the faith and practice of the members of our church a bright example in the land in which your ministrations are appointed."

At five p.m. the vice-chancellor and members of the Senate of the Calcutta University waited on Earl Canning, and the vice-chancellor, the Hon. W. Ritchie, Esq., read the following address:—

TO HIS EXCELLENCY EARL CANNING, G.C.B., K.S.I., Viceroy and Governor-general of India, and Chancellor of the University of India.

My Lord,—We, her Majesty's faithful subjects, the Senate of the University of Calcutta, desire to offer to your Excellency the assurance of our respectful gratitude for the benefits which you have conferred on our University, and of our regret at the approaching severance of the ties which have closely connected you with it during five eventful years.

"Although the institution of the University was designed under the Government of your illustrious predecessor, yet it was during your Excellency's administration that the necessary measures were brought to maturity and the University called into existence, so that your name will always be associated with it, not only as its first Chancellor, but also as one of its founders and earliest benefactors.

"We regard it as no slight advantage to one of the youngest Universities of the British Empire that its highest office was first filled by a nobleman whose own early career was marked by brilliant distinction in the most ancient of those Universities, and whose example may well convince our students that in the fulfilment of high political functions, a thorough academical education and general literary culture are scarcely less important than the more obvious requirements of special knowledge and statesmanship.

"We also gratefully acknowledge that the Chancellorship in your hands has not been a mere titular office. In the anxious times through which the Empire has lately passed, in the midst of overwhelming cares of State calmly sustained, and of extreme perils courageously overcome, you did not allow the difficulties of the greatest crisis that any Governor-general has been called on to meet to prevent your attention to the great cause of education in India. In the welfare of the University entrusted to your care, you have ever shown the liveliest interest. And when for a time her Majesty's Government at home hesitated to sanction the views of the Senate, it was through your advocacy the doubtful points were explained, objections cleared away, and our recommendations approved and carried into effect.

"We feel, therefore, that the present prosperity of our University and the hold which it has already gained on public opinion in India, is in no slight degree due to your Excellency's thoughtful guidance and fostering care. Encouraged by these proofs of your good will, we do not doubt that in using the influence which you will justly exercise in the discussion and determination of Indian questions the great objects which the Senate are desirous to promote will not be forgotten, and that measures by which they seek to improve the intellectual and moral condition of this great country will receive from you a careful consideration, and, if wisely framed, a generous support.

"We now bid your Excellency respectfully and sorrowfully farewell. We desire to follow you from India with the hearty expression of our thanks for the past and good wishes for the future. And we trust that a career is now opening before you in England, happy and honourable in the highest sense, as presenting large and abundant opportunities of doing good and receiving its best rewards in the consciousness of public duties earnestly and faithfully fulfilled."

"Mr. Vice Chancellor and Gentlemen of the University,—I esteem it as a great honour to receive this address. The interest which I feel for the University of which I have just ceased to be Chancellor must not be measured by the opportunities which I have had of helping its advancement. Of all the shortcomings which have necessarily attended upon an administration carried on through times of civil trouble and of financial difficulties there has been none which has caused me more regret than that which has resulted from the objection to withhold for so many years all increase of expenditure for education. And although this necessity has pressed indiscriminately upon education of every class, it is in regard to the education of the higher ranks of native society that I have most deplored it. Sir, I am satisfied that in giving to those ranks, not in Calcutta only, but elsewhere in India, the opportunities of a liberal education which shall be acceptable to them, the British power in India would find a great help to good government and one of its best safeguards. But it has not been possible to attempt this, and mainly for the same reason no progress has been made towards giving to your University a local habitation of its own. I trust, however, that better times are at hand; and if so I am certain that the University will have lost nothing by the transfer of its chief office into the hands of one so eminently qualified to watch over its interests as my noble friend who is now Governor-general.

"In reference to the suggestion in your address that the great objects which the Senate are desirous to promote may receive support from me after I shall have left this country, I am disposed to think that I leave the University in a condition so well established and promising that it will stand in little need of aid from without; but its interests will at all times command my best consideration and services.

"I thank you, Mr. Vice-Chancellor, and gentlemen of the Senate, for the gratifying terms of your address, and for your warmly expressed good wishes; and with very sincere regret at the severance of our connection I bid you farewell."

At half-past five the native deputation waited on his Lordship, when the address adopted at the meeting of the 25th of February was read.

The following was his Lordship's reply:—

"Gentlemen,—I should be very insensible to feelings which ought never to be absent from the minds of those who are called upon to take a large share in the government of their fellow-subjects, if I did not receive your friendly farewell and your kindly expressions with much pleasure. I thank you for them, and I am glad indeed to know that my administration has been such as to elicit the testimony of satisfaction afforded by the address now presented to me. I have no intention, gentlemen, of taking up your time by dwelling on the various acts of that administration touched upon in your address, but there are one or two points which I cannot refrain from noticing. The address alludes to the merciful policy pursued towards those who were rather led into than leaders in, the rebellion. In dealing with these men I did neither more nor less than was my duty, and I claim no merit for it. The object which the Government of India has strictly kept in view during the times through which we have passed, has been that England's name should come out of the trial without stain, and that, if possible, new foundations should be laid of continent and mutual confidence amongst the Queen's subjects of either race. This could not be done by British bayonets alone. If England desires that her power should be viewed with respect and veneration, as well as with fear, and that those of our fellow countrymen who, in rapidly increasing numbers, are seeking their fortunes in India, should be able to do so with security, profitably to themselves and with benefit to the State, then most assuredly the millions around us whom God has committed to England's rule, must, at all times and under every provocation, be ruled not only with justice, but with justice strongly leaning to the side of mercy and generosity; as, in the hands of a mighty Christian power, justice ought ever to lean. Another point to which the address alludes is the existence of bad feeling between the two races. I cordially agree with you in hoping that this feeling will subside. I trust it will do so rapidly; eventually I am sure it will. Much, however, depends on yourselves; and you, native gentlemen of Calcutta, must on your part make allowances for events still recent, and be careful to do nothing by act or word to foment the irritation of the past. I need no exhortations to carry with me the remembrance of India. I shall never cease to think of this great empire with feelings of interest in it and in all that it contains, and, as long as I live, shall feel happy in knowing that in the opinion of its people my administration has conducted to its benefit."

PERSIA AND HERAT.

The necessity of protecting our old victim, enemy, and friend, Dost Mahomed, is again likely to plunge us into war with Persia, if the intelligence received by the Delhi Gazette from Jellalabad is to be believed, and we see no reason to doubt it. "Authentic intelligence," writes Sirdar Mahomed Uzul Khan from Toorkistan to the Ameer, "has been received to the effect that about fifty thousand Persian troops, with one hundred guns, are on their way to Herat, and are encamped in different places, and that Sirdar Sooltan Jan, of Herat, as directed by the King of Persia, has ordered sixteen thousand sowars and infantry to march towards Furrah and Kandahar." This news seems to have been received at Jellalabad on the 3rd March, and information of its truth was received from Kandahar and Khelat-i-Ghilzie within the next two or three days.

Subsequent accounts state that the Persian troops are in possession of the whole Temen Hazara, and that they were preparing to march on Furrah, which is on this side of Herat, one hundred and fifty miles nearer to the British frontier and Kandahar. The Dost is said to have despatched a Vakeel to the British authorities at Peshawur with this news on the 8th., and Lord Elgin will not improbably find himself at the outset of his career involved, as was Lord Canning, in a Persian war, for this advance of Persia upon Herat and the dominions of the Ameer is in the teeth of treaty engagements with ourselves, and we must either abandon all relations with her or insist upon fulfilment of her obligations. By treaty the Persian Government is engaged "not to send troops to Herat on any account, unless foreign troops—that is, troops from the direction of Cabul or Kandahar, or other foreign country—should invade Herat; and in the event of troops being sent it was engaged that the troops should not enter the city of Herat, and that on the return of the foreign troops towards their own territory, the Persian troops should be immediately withdrawn from the neighbourhood of Herat to Persian soil."

Whether from the mere restlessness of barbarism however, or from Russian intrigue, the Persian Court every five years repeats the experiments of an advance upon the Afghan frontier. Herat is situated about 600 miles from the British frontier, on a high table land about four thousand feet above the level of the sea. It is said to contain a population of about 50,000. It formerly formed a portion of the Afghan empire. For more than half a century it has been an independent principality, leaning in turns to the side of Persia and Afghanistan, as caprice or interest seemed to dictate to its barbarian chiefs.

In 1836, when English statesmen were afflicted with one of those periodical panics on the subject of the supposed Russian approach to India which seem from time to time to overwhelm them, Herat was invested by a Persian army, sent for the purpose of assisting the Prince against the minister, and to enforce a treaty with Persia which had just been violated, and England immediately stepped in to its relief. The Heratees were found able, under the command of Major Eldred Pottinger, to relieve themselves of the presence of their invaders, and the conduct to us of the chief, whom we had desired to succour, was so treacherous and disgraceful as to convince us for a time how little cause we had to concern ourselves with Persian affairs, a conviction not arrived at unfortunately until we had become fairly involved in the insanity of the Afghan war. The proclamations of Lord Ellenborough of 1st October, 1842, seemed to have afforded a guarantee against our again interfering in Afghan and Persian politics at all; and accordingly they were left alone for the space of ten years, when the terrible lessons history had read us in 1841 became forgotten. In 1853 a treaty was negotiated between her Majesty's Government and the Shah, by which, as we have said, the latter bound himself to avoid interfering in the affairs of Herat, and to forbear from despatching troops in that direction unless upon the approach of an enemy from Afghanistan. In the beginning of 1855 a rumour was spread of Russian movements or intrigues in Central Asia; Persia it was said being once more to be employed as a cat's-paw, the first step threatened being the seizure of Herat. The pretence in this case was the restoration of the sons of Kham Ran Shah, who had been pushed by the usurper Yar Mahomed from their father's throne. The usurper, so well known to us twenty years ago, himself was dead, and the son who succeeded him was a helpless imbecile, sunk in drunkenness and debauchery, such as even Asia abhors. Alarmed at these things, our old enemy, Dost Mahomed, applied to the Governor-general to be taken into favour, and accordingly a treaty with us was entered into at Peshawur, by which we bound ourselves from interfering with his dominions, or sending a resident to his capital. The British and Afghans were thenceforward to be bound in terms of amity, the enemies of the one to be regarded as enemies by the other. We were under no obligation to render any substantial assistance, but a verbal promise, to which the paper made no allusion, is said to have been given to the effect that we should not permit the Persians to occupy or to retain Herat on any pretence whatever. In November 1855 a quarrel took place between the British Ambassador and the Court of Teheran, when Mr. Murray withdrew from Persia altogether, and took up his residence at Mussoul, in Turkish Arabia; and in December the Teheran Official Gazette announced the intention of the Shah to be, to despatch a force to Herat, on the plea that Dost Mahomed had established himself in Candahar with a view of moving on the Persian frontier. The Persian army was ten months in reaching its destination, and it was not until October or November that the city fell into their hands, apparently through the complicity of its own people. The British Government had, from the first, stoutly remonstrated against the conduct of the Shah, and at last launched the Persian expedition of 1856 against him, a step which was followed by his prompt submission. If the intelligence of our North West contemporary be confirmed, we shall probably have a second expedition on our hands.—Times of India.

A PERMANENT SETTLEMENT FOR NORTHERN INDIA.

In this, the last week of his six years' administration, the Governor-general feels acutely the evils of that habit of procrastination and inability to come to a decision on any question, which have been his bane, and have so impeded the despatch of public business. He is overwhelmed with work—much of it details that the conversion of the Council into a Cabinet would relieve him of

—and in spite of his earnest desire and really great efforts now to hand over clear files to his successor, Lord Elgin will serve himself heir to more than one question, which he must necessarily take years to understand. Among the most important of the arrears is the great subject of the conversion of the land assessment of the North Western Provinces into a permanent settlement. When Colonel Baird Smith presented his report on the causes and remedies of the Famine to Lord Canning, his lordship declared, as we announced at the time, that he hoped to carry out the permanent settlement before he left India. It was an object worthy of the ambition of a successor of Lord Cornwallis, and of the son of the statesman who opened India to the "interloper." But the honour of accomplishing it will devolve on Lord Elgin. A desire not to commit his successor to a measure of which he might not approve, or in carrying out which his inexperience might involve mistakes, has probably prevented Lord Canning from proclaiming the resolution of Government on the principle, and, as in the case of the fee-simple, leaving the details to be subsequently arranged.

As, however, it is most improbable that Lord Elgin will look with disfavour on a policy, which has so many convincing arguments on its side as to have secured the adhesion of his colleagues and of the most bigoted revenue authorities trained in the school of Mr. Thomason, the question may be considered as no longer one of principle but of time. The North West, the Punjab, Bombay, and even Madras will all be subjected in time to the new policy, and probably in the order we have stated. All are more or less ripe for permanent assessment; which could in the course of the next ten years be carried out without one tithe of the immediate wrong suffered by both the state and the landholders in Bengal. In all a field survey has been more or less completed and the rights of every cultivator and proprietor registered, so that no such evils as now afflict Bengal, from the mistakes made in 1793 and the obstinacy of the Board of Revenue, are possible in the future. Not only so, but the rules permitting the purchase of waste lands in the plains are simply delusive, if a permanent settlement is not given. Astonishment has been naturally expressed at the small quantity of uncultivated land not in hill districts which appears in the official returns recently published. The reason is plain. In Madras the Mirasidars lay claim to all wastes, while they pay only for what they cultivate. In the Punjab the finest tea land is abandoned to the jungle and its denizens, because an inexperienced settlement officer chose to say it belonged to the nearest villages, who, not only as individuals but as communities, refuse to sell it. And in the North West Provinces, all the waste lands of a zilla were declared to be the property of its village communities. We are not extravagant when we say that one third of all the culturable soil of India is kept waste and pays no revenue to the State, because, by a fiction, the villagers who cannot cultivate it are supposed to have a proprietary claim which only our settlement has conferred. As the sole landlord, the right to those wastes rests with Government. So long as there is no permanent settlement, the cottiers insist on a choice of soils, instead of, as in Bengal, attending to agricultural improvements and a rotation of crops on the same land. Half of the culturable soil of India is wasted, contrary to the laws of God and civilised man, to maintain a mythical right given by sentimental collectors. Capital and settlers are kept out. A permanent settlement would at once remedy this. If the Mirasidars of Madras, the village communities of the North West, and the hill savages of the Punjab are proprietors, let the State settle with them for ever for as much land as they are willing to pay for. The waste will then be available for English or any other settlers, capital will manure the soil, machinery and improved methods of agriculture will be introduced, and wastes will become smiling gardens. Not only so, but the new zemindars, whether small or great, confined to a definite area of which the rent can never be raised, will make one field yield the produce of two, and show on their estates all the results of that careful cultivation which are so remarkable in the ryots of Bengal and the peasant proprietors of France and Belgium.

We shall take another opportunity of showing with what ease the ryotwar of Madras might at once be converted into a permanent zemindary tenure. In the North West and the Punjab matters are ripe for a beginning. Within the last five years nearly the whole of the Punjab has been re-settled, and the almost invariable result has been a reduction of the Government demand, a clear proof of the injustice and ignorance of the first settlement which Sir R. Montgomery would now fain upset in the tea districts. In 1855-56 the first revision of the thirty years' settlements of the North West began in Seharunpore and Goruckpore. The object was rather to remedy the omissions of the old settlement in registering and defining different classes of rights, than to raise the land revenue. The Goruckpore revision is almost quite complete. Colonel Baird Smith's glowing picture of the prosperity of this district will be remembered, a prosperity springing solely from its accessibility by road and river to English imports, and its corresponding facilities for the export of produce. The result is that, on a revenue of 21 lakhs of rupees payable by a population equal to that of Scotland, there was an increase of 6½ lakhs, due almost entirely to the assessment of lands that paid nothing before. In Seharunpore and Bolundshuhur there will be a small gain to the state. In Banda, on the other hand, a woeful picture of which we drew more than a year ago, the new settlement which began in 1857, will result in a loss of 4½ lakhs. In 1833 the Government demand was calculated at two-thirds of the landowner's share or one-third of the gross produce. Under the new settlement it is fixed at one-half only of the landowner's share or one-fourth of the gross produce. Hence the slight increase, which will be the general result of all the new settlements, is due mainly to the expiry of rent-free grants, and to the assessment of lands which formerly paid nothing. Remissions are being made in the settlements of Agra, Allahabad, Allyghur, Meerut, Muttra, and Shahjehanpore. All that is necessary is that, as each settlement is completed, it be declared permanent for lands actually paying revenue. Let the wastes be then offered, as Lord Canning has proposed to do in Madras, to the neighbouring cultivators, and if the ryots refuse, let them be available to all who choose to buy. Thus subordinate rights will be scrupulously respected, settlers will be encouraged, and the law of God in the cultivation of the soil will be carried out.

The time is favourable for immediate action. When we think of Bengal and Madras, we fear the North West and Punjab will not always have such liberal and statesman-like Governors as Mr. Edmonstone and Sir Robert Montgomery. They have managed to hit the happy medium between the prejudices—we cannot say rights where the State is landlord—of the ryot, and the encouragement of the settler, without whom he will never be raised from his degradation. In his minute on the Cotton Commissioner's Report, Mr. Edmonstone has expressed views which increase our anxiety to see the assessment of the North West made permanent before his departure twelve months hence. After thirty years' experience of both district and secretariat duties, he, a Bengal civilian, declares of European planters and landholders that he "is glad to have the opportunity of stating his belief that their presence was beneficial, their conduct towards the native population exemplary, and the uprightness of their dealings with the people about them unimpeachable." His conviction is that "in a political point of view, nothing but good can result from the residence of Europeans in the interior, whether in the character of landholders, of planters, or of merchants." That the presence of Europeans is not unacceptable to the people of the North West, he shows by the fact of their large circulation of capital, their kindly treatment of the natives, the liberal and just character of their commercial intercourse, and the rareness of complaint and litigation to which they give rise. "He would be glad to see half-a-dozen European settlers of enterprise and respectability in every district of these provinces." Though the procedure of the civil courts is much more prompt and effective than it used to be, he "would have unhesitatingly advocated the enactment of a law to make fraudulent breaches of contract criminal." And on the subject of a permanent settlement, while declaring his belief that the evil of periodical assessments has been less than is generally thought, he admits that, "when a district approaches to within five or four years of the expiration of the settlement, all improvement ceases." A remarkable confession this, sufficient of itself to justify the immediate concession of a settlement in perpetuity!

The truth is the periodical assessments have done good as a preparation for a permanent settlement, for which, unlike that of Lord Cornwallis, such data have now been collected that both the landowner and the public will be benefited. The landowner, by the inducement given him to spend capital and skill on his estate; the public, by seeing a diminution in the cost and annoyance of collectors' establishments and the litigation of the revenue courts; by a preparation for the redemption of the land-tax which will get rid of these evils altogether; by the sale of lands now held waste without the most distant hope of cultivation; and by such an increase in the prosperity of the people, that famines will be impossible, trade will be increased, and the treasury be replenished from light taxation both direct and indirect.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARRIVAL OF LORD ELGIN.—At about a quarter past five on the evening of the 12th March a salute of twenty-one guns from the Feroze announced that Lord Elgin had left the vessel and was on his way to Chandpal Ghat. About ten minutes after his Lordship arrived, accompanied by the deputation which had been to the Feroze to receive him, and a second salute booming from the ramparts of Fort William announced that he had disembarked. His lordship was received at the landing place by the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, the Commissioner of Police, the Officiating Master Attendant, and the Sheriff; he entered immediately the carriage which was waiting to receive him, and a moment afterwards was rolling down the line. The body guard was drawn up in close order on either side of the Strand near the Ghat; the Lahore Light Horse in extended order succeeded; and we must say we have seldom seen any cavalry present a more creditable appearance than these two well-mounted and well-appointed corps. The two regiments of native infantry which lined Hastings-streets also looked extremely well; but it was a treat indeed to see the fine, well set up men of the 43rd Light Infantry, which, drawn up on both sides of the road from the corner of Government-place, formed the end of the line. As soon as his lordship entered the carriage, the body guard, wheeling into section of threes, formed the usual advance and rear guard of the escort; the Lahore Light Horse carrying swords and the Infantry presenting arms as the carriage passed down the line. As the carriage entered the compound of Government-house, the guard of honour, consisting of a company of the 43rd L. I., with the band and colours, presented arms; and the band struck up the National Anthem. At the foot of the steps his lordship was received by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, and at the entrance of the Grand Hall by Lord Canning, who, after the interchange of the usual courtesies with his successor, at once retired. Lord Elgin was then conducted to the Council Chamber, where in the presence of the Executive Council, the Secretary to the Government of India read his lordship's commission, after which the usual ceremony of installation and administration of oaths was proceeded with under a salute of twenty-one guns from the ramparts of Fort William. His lordship then retired to prepare for the dinner to which the chief officials, civil, military, and judicial, had been invited.—Englishman.

CAPTAIN T. WRIGHT, heretofore Assistant Adjutant General of the Peshawar Division, has arrived at the Presidency from Peshawar, to take over charge of the Adjutant General's Office here; relieving Major A. Johnson, who enters the office of the military secretary to the Government of India as second assistant.

MILITARY MEDALS.—Government is at last making a stir about the disgraceful delay in transmitting to India the medals for service in the campaigns of 1857-58; having made an application to the Home authorities for the transmission of those due to the officers and men of the Guzerat Irregular Horse. Why this regiment in particular we do not know. The artillery which served during the siege and capture of Delhi have not as yet received their medals, though it is close upon five years since they commenced their work; and how that work was done we need not here repeat.

BENARES.—Pursuant to expectation, a deputation of the native inhabitants of Benares, headed by Baboo Shamboo Narain Singh (son of Rajah Deo Narain Singh), Baboo Fattah Narain Singh, Rae Narain Dass and Baboo Gooroo Dass Mittra, waited on F. B. Gubbins, Esq., agent of the Governor-general, and commissioner of the division, to present him with a farewell address, containing expressions of the lively sense of the most valuable important and material services rendered to the State by him for the people here. Throughout his whole career in Benares he has, independently of the eminent qualities displayed by him during the disturbances in May last, showed extraordinary ability, indefatigable diligence, indomitable energy, great zeal, untiring patience and public spirit, which were the distinguishing features of his administration. His peculiar quality, skill and tact displayed by him when magistrate of this place, in repressing the spirit of the budmashes will ever remain fresh in the memory of all, and will, in time, become proverbial. He has created such universal awe and respect for him among the people here, that there is not a single person in this city to whom his name as Gobin Sahib is not familiar. The address was drawn up in English, and read tolerably well by Baboo Shamboo Narain Singh. The reply was not spoken so neatly, forcibly and weightily as was done by the Governor-general at the time of his lordship's delivering the reply to the address submitted to his Excellency. The translation of the reply was read by the Commissioner's Sherishtadar, to the utter dissatisfaction of the audience. His Highness the Maharajah of Benares was not present on the above occasion. The excuse that his Highness pleaded for his absence was the apparent slight or disrespect which he met on the last like occasion. This is certainly a very slender excuse. The people are raising a subscription for the memorial, which is to be appropriated to a scholarship, denominated Gubbins' Scholarship in the Benares College. Rajah Deo Narain Singh has contributed Rs. 1,000, and Sirdar Soorut Singh Rs. 500 to the subscription.—Delhi Gazette.

PUNJAB, March 4.—The whole population of Umritsur and Lahore, with their respective vicinities, are railway mad. The excitement is tremendous. The section of the Punjab railway between those two towns has been officially opened, though it will not be ready for traffic before the 1st May. The ceremony came off on the 1st March, and everything was most successfully arranged. The police stood out in grand relief. The orderly crowd, the train and its living freight, European and native, and the triumphal arches, the welcoming and success-wishing mottoes, the turkey, the ham, the champagne, and the speeches, all tended to fill up the cadre, and the whole presented a picture which will live in the remembrance of all who were there to see. The train left Lahore at a quarter after eleven (the rail having been efficiently tested by the engine tender and a couple of carriages running to and fro on Thursday and Friday), and arrived at Umritsur at a quarter to one. About a hundred yards in advance of a temporary platform a handsome arch of evergreens, with "Welcome to Umritsur," was thrown across the railway. The platform was covered with parti-coloured floor-cloth down to the huge tents prepared for the reception of visitors. Lady Montgomery accompanied Sir Robert on his first excursion in the first section of the Punjab railway, and proceeded at once with some of the ladies to the garden house of Rajah Tej Singh, where tidlin had been laid out by the host of the day (Mr. R. O. Stevens, agent). The remainder, and all the gentlemen, a goodly two hundred and more from all the neighbouring stations, stayed to hear sundry addresses presented by the non-official community, very small in number, to Sir Robert himself, and by the chief townspeople to the railway authorities. The lieutenant-governor replied for himself, and Mr. Stevens for the company; his speech being translated by Major Farrington, Deputy Commissioner of Umritsur. Amongst the company assembled were Mr. R. H. Davies, Mr. R. W. Cust, Mr. Forsyth, Mr. Princep, Colonel Mac-lagan, Captain Black, Captain Hall, Mr. Reg. Saunders, Mr. R. Egerton (Goordaspoor), Mr. A. Brandreth (Goojranwala), Capt. P. Maxwell (Gogaira), Major Cripps (Ferozepore), Colonel Gaskhill, Colonel Warburton (commanding the station about to leave Umritsur for Lucknow) ever so many deputies, assistants, extra assistants, &c., and a whole regiment, in ample petticoats, of the beauty and fashion of Mean Meer, Lahore, and Umritsur. From the station to the garden gay banners flaunted on every side of the road, a second triumphal arch wished success to the Punjab Railway, and a third hoped that a good appetite would be at hand to assist in the digestion of the delicacies provided. More than 200 hosts and guests sat down to tidlin, and to hear the sundry speeches delivered by Sir Robert, Mr. Stevens, Captain Lind, and Mr. Griffin. All went off exceedingly well, and at four precisely the snorting of the iron horse told the multitude that the train was about to return to Lahore, and it started accordingly. The Lahore magnates are said to have been somewhat astonished at the extent of the preparations made at Umritsur to do honour to the opening, and pressed his Honour to remain one day and hold a durbar at Lahore on the occasion of the arrival of the train with the Umritsur visitors.

CACHAR.—The question of labour is pressing upon us with daily increasing weight, and must speedily meet the recognition of Government. There is in Cachar no want of tea land for all the capital Calcutta could raise; wherever the eye can stretch there are hundreds upon thousands of acres; but in the absence of labour these gifts of nature are unavailing, and Cachar is likely long to remain an unopened mine. Managers, who have to provide their own labour, cannot help feeling some degree of apprehension and even alarm at their future prospects. With new gardens opening on all sides of them, and competing for a portion of their already limited allowance of labour, they feel themselves completely at the mercy of circumstances, and cannot, at any time, be certain that even with money at command they may not find their supply of labour suddenly fall off, and their young gardens irretrievably injured. A political disturbance similar to that now taking place in the Jynteah country may produce the effect. Cachar depends for a large part of her hoeing labour on the Jynteahpore Khasias, and could ill afford to have this source closed to her; it is nevertheless at present closed. Few Khasias are just now to be had in the district, and it seems very doubtful whether they will be procurable during the rains at which time they will be most wanted. If this be the case, it is certain many gardens will suffer severely, as the Bengali labour procurable is, independently of Khasia, quite insufficient to work all the gardens which are now being opened out. Even at this season, when there is no cultivation of their own to divert the inhabitants of the district from the gardens, there is difficulty felt in getting hands, compared with what used to be the case a year or two ago; the greater scarcity is indicated by the necessity of making larger advances, by the gradual extension of the labour field, and by the greater independence of the labourers. This state of things cannot continue, and must end either in a rise of wages, and in a large part of the inhabitants throwing up rice cultivation to work for the plantations—an occurrence which is not very likely to take place—or else in labour being imported. It would be to the advantage of Government and the State if that arterial blood of the country—labour—instead of being allowed to flow into distant countries, where its reflex influence is scarcely, if at all felt, were diverted into Cachar to the nourishment and enrichment of a growing member of the great body politic.—Englishman.

JUNG BAHADOOR AND NANA SAHIB.—"If the forbearance hitherto shown the Nepaulese Government," says the Bombay Saturday Review, "has been based on anxiety to respect the rights of nations, such scrupulousness has never been more misplaced. The acts of Nana Sahib shut him out of the ordinary class of political exiles. Even in Europe such a man might well be given up to us by France or Austria under the provisions of a treaty for the extradition of criminals. But in India our peculiar position compels us to pay less regard than is due in Europe to the jealous requirements of a strict international law. We are here as conquerors, whose security depends as much on our prestige as upon the strength of our arms; and it is essential to the permanence of our dominion that weak and professedly friendly border States should not be allowed to shelter our worst enemies. The reluctance we have shown to interfere with the Government of Nepal, or to dictate what measures ought to be taken to prove the reality of Jung Bahadoor's professed goodwill, has lasted long enough. If the Nepaulese Minister cannot or will not understand that it is his duty to yield the Nana, he must be taught that there are dignities to which the English will not submit. Were this a question of trade, of forcing some article of traffic on an unwilling people, or abolishing import duties which fetter commerce, much more activity would long ago have been displayed by our Government. No war is thought to cost too much which opens to us a new market for piece goods; but the bones of our slaughtered countrymen and countrywomen have lain whitening at Cawnpore for nearly five years, and, while we are erecting monuments to the memory of the victims, the arch-traitor and murderer still lives under the safeguard of a neighbouring power. This reproach must not endure."

ALLAHABAD, MARCH 17.—Dr. Walker, the late Superintendent of the Agra Central Prison, has arrived and taken over the duties of Superintendent of the Government Press. We hear that the shears are about to be applied to the latter, and the establishment which at present costs Rs. 13,000 a month, is to be reduced to a maximum of Rs. 5,000. The prospect of amusements for the season is being increased. The amateurs of the 90th appeared last Wednesday to a crowded house, and will be shortly followed by the railway people, the latter being assisted in their efforts by Mr. Batten, the Secretary to the Board of Revenue, and Lieut. M. Lea of the Artillery. Major Thompson from Cawnpore, has arrived, and relieved Capt. Denneshy of the police, Deputy Inspector-general, and Lieut. Franks from Rohilcund goes to Cawnpore, instead of Major Thomson. Mr. Masson, the Sessions Judge, goes to Calcutta on a month's leave preparatory to resigning the Civil Service. Dr. Irving has already gone on furlough, and Dr. Jackson, the Superintendent of Prisons, acts temporarily in his stead.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S STAFF.—Major C. V. Bowie, Military Secretary to Lord Canning, accompanies his Excellency to England towards the end of the month; and Dr. Beale, Surgeon to the Governor-general, also goes home at the same time. Lieutenant the Hon. A. Stewart goes as aide-de-camp, from Lord Canning's to Lord Elgin's personal staff. Lieutenant Hill is banished to Khatmandu; and Major S. J. Blane, the remaining aide-de-camp, goes into high political employ in Nagpore, where, no doubt, he will be deservedly popular, and an efficient servant of the Government. This appointment disposes gracefully of the officers on the staff of the late Governor-general, and without detriment to the public service.

EUROPEAN DESTITUTION IN CALCUTTA.—Once more we (Hurkaru) take up our pen on behalf of our poor countrymen and their families residing in this city. Once more we appeal to the charity of the inhabitants of Calcutta to aid us in the collection of funds to enable these starving men, women, and children to return to their native land. How it happens that Englishmen in this country have fallen so low, whether through vice, sickness, or inability to work, we are not prepared to say, nor can it signify much in our opinion. Many have come to India under promises and expectations never realised, many are the orphans and widows of private soldiers, whilst others have been incapacitated from doing work by sickness and disease—all are poor and starving. Of this fact there can be no possible doubt. Mr. Kinloch, who for the last nineteen years has nobly devoted his life to the good work of watching over and alleviating the sufferings of this class, writes us that he shall be happy to accompany any ladies or gentlemen who may wish to satisfy themselves of the condition of the poor whose cause we advocate to-day. There will be no excuse for us now if we fail to accept this invitation. It is no longer a mere assertion, an empty attempt to create sympathy for suffering that has no existence, a something we may talk away and forget. Mr. Kinloch, who, we are sure, will pardon the use we make of his name, goes on to say—"In — lane, there are eighteen poor widows, chiefly the widows of British soldiers, and of all ages and colour; some left with three and four children all wholly unprovided for. It would puzzle anyone to know how they live. Some of the younger women go out as nurses, others are physically unable to do this, whilst others cannot leave the house on account of their children. Frequently three widows and their children live in one small house rented at from five to eight rupees a month. One old blind woman (a widow), gets four rupees a month. Several ladies have from time to time, been taken to see her, but from the fluctuating state of Calcutta society such relief is very precarious, and the poor creatures are neglected. T. C. lives in B— lane, was twenty-two years in the army, and left it with a "very good" character from his colonel. He receives 10½d. per diem, out of which he pays five rupees eight annas a month for house rent. His eldest daughter was recently married at the early age of fourteen, and the reason may be guessed. This man's family consists of himself, wife, and three children. He is quite unfit for hard work." Alas! a volume such as this might be compiled were we disposed to lay bare the sufferings of our poor country people, buried in the close alleys and noisome dens of Calcutta, without the means to reach their homes in England, Scotland, and Ireland, where the fight for life would, at any rate, no longer be waged against climate as well as poverty, and where charity might reach them, without fear of the contamination that stands between them and us situated as we are here. What Englishwoman will accompany Mr. Kinloch in his rounds and not return overwhelmed and sickened by the scenes she will have encountered in the filthy purlieus of a native town, scenes unconnected with those which we have all been accustomed to at home, and which delicacy forbids our touching upon. Cut off from those lost ones, for whom for years past we have been, from time to time, called upon to contribute, we now propose to collect money with the view to remove our poor European countrymen, their wives, or widows, and children, from this town in India to any one in the United Kingdom of Great Britain. There is no demand here for the species of labour they can afford, or which cannot be obtained of natives at a lower price, and the climate is altogether unsuited to the European constitution when exposed to the hardships and privations consequent upon poverty.

LANDOUR, March 16.—We have had our share of rain lately in common with other places, but the change has been anything but pleasant; in fact, it has brought back winter again, and it feels colder now than in December. On the night of the 8th (after near a month of dry weather, and very fine and warm to the end of February), a heavy fall of rain with loud thunder and lightning half the night, came on, which changed to snow in the morning of the 9th, it cleared in the forenoon, and the snow had all disappeared before evening. This made it very cold; the thermometer was at 32 the next morning; and has ranged from 40 to 54 all the last week. Last night heavy rain again fell, with lightning and distant thunder; and it came on again to hail heavily with thunder and lightning this morning, and seems likely to continue, which has again sunk the mercury to 35. The crops in the Doon below look beautifully green; and from the clear aspect of the plains to the horizon the rain must have been pretty general; and there is every prospect of an abundant harvest. Grain, however, keeps at a high figure, only ten seers of ata per rupee, and the jampanees still stand out for five rupees wages, and will continue to do so till grain becomes cheaper, which is not very probable; as the civil authorities seem to have adopted as their maxim that they have no right to interfere with free trade, which in this case means the large profits made by the bunnias who have it all their own way; though in my opinion the present system savours more of a monopoly than free trade. Scarcely any people up the hill yet, and very little encouragement to do so; but I hear that almost every house at Mussoorie is taken for the season; and a good many here are still for rent.—Delhi Gazette.

UMBALLA, March 17.—The Commander-in-Chief has been at Umballa since the 4th or 5th of the month, and is to be seen every day, either at brigade exercise, or driving about in his pretty little basket carriage of a morning, and at the band every evening. The Head Quarters Camp have enlivened the station very much. We have just had a capital sky race meeting, which his Excellency and the Head Quarters Staff were mainly instrumental in getting up, affording some excellent sport; the races being supplemented by foot races, Highland reels, sword dances, high jumping, throwing the hammer, &c., by the soldiers; the successful competitors being very liberally rewarded by money prizes, presented by his Excellency in person. The last day gave us a steeplechase, one mile on the Delhi road, over two miles of fair hunting country, with, I believe, thirty-six fences, this was won by Capt. Ravenhill's Malakoff, beating three others; the pace was very gingerly kept up all the way. Again our gallant chief was to be "seen" on a grey horse, escorting the fair sex over the field, and holding his own with the best. We have had a subscription ball, at which again his Excellency was to be seen, as well as another of our notabilities, Sir Herbert Edwards. In fact he is jolly as a sandboy, albeit you are in such agonies as to his whereabouts. A move, we understand, will take place towards Simla about the 22nd.

THE CALCUTTA CLUB has become so far a successful scheme as to announce their inauguration dinner, and a general meeting of the members for adoption of the rules and other business at the club house. We (Englishman) have seen enough of the working of the committee and the arrangements of the club to feel assured that it will supply a want long and severely felt among gentlemen of comparatively limited incomes in Calcutta; and the resident members will be men to be envied by many when once the advantages offered by the club become fairly known. One hundred and twenty-five members enrolled before the commencement of operations are a good guarantee of success so far as numbers are concerned; and the surprising manner in which the two houses taken by the club have been fitted up with every comfort and convenience, are equally good signs of the energy and ability of the management in overcoming so speedily the difficulties of starting such an institution.

THE MISSING OFFICERS.—We are glad to be able to state that the rumour we alluded to the other day, and of which we expressed at the time our disbelief, of three officers being missing between Jhansie and Gwalior, has turned out unfounded. The missing men have made their appearance, having only strayed and not been stolen or murdered.—Delhi Gazette.

KURTARPORE.—When the 19th were encamped here, en route to Lahore, some of the officers (eight or ten) went into the city at night. The marriage of some relations of the Gooroo was going on, and there was a natch. How the row commenced, or who commenced it, is not clearly known, but a regular fight took place, and though no blood was shed the officers had a very narrow escape; they had to defend themselves with bamboos, and some got well thrashed. Information of the disturbance reached the officer commanding the 19th, who sent an officer and eighty men to rescue the officers, which was done without difficulty. The Deputy-Commissioner was encamped at Kurtarpore at the time, and he was also informed of the disturbance. Several Sikhs were taken prisoners by the detachment, and sent by the Deputy-Commissioner into Jullunder without inquiry as to who they were. Apparently, one was the Gooroo himself, who had to submit to the indignity of tramping all the way to Jullunder between two European soldiers. Hardly a pane of glass in his palace is left unbroken. It is also said that all the Sikhs were drunk, which perhaps accounts for the disturbance. The matter is under investigation.—Delhi Gazette.

OPIMUM SALE.—The following are the particulars of the opium sale held at the Calcutta Exchange Rooms on the 10th March:—

|             | Chests. | Average.    | Proceeds. |
|-------------|---------|-------------|-----------|
| Benares ... | 1,135   | 1,415 5 7½  | 16,06,425 |

Taught by experience, the Government of India notifies that the duty on Malwa opium will be reduced to Rs. 600 per chest from and after the 1st of October, 1862.

RAJPOOTANA.—Our accounts from Rajpootana represent that country unusually tranquil; there was some apprehension of disturbance in Meywar, but we are happy to hear that the new Regency Council, under the supervision of Major Taylor, has succeeded in establishing matters on a satisfactory footing. Major Taylor has acted during a difficult crisis in a most creditable manner, such as will entitle him to the good opinion of his superiors and the favour of his Government. We are sorry to hear that he has been obliged to make up his mind to leave the country for a time on account of his health. Major Eden, who ought to be in Bombay now, will relieve him. Capt. Macdonald's return to the post as Commandant of the Deolee Force will put out of place his locum tenens, Capt. A. M. Mackenzie, a deserving officer, who, it is hoped, will be provided for in some appointment equally as good as that he has been officiating in. A suttee occurred lately at Gonerao in Marwar, and another in Beechawarra of Doongurpore. This criminal and superstitious practice is, we are sorry to hear, on the increase in Rajpootana. Doubtless the native chiefs induce their people to believe that the Queen's proclamation shelters them, a matter in which they ought to be speedily undeceived by the crime being punished capitally. It is a capital crime, an abatement of self-murder, which is as bad as murder, why should it not be made a hanging matter? The Raja of Jallawar has gone to Bombay, to see the place and improve his mind by travel; he talks of visiting Calcutta afterwards. As for the young Ulwur Prince, he, we hear, talks of making a longer journey still, viz., to England. He is very precocious, and, they say, more like a Mahomedan in his manners and appearance than a Rajpoot. His bride is about eleven years of age, and is said to be nice-looking, but, like Katherine of Aragon, too pious to please her youthful husband.—Delhi Gazette.

THE REV. C. SLOGGET.—The Punjab Relief Committee Fund have communicated to the Rev. C. Sloggett their resolution to present him with a piece of plate, as a testimonial of regard for his "most valuable and philanthropic labours" as secretary to the fund, together with a most handsome letter, acknowledging his services, from Mr. Perkins, the ad interim secretary to the fund, addressed to the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. Mr. Sloggett has been requested to select the form in which the testimonial should be given, "a piece of plate, or such other article as he may prefer," to the value of £100.

MOORSHEADABAD "GUP."—A Moorsheadabad letter states that the appointment of Colonel Mackenzie to the Clothing Agency has created no slight astonishment in the household or court of the Nawab. "The Agent a Durzee!" "The Brigadier Sahib taken to tailoring!" "Mackenzie Sahib turned Koprwallah!" "What will the world come to next!" are but a few of the exclamations of wonderment which issue from the mouths of the puzzled Moslems. They have, however, got a story among them that the Colonel has been induced to accept the billet through philanthropic motives. During 1857 he had some very confidential conversations with the Nawab in his capacity of agent. They spoke of the large reinforcements of European troops that were daily landing at Calcutta. "But Agent Sahib," asked the Nawab, "is it true there have come out regiments of men who go half naked, that is, without either pantaloons or pyjamas?" "Your Highness means the Highlanders," said the Colonel. "They are great warriors, countrymen, and mayhap cousins, of my own." "Then, Colonel Sahib, you should exert your influence with Government to get your relations decently dressed!" The Colonel Sahib said nothing just then, but the aspect of his countenance at the moment is still remembered at Moorsheadabad, and it is now firmly believed there that he has become tailor to the army in order to have an opportunity of supplying his "cousins" with nether garments. It is probable Lord Elgin will not be long until he hears something from the Colonel connected with a new suit.—Phenix.

THE GOVERNMENT PRESS AT ALLAHABAD.—Dr. W. Walker, who has lately joined the press, is endeavouring to set matters right; but it is feared that the speculation of a Government Press will always be a failure. As it is, the Government Press is unable of itself to do all the Government work. The Gazette and the proceedings of the Secretariat are all that issue from that press, and also the Decisions of the Sudder and Zillah Courts; but these latter are done by contracts, though under the general superintendence of the head of the Government Establishment. Most other publications printed under the authority of Government are executed at private presses. When section writing was abolished in the month of July 1860, which resulted in the dismissal or retirement of at least sixty clerks, it was anticipated that there would be a saving in the Secretariat of about Rs. 5,000 a month. Up to this time no paper has been published from which we could ascertain whether the desired result has been obtained. All we know is that the Government Press Establishment costs about Rs. 10,000 a month, including the superintendent's salary, and that the press is chiefly engaged in Secretariat work, and we also know that the Section Bills for current work, under the old system, seldom exceeded Rs. 8,000 per mensem. The saving effected cannot therefore be perceived, though certainly there is a vast advantage gained by printing documents which, when copied in the Secretariat, seldom met the approval of those who saw them, in consequence of their being so ill-copied.—Delhi Gazette.

JHANSI, March 6.—Two companies H. M.'s 52nd L. I., and three guns of the Royal Artillery arrived here yesterday morning; the men all in good health. It is reported that the cavalry also are to come in immediately to Jhansi. Two companies of H. M.'s 34th N. I. are still in the fort of Sehara. The whole of the country in the direction taken by Major Bouchier's column is represented as being most highly cultivated, and the climate much cooler than Jhansi. The Gwalior column has also returned to contonments. The natives at Sehara are said to be a very quiet set of people; and the arrival of Europeans seemed to make them terribly frightened. The mornings still keep delightfully cool at Jhansi.

LIEUT.-COL. M. A. S. BIDDULPH, R.A., has arrived at the presidency, and assumed command of the garrison of Fort William, in succession to Brigadier J. Macdonald, who has availed himself of leave, preparatory to taking his departure in the Jason on the 20th March.

LAHORE, March 16.—After the great festivities of the previous week everything and everybody appears to have sobered down, and Lahore has once again assumed its wonted air of business and traffic. While on the one hand the European residents think of nothing but flying to the hills, the natives think of nothing but flying to the courts. The litigation, which was suspended for a time by the excitement which prevailed throughout the city consequent on the opening of the railway, has burst out anew, and the natives throng to the courts with redoubled energy, determined, as it were, to make up for last month. The question as to who is to be appointed to the vacant seat in the Indian Council to represent the Punjab, or rather who will accept of the honourable post, is still as unsettled as ever. Mr. McLeod and Mr. Cust were first chosen to fill the senatorial chair, but both these gentlemen having refused, Sir Robert made the offer to his secretary, Mr. Davies, but this gentleman has also declined to leave the Punjab. The love of Punjabees for their province has been long received as a patent fact, but when our Bengal friends hear that three of its officials have refused in succession the dignified post of an Honourable Member of the Legislative Council of India, they will, I imagine, proceed to denounce them as a mad and puffed-up lot. Probably an Edwardes or a Forsyth will at last condescend to take the seat. The removal of either would be a loss to the Punjab, but I doubt whether two men more qualified than Colonel Edwardes and Mr. Forsyth would be found, even in the Punjab, to fill the responsible office of a councillor. It is to be seen, then, whom Sir Robert will nominate, for it is with him the selection rests. The circular of Archdeacon Pratt regarding cemeteries has attracted the vigilant eye of our Judicial Commissioner, who has accordingly issued a circular charging the several local committees with the duty of keeping the same in constant and good repair. The graves of Christians buried by the roadside are also to be looked after. Mr. Cust orders that they "should be protected by a mound, the planting of trees, the erection of a wall, the heaping of stones, or some other mode, to preserve the remains from the desecration of the villagers, or of wild beasts." Such orders were much needed; for as Mr. Cust truly observes, "it is notorious that in many parts of the Punjab, there exist solitary tombs and graves of the kind described." Lists of detached cemeteries and graves are to be kept in the office of each committee, and the tehsildars and police are required to look after them. The Christian spirit with which the following remarks are written reflect the highest credit upon the writer. "There is little doubt," says Mr. Cust, "that in each district some one will be found who will take special interest in the subject. It will argue ill for the good feelings of the living, if in a foreign country they allow the graves and tombs of their countrymen to be desecrated or neglected." Before I close this letter I must not omit to remark upon the extraordinary state of the weather. For the past week it has been continually threatening, and to-day, after a most dusty morning, we had a slight sprinkling, which continued steadily for some time. The clouds are still hovering round, and there is appearance of another downfall.—Delhi Gazette.

SAUGOR.—The Madras regiments arrived at Saugor on the 8th and 10th March, the 29th Madras Native Infantry on the former, and the 4th Madras Cavalry on the latter date. On the 15th, a telegram from the Quartermaster-general of the Army was received at Saugor, directing the two Bengal regiments, the 3rd Cavalry and 24th Punjab Infantry, to proceed towards Agra. The 25th regiment N. I., has been ordered from Jubulpore to Ghazee-pore. The 39th regiment N. I. at Saugor does not move for the present.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Mr. R. Temple is to officiate as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. Mr. J. Strachey, who did good service during the famine, has accepted the appointment of Judicial Commissioner, which was so often refused when Colonel Elliot was Chief Commissioner. The Central Provinces now have a chance of good government.

TRIAL OF MOGUL BEG.—In a supplement to the Lahore Chronicle we have an account of the proceedings at the trial if Mogul Beg for the murder of Mr. Fraser, Captain Douglas, Miss Jennings, and Miss Clifford. The trial was conducted under the old procedure, since the Indian penal code does not apply to offences committed in 1859. Public notoriety was held sufficient evidence of the fact of the murder. The prisoner was named and identified by witnesses who knew him well, in whose evidence there are sufficient minor discrepancies to prevent suspicion of conspiracy. They had seen him strike Mr. Fraser and Captain Douglas and stand with drawn sword over the bodies of the two young ladies. The defence, with the exception of some vague charges of ill-will against the witnesses, consisted of a simple denial. It is fortunately clear that the young ladies were murdered there and then at the first confusion of the outbreak, and that the public officers fell at their posts doing their best to stem the fearful outbreak which had occurred.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—A dinner was given in the Town-hall, on Friday, March 9, by the now disbanded Calcutta Volunteers to their late commandant, Captain Malleson. Sir Bartle Frere presided. After the usual loyal toasts, Colonel Eyre and Colonel Maxwell replied for the army and navy. The Chairman proposed Captain Malleson's health, saying:—"In the face of almost every opposition and difficulty Captain Malleson had struggled on, and had brought the Calcutta Volunteers to a high pitch of perfection, in which, like all Englishmen, they only required to be shown what their duty was in order to do it." Captain Malleson replied in many terms. Mr. Brett proposed the Chairman's health; Mr. Abbott, "All British Volunteers," for whom Mr. Goodeve responded; Mr. A. Walker, "The Guests," for whom Sir M. Wells replied characteristically; Mr. Bruce, "The Press," for which Mr. Mead replied, and Mr. Cowan, "The Ladies," whom Mr. R. Temple, C.S., represented. Captain Malleson closed a pleasant evening by proposing the health of the gentlemen of the two companies. Nearly a hundred were present.

THE INDUS TUNNEL.—The progress of works in the Indus Tunnel has been steady, though rather slow, since we last noticed them. The long-expected machinery from Roorkee is now put up, and works remarkably well, so that there is every hope the water will be able to be kept down sufficiently to prevent any interruption to the work, all through the wet season. The gallery on the east side has reached 500 feet, that on the west is only 345, altogether 845 feet completed, leaving only 660 to be done, and as all the streams are now passed by, the construction of the remaining part of the gallery is a mere matter of labour, and will have to be hewn through a mass of solid rock that forms a large island in the centre of the river in the winter season. Major Robertson, the superintending engineer, and the original projector of the scheme, is expected out from England in April.

DHOLPORE.—Matters in the little state of Dholpore are being rapidly settled. The intriguing minister Deo Huns, it is said, actually persuaded the young Rajah, who was lately married to the daughter of the Rajah of Puttiala, that his father-in-law being member of Council would get the old Rajah deposed, and the young man put in his place. Deo Huns should be prevented doing any further mischief. This is not the first time he has been heard of.

Mr. L. BOWRING, Lord Canning's Private Secretary, goes to Mysore, where he will act as Chief Commissioner.

NATIVE CANDIDATES FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.—The Hurkaru states that the Civil Service having been thrown open to public competition without any reference to caste or religious persuasion, two young men (Hindoos) of highly respectable connections are going to England by the next mail to study and compete for the same. One of them is a member of the Tagore family, grandson of the late Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, who was well known in Great Britain and died in Bristol on his second visit, and the other is the son of the late Principal Sudder Ameen of Nuddea.

GENERAL SHOWERS, and the troops accompanying him en route to Assam, arrived at Khoolnah, on the edge of the Sunderbunds, on the morning of the 7th March, all well; and, after coaling, the steamer and troopboat were to resume their course for Dacca, where the General will remain a few days, and then start for the frontier.

H.M.'s 7th Royal Fusiliers.—Three companies of H.M.'s 7th Royal Fusiliers commenced their march from Nowshera on the 7th March, under Captain Lewes. They were joined by two companies at Attock under Captain Plummer, who commands the wing on its march to Ferozepore, which place it will reach about the 5th of April. The head-quarters, and the other wing under Colonel Shiply, expect to arrive at their destination about the end of this month.

THE BENGAL ARTILLERY FUND shows signs not only of vitality but of active vigour. The regiment of Artillery have offered to Colonels Boileau and Smith a considerable bonus each, it is said, Co.'s Rs. 35,000 and 30,000 to retire from the service. It is probable that Colonel Boileau, who is a Major-general, will accept the bonus and go; but in the case of Colonel Smith there is a doubt, as he holds a good appointment at home, the command of the Bengal Artillery Depot at Woolwich; and, in all probability, may feel no wish, nor accept any inducement, to leave the regiment and the service.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.—The Umritsur and Lahore section of the Punjab railway was to be opened for traffic on the 10th of April. The following are the fares at present arranged for:—1st class, Rs. 3. 8 an.; 2nd class, Rs. 2; 3rd class, 8 an. Return trains: 1st class, Rs. 5; 2nd class, Rs. 3. 8 an. The carriage dakh companies withdraw their establishments immediately afterwards from Lahore, and from their respective headquarters at Umritsur.

THE DELHI MEMORIAL.—The local journal states that the monument to be erected on the Delhi Ridge to the memory of the Christians who fell in 1857 will rise to the height of 120 feet. It will be on the most commanding site possible, overlooking all the points which have now become of classical importance in history, as the scenes of indomitable gallantry, devotedness, and endurance.

THE DACCA BANK, as a separate institution, has ceased to exist. It has been absorbed by the Bank of Bengal. The transfer of its business will be gradually accomplished, and continued as formerly, under the charge of Mr. Reiley, as agent for the Bank of Bengal. The shareholders of the Dacca Bank held a special meeting on the 24th Feb., and agreed to merge their interests in those of the latter. The paid-up capital of the Dacca Bank is £40,000, on which for the last five years a dividend of 10 per cent. has been paid. Under the powers contained in the new charter, the Bank of Bengal allots to the shareholders of the Dacca Bank stock at the rate of Rs. 1,375 for every Rs. 1,000 of capital, or, in other words, for their capital of £40,000, the shareholders of the Dacca Bank receive £29,090 in Bank of Bengal stock. Otherwise the Dacca Bank and its directors not only guarantee the whole assets of the absorbed bank, but also hold the Bank of Bengal harmless against all latent or future claims. The fusion of the banks is being carried out under a provisional deed of agreement. Looking to the high value which the shares of the bank have recently attained, the terms are certainly not unfavourable for the shareholders of the Dacca Bank.—Friend of India.

MADRAS.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS TO LORD CANNING.

A very large and numerous attended meeting, in which all classes of the society of Madras were represented, assembled together on Saturday evening, March 8th, at the Banqueting-hall, for the purpose of voting an address to Lord Canning, previous to the departure of his lordship from India.

The Sheriff having read the requisition calling the present meeting, on the motion of Mr. Miller, seconded by another gentleman, Mr. J. Vans Agnew was called to the chair.

The Chairman, after making a few observations (which were rather inaudible), called upon Mr. Mayne to read the address and to move the first resolution.

Mr. Mayne then came forward and read the following address:—

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP,

"We the undersigned inhabitants of the Presidency town of Madras, desire to express the feelings of gratitude and respect with which we regard your policy during the six eventful years of your Indian administration.

"On your arrival in this country foreign war was at an end, and a long career of peace and material prosperity seemed about to commence. In little more than a year, an unforeseen rebellion, in which our own arms were arrayed against us, swept over the greater part of Hindostan, and for a time threatened utter destruction to the British rule. This crisis was encountered by your lordship with a calm courage which never yielded to panic, and an unwearied industry which never knew fatigue, and your exertions, nobly seconded as they were by British valour, and by native loyalty, were rewarded by a hard-won but perfect triumph.

"But, however just the feelings of pride with which your lordship must regard this success, we are convinced that your highest satisfaction is derived from the reflection, that throughout the struggle mercy went hand-in-hand with victory. Your noble forbearance restrained within due limits a contest in which every angry passion was embittered to the utmost. Your politic treatment of the Taluqdars of Oude has reduced to peace and contentment a province which had been the focus of rebellion, and has afforded the first instance in which local influence and magisterial powers have been accorded to a native aristocracy. The right of adoption by native princes and chieftains, which had been so long disputed, was by you voluntarily and gracefully conceded, and a fruitful source of disaffection was removed, by guaranteeing to every holder of territorial possessions, that his line should only cease when he ceased to desire its continuance. To your lordship is due that radical change in the system of administration, which, by extending the powers of the subordinate governments, enables them to legislate freely for local interests, while by the introduction into every council of independent members, without distinction of race or religion, the best security has been given that the future laws of India will be passed with full knowledge of the wants, and an impartial regard for the rights of every section of the community.

"The protracted anarchy of the recent rebellion, the diversion of our resources from productive to unproductive expenditure, and the severe famine which lately prevailed in the North West Provinces, have necessarily checked that material progress which might otherwise have been expected. Yet we feel that, notwithstanding all the calamities of recent years, India is now in a more secure and prosperous condition than she was at the commencement of your rule. Important reforms have been introduced, which are even now beginning to bear fruit, although it may be reserved for your successors to reap the mature harvest. The inestimable boon of freehold tenure has opened up a field for capital and enterprise from which we anticipate the most important results. At the same time that additional facilities have been given for the acquisition of land, its possession has received fresh value from improvements in the Police and Judicial Departments, by which life and property will be rendered more secure, and justice will be made more speedy and certain. The introduction of an improved Paper Currency, and the extension of Banks in the Mofussil, will, we trust, give a further stimulus to commercial prosperity. Notwithstanding the recent strain upon our resources, expenditure is already becoming equalised with income, and a total reorganisation of the Financial Departments has checked waste, and added to the efficiency of every branch of the public service. At the present moment the public credit stands higher than it did at the commencement of your administration. In attaining this result it has been your lordship's painful duty to impose fresh burthens upon every class of the community. But at the same time we know that you have always given the most hearty encouragement and efficient support to those schemes of retrenchment, the full success which will, we trust, enable your successors to unite financial solvency with reduced taxation. Nor have the arts of peace been neglected amid the dangers of war, and the labours of reorganisation. Telegraphs and railways have been extended. Canals and works of irrigation have been carried on. Education has been pushed forward with such vigour as will soon naturalise in the East the knowledge of the West, and each Presidency town has seen a University spring up from which issues annually a band of students, qualified to follow with benefit to their country that career of usefulness and honour which your liberal policy has made accessible to all.

"In this parting address we have no wish to allude to disputed questions of policy which have divided public opinion, and on which the inhabitants of Madras have never been backward in expressing their views. But we feel most strongly, than when her Majesty was about to assume to herself her Indian empire, she could not have found a Viceroy who would have more scrupulously carried out those principles of policy which have made her gracious proclamation the charter of Indian rights. You have shown justice to all, favour to none; and it is owing to this confidence in your impartiality that we, differing as we do as to many isolated acts, are yet united in our respect for your general administration.

"In conclusion, we beg to assure your lordship that in leaving our shores you will not leave our memories. You will take with you to your native land the sympathies of the millions over whom you have ruled. We trust that you may meet the prosperity and honour in England which you have so fully earned by your labours in India, nor do we doubt that you will ever look back with interest to the empire whose fortunes you have so materially influenced, and that your counsel and aid will ever be ready where her welfare is concerned. That long life and happiness, and a course of public utility may await you, is our earnest prayer."

The adoption of this address, moved by Mr. Mayne and seconded by V. Sadagopah Charloo, was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. B. Norton then moved that the following gentlemen be appointed to take charge of the address, and make the necessary arrangements for its presentation, viz.—J. Vans Agnew, Esq., J. C. Mayne, Esq., V. Sadagopah Charloo, Esq., R. W. Norfor, Esq., J. G. Coleman, Esq., and Somasoon drum Chitty, Esq., with power to add to their number. This resolution, seconded by Hamojee Jah, was also carried; and after a vote of thanks to the Chairman, moved by Somasoon drum Chitty, the meeting broke up.

TENASSERIM AND MARTABAN PROVINCES.

Great changes are being inaugurated in the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces by the commissioner, Major Fytche, with a view to materially increase the trade and commercial importance of Moulmein. Of late years, owing to the marauding propensities of the tribes either inhabiting or bordering on the teak forests which abound along the course of the Thoungyeen river, operations in the forests have been very much interfered with. Moreover, the roads and water-courses by which they are reached are greatly infested with dacoits. A forester proceeding into the interior, to procure timber and girdle and fell the standing trees, is obliged to carry with him sufficient money to meet the requirements of all the operations he purposes undertaking; and as the journey is one of considerable length, and a return to Moulmein until the close of the season would interfere materially with the object of the journey, a considerable sum is generally carried by the traveller. This the dacoits are aware of, and so frequent have been the spoliations effected by them that very great insecurity is felt, which interferes considerably with the profitable working of these forests. To afford some protection to the foresters resorting to the Thoungyeen forests from Moulmein, detachments of police have been established along the thoroughfares most in use; one leading nearly directly east from Moulmein through Kaukariet to Myawaddee, on the Thoungyeen River, and another in a north-easterly direction, through Hlinebuay, on the Gyne River, and thence by the Zimmay road to Khozeik, on the Thoungyeen. The posts which are already strongly occupied by the police force in this latter road are Gyne, Hlinebuay, Taidan, Tsaken, and Khozeik. Hlinebuay is generally reached by boat via the Gyne River, and thence into the heart of the lower Thoungyeen forest by the route depicted. The security felt in consequence of the establishment of these posts has already been productive of much good; the protection afforded to the foresters has been freely availed of, and very extensive operations are now being carried on, not only in the Thoungyeen, but the Hlinebuay and Attaran forests. These posts were established while the Shans, who annually appear at Moulmein at the commencement of the cold season, and depart again at its close, were yet in the town; they availed themselves of the protection thus afforded, and reached the Zimma frontier unmolested. They stated freely that if better means of communication were afforded than at present exist within the British frontier, a very considerable proportion of the trade which is now carried on between the Shan States and Bankok would be directed to Moulmein. There is, moreover, a trade of some importance existing between Yunan and Bankok, not directly, but through the Zimma traders. Major Fytche has naturally argued that, if the protection now afforded by the establishment of the police posts, along the Hlinebuay and Kaukariet roads, induce the Shans to resort more freely to Moulmein on their own account, they will be disposed likewise to draw the Yunan trade in the same direction. With this object in view, the Commissioner has pressed upon Government the advantages likely to accrue from the opening out of roads through the British possessions lying between Zimmay and the Shan States, and the sea. As no wheeled conveyances are used for the transport of merchandise, all that is required is a sufficiently broad road for the passage of beasts of burthen, ponies and bullocks being the animals in general use with the Shans. Captain Duncan, the Inspector-general of Police, points out how this may be effected by clearing away the jungle along the existing paths and running a drain along either side of them. As the objects to be attained appear to the Governor-general to be of political as well as commercial importance, he has sanctioned the construction of the roads as proposed.—Englishman.

HYDERABAD, March 10.—A man calling himself Bala Rao took up his residence in the city of Hyderabad, in a house assigned to him by one Toolja Ram, the brother of Imrutlol, better known as Chownee Raja, a commander of about 3,000 infantry, and dispersed his emissaries to get up a rebellion. These men practised principally amongst the regiments composed of Poorbeas, and had some success. The pseudo Bala Rao cared so little to use concealment of his person as to receive visitors at his house. The plot was discovered and a party was sent to capture him, but he fled to Narsinghee, distant twelve miles. He was pursued and again escaped, but a Brahmin servant of his was taken up. This man gives information that his master's name is Rama Rao, that he was a commander of 5,000 men under Tantia Topee, that since the amnesty he had been residing at Oojejan, Baroda, and Poona, and that Hyderabad, as the grand arena for his operations, was his final destination. The Brahmin servant reports that Ram Rao is sick and unable to make long journeys, and the Nizam's Government has expectations of capturing him. Ten or twelve persons, understood to be Rama Rao's emissaries, are in confinement. No person of name or station is mentioned as being connected with this conspiracy, except Toolja Ram, against whom, also, strong facts have not appeared, for though detained at the minister's, he is not in custody. The only particulars known of the plot are, that persons were engaged to join Rama Rao when he raised his standard, which he intended to do at Holes festival. If any of the Nizam's regiments had engaged to assist in the rebellion, their sudden rising would have done injury to individuals and to property, but they could not have maintained themselves for three hours, nor for one moment after the English troops had been brought against them. The only danger was in their choosing to occupy the city of Hyderabad, as the rebels had done at Delhi, the disastrous consequence of which must have been the crushing of the city, for the insurgents would have occupied the various localities and appeared nowhere in a body.—Times of India.
—March 12: * * The Nana's nephew, Rao Saheb, who was in Hyderabad for the past six months, has made his escape. He had been busy enticing and bribing the city people to kill the Nizam and his household, while he with his army of fifty or sixty thousand strong fell suddenly upon Secunderabad and Trimulgherry. He had his troops in the villages in the vicinity of this place, as well as spread all over the cantonments of the province of Hyderabad, and the eighth day of the current month would have been the fatal day had his intrigues not been discovered. The man who exposed him is a Brahmin belonging to one of the city regiments. He had received from the Nana's nephew, or Rao Saheb, a valuable shawl, &c., and a grant "Mundel" as presents, with directions to entice and advise the people of his regiment to mutiny; but the man at once brought the circumstance to the notice of his commanding officer, and latterly it was reported to H. H. the Minister, who at once dived to the bottom of the matter, and had some of the accomplices of Rao Saheb seized, who were then busy sowing the seed of rebellion in the city. The sowcar, on whose firm Rao Saheb had bought hoondes to the amount of five or six crores (?) of rupees, was also seized. As soon as the Rao heard of the seizure of some of his servants and accomplices, he fled. For his detection and apprehension a reward of one thousand rupees had been offered. Some of the Contingent sepoy have also been apprehended for having received presents from the Rao Saheb. This personage, who was so sure of taking Hyderabad in general, was not at all idle during his stay at Chudderghaut, for it appears that some of his servants and accomplices attended every auction at Secunderabad and purchased all the arms they could get there as well as elsewhere, while others were busy in having gunpowder manufactured; but their plans, notwithstanding all precautions and stratagems, were providentially frustrated.—Poona Observer.

WASTE LANDS IN THE NEILGHERRIES.—Mr. Lascelles, of Ootacamund, has been appointed agent of the "India Freehold Land, Colonisation, Trust, and Agency Association," and has applied for fifteen thousand acres of land on the Neilgherry Hills for the purpose of commencing operations on behalf of this company. A report has gained currency in Ootacamund that there have been applications already for more land, since the promulgation of Lord Canning's rules, than there are acres on the Neilgherry Hills; and the majority of these for coffee. The Collector is inundated with applications, and, unaided, cannot possibly dispose of these within two years if, as is usual, he be expected to visit every selected site. He is but occasionally on the spot, his ordinary duties compelling his residence at Coimbatore.

THE PRESS AT PONDICHERRY.—Even Pondicherry has its exciting local politics. A correspondent writes to a Madras journal complaining that the local Moniteur is under Government censorship, and that he must therefore protest against the honours conferred, in the shape of a ball, on the retiring Governor, because of the alleged numerous benefits which he had conferred upon the French establishments in India, and the new laws and public works which he would leave behind to perpetuate his name to future generations. The writer says most of the Governor's acts were carried out for private interests, or are only profitable to the officials and other Government servants at the expense of the people in general. He complains that canvassing was resorted to, to induce "the heads of the different castes" to subscribe for the ball. Denied a free press at home, the writer thus ventilates his opinions abroad.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADDRESS TO MR. J. GIBBS.—The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce have expressed to Mr. James Gibbs, Special Commissioner for Income-tax, their sense of obligation due to him for the urbanity, tact, and judgment with which he has uniformly administered his arduous task as Commissioner of Income-tax. After enumerating the various difficulties surrounding the situation which Mr. Gibbs held, and complimenting him upon the general success which attended his selection to fill so important a post, the address concludes with sincere wishes for his future prosperity and happiness.

The Hon. JONATHAN DUNCAN INVERARITY, was gazetted a Provisional Member of Council of Bombay on the 24th March.

KURRACHEE PEARL FISHERY.—After a sojourn of years in the province, the products of Sind are at length beginning to be appreciated by European enterprise. The pearl fishery has hitherto been a monopoly that the natives alone knew the value of, and the privilege of gathering the pearls has always been purchased by one or the other of our native merchants. Through constant working the fishing became exhausted, and it was found necessary by Government to let it lie still for a few years; the monopoly was sold again this year, and Mr. Coates purchased it. We believe he was induced to attempt the speculation through the accounts given of the bed of the sea by the divers employed by the firm of Messrs. Dunolly & Co. on the wreck of the Stamboul; we have no doubt whatever that Mr. Coates will derive a goodly profit from this farm, as he will scour the sea, or rather have it scoured by the aid of diving bells. These machines were unknown to the natives, and they were consequently never employed in this work before. The Pulla fisheries of the Indus are other farms that might be turned to good account also if any enterprising European capitalist could be induced to turn his attention to them.—Our Paper.

PARSEE INSTITUTE.—The Parsees of Western India have always shown a most intelligent and practical interest in the education of their community, not only by sending their sons to England, but by encouraging the establishment of schools in Bombay. The foundation stone of an Institute, named in honour of Framjee Cowasjee, was recently laid in Bombay by the Parsee member of Council. The building will contain a lecture-room, reading-room, and library. On the foundation stone the inscription ends with the following curious collection of dates, and with the invocation of a blessing:—"On Saturday, the 22nd day of February, in the year of the Christian Era 1862; of Yezdehcard, 1231; of Shalivan, 1783; of Vicramaditya, 1918; Hizri, 1278; and of the Jewish Year, 5622. May the Blessing of God Almighty be upon this Work."

EUROPEAN PAUPERISM.—There is no doubt about the fact that European pauperism is increasing in Bombay. There are Europeans who go about begging pice of the natives, who sleep in the open air, being excluded even from haunts of vice, because of their penniless condition. A person was telling us lately of one of these who came up to him in the street and asked him what money he had, and on ascertaining that he had none about him, snatched the hat from his head and ran off with it. The embarrassing thing about almost all these cases of destitution is, that they have their origin in drink. Perhaps the writer of this has come as much in contact with this class as any one has, except the agents of our city mission; and too often the feeling in his mind when called upon by such is, that it were better to take money to the nearest grog-shop, and make a present of it to the liquor-vendor, than to give it into the hands of the applicant. One of the class mentioned, who died a month or two ago in the bazaars, was well known to the Bombay community. He formerly occupied a position of respectability; he was even sub-editor of one of our dailies. This man sank so low that he was treated by the native grog-seller as a sweeper; that is, they made him stand at the door and they gave him grog out of the cup which they reserved for the sweeper caste. Now, there is but one way—so long as the present system of licensing grog-shops is kept up—in which these men can be effectually helped; namely, Government should take possession of them, put them where it will be impossible for them to get liquor, and make them work for their own support. This beneficent despotism would be the saving of them, and none would appreciate the kindness of it more than the poor creatures themselves.—Guardian.

The Amalgamation Order.

In continuation of Gov. G.O. No. 125 of the 4th Feb., 1862, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following observations by the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, on answers given by the Govt. of India to questions connected with the late changes in the Indian army, and published in Govt. G.O., No. 913, of the 11th Oct., 1861:—

Question.—114. With reference to the reply to question 83, published in Govt. G.O. No. 681, in which it is stated that "all authorised leave" will reckon towards promotion under the staff warrant, inquiry is made if by "authorised leave" only two years in twenty, &c., is intended? The officer has had only about one and three quarter years' leave in 16 years' service; but sickness may send him home. Suppose, under the circumstances, he was obliged to spend eighteen months at home, would all in excess of two years count against him for his promotion to a majority?

If it would not count against him for promotion, what is intended by the term "authorised leave"?

Answer.—No leave, except privilege leave, is to reckon towards promotion, except in the case of lieut. cols. See despatch from Sec. of State, No. 315, published in G.O., No. 824, dated 17th Sept., 1861.

The answer to question 83, in which these words occur, has been cancelled by the despatch above quoted.

Remarks.—If the question alludes to the time reckoned as staff service for promotion, the reply is correct.

Question.—118. By Gov. G.O. No. 332 there is no rank recognised in the staff corps between that of general officer on 1,295 rupees a month, and lieut. col. on 8-2714 rupees, but that of brevet col., the pay of which is the same as that of lieut. col.

The Bombay Government ask whether an officer of the staff corps, not being a general officer, on obtaining the colonel's allowance would receive only lieut. col's pay, with colonel's allowance, or colonel's pay as well as allowance, notwithstanding that there is no substantive rank of colonel in the staff corps?

Answer.—No instructions have been received from the Sec. of State respecting colonel's allowances in the staff corps.

PAY CERTIFICATES.

March 12.—The Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India having represented that much inconvenience is caused by officers proceeding on leave to Europe unprovided with last pay certificates, and it having been brought to the notice of Government that officers frequently leave India without applying at the pay-office for these documents, and without leaving their addresses so as to enable the paymaster to send them after them, the attention of all officers is called to this necessary precaution. They must be careful in future, either to provide themselves, by application to the paymaster, with such certificates before departure, or to make proper arrangements for these documents being sent after them, by leaving their address in England with the paymaster.

Paymasters must make this order known to officers drawing pay from them previous to departure for Europe, and must use their best endeavours to obtain attention to it. If an officer, embarking without a pay certificate, leave his address at the pay-office, the paymaster will forward it so soon as possible, but if the address be not given, report to that effect must be made through the military accountant to the controller.

It is further directed, in pursuance of instructions from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, that when officers return home for residue of furlough, the period remaining unexpired be stated on their papers. The foll. adjustment of rank and proms. are made, subject to H.M.'s approval:—

CULTIVATION OF COTTON.

GOVERNMENT OF THE N.W. PROVINCES.

From Sir GEORGE COUPER, Bart., and C.B., Sec. to the Government of the N.W.P., to W. GREY, Esq., Sec. to the Government of India, Home Department, dated Camp Ghatampore, Jan. 27, 1862.

As required by your letter, dated 16th September last, the Hon. the Lieut.-governor desires me to communicate to you the following remarks on Mr. P. Saunders's report relative to the cotton-growing districts of the Doab.

2. Mr. Saunders had, previously to the receipt of your letter, favoured the Lieut.-governor with a copy of this report; but, as it was not addressed to this Government, no action was taken upon it, except in regard to the remarks on the Doab canals, as it will be noticed below.

3. It appears to the Lieut.-governor that Mr. Saunders has conducted his inquiries with much diligence, and with an earnest desire to ascertain the real truth on all points; that he has drawn the conclusions which are expressed in his report with fairness and impartiality, and that the suggestions which he has offered are for the most part distinguished by good sense, though, possibly, open to objection on grounds not always within his knowledge or cognizance as a "Commissioner to report on the cultivation of cotton."

4. It is hardly necessary that the Lieut.-governor should dwell upon those portions of the report which relate to the area, population, soil, and climate of the Doab districts, or to the "past trade in cotton." There is no doubt that there is nothing in the nature of the soil, or in the condition of the climate (in ordinary seasons), to oppose the growth of cotton to any extent that may be desired; and of this there can be little better proof than the fact which the inquiries of Mr. Saunders have established, that, before the slave-grown cotton of America obtained possession of the English market, the crop was extensively cultivated in the North-Western Provinces, and a large export trade on this article existed. Mr. Edmonstone can remember the time when Kalpee had hardly ceased to be a great entrepot, and it is only within the last two months that he has seen, in the great buildings still standing at that place, tangible evidence of the magnitude to which the cotton trade had grown. There is storeroom for hundreds of bales, and there is space enough and to spare, in the buildings still existing for cotton screws, and for all the operations of picking, cleaning, and packing.

5. What once existed it requires only the same inducements to reproduce. The failure of the demand for Indian cotton, and the consequent fall in prices, of course affected the production, and cotton has given way to cereals, sugar-cane, &c., for which a ready market is always at hand. With the revival of a real and constant demand for the article, its cultivation would, without doubt, be resumed, and there is hardly a limit to the quantity that might be supplied with reasonable encouragement and assistance, and enterprise on the part of those who are interested in the trade.

6. As to the best means of stimulating the production of cotton, and improving the produce, the opinion of the Lieut.-governor entirely coincides with that which Mr. Saunders has recorded in the seventh paragraph of his report. The European settler, or the European agent of the capitalist, will gain no advantage by possessing himself of land on whatever tenures, and himself undertaking the cultivation of cotton. He must after all employ the native agriculturist, who will have less interest in the crop than if it were his own, and will have no scruple whatever, as Mr. Saunders says, in filching as much of it as he requires for his own use, or for the use of his family, and even of his friends. He will take little or no trouble in the agricultural processes, and still less in protecting the crops, when grown, from spoliation, unless he sees his interest in so doing. But the presence of a European settler in a cotton-growing district would be most valuable in creating a local market for the produce; in insuring its ready sale and an immediate return to the producer; in improving the cultivation, perhaps, and certainly the picking and cleaning of the cotton; and on the use of appliances for screwing and packing it for export.

7. That there are no obstacles to the settlement of Europeans in these provinces is fully established by the inquiries which Mr. Saunders has directed to this point. Thirty years have gone by since the Lieut.-governor entered these provinces, being in the first instance appointed to the district of Ghazepore, in which at that time even European planters were settled. Since that he has served in various districts of the North-Western Provinces, in which, or in the districts adjacent thereto, Europeans holding lands or carrying on trade were to be found; and he is glad to have the opportunity of stating his belief that their presence was beneficial, their conduct towards the native population exemplary, and the uprightness of their dealings with the people about them unimpeachable. The Lieut.-governor is fully persuaded that every district officer in these provinces will gladly welcome to his district as many European settlers of respectable character as can find occupation for their capital and their energies, and will give to them all the encouragement and assistance which they can reasonably expect to receive.

8. The Lieut.-governor's conviction is, that, in a political point of view, nothing but good can result from the residence of Europeans in the interior, whether in the character of landholders, of planters, or of merchants. The hands of the district officer must be strengthened by the presence, in different quarters of his charge, of gentlemen whose good will to the Government cannot be doubted; whose means of obtaining correct information as to the feelings and doings of the people around him are considerable; and whose assistance can be confidently looked for, not only in dealing with troubles and difficulties that may arise, but in carrying on local improvements in their neighbourhood. Many of these gentlemen have become members of the District Road and Ferry Fund Committees in these provinces, and more recently some of them have been appointed honorary deputy-magistrates, with jurisdiction in the pergunnahs in which they reside.

9. On the other hand, there is no reason to suppose that the residence of Europeans in the interior of the districts is in any way unacceptable to the people of the North-Western Provinces. That these must benefit, more or less, by the larger circulation of money which will always follow upon the employment of European capital in their neighbourhood, to whatever purpose directed, is certain; that they are treated with consideration in their intercourse, and with liberality in their business transactions with Europeans, may be inferred as well from the rareness of complaints, and the infrequency of litigation, as from the tenor of the several reports regarding the production of indigo in these provinces, which were sent last year to the Calcutta Commission, of which Mr. Seton-Karr was president. Indeed, if there could be any doubt upon the point, it would be removed by the consideration that the interests of the Europeans themselves would be injured, and the success of their undertakings, whatever they might be, would be imperilled by any oppression, ill-treatment, or unfair dealing on their part. The hostility of the people around them would be excited, the authorities would be appealed to, and the law would be enforced promptly.

10. The Lieut.-governor would be glad to see half-a-dozen European settlers of enterprise and respectability in every district of these provinces.

11. The next point to which Mr. Saunders adverts, is the expediency of "a Contract Law to punish criminally fraudulent breaches of contract." The present position of this question renders it unnecessary for the Lieut.-governor to offer any remarks on it. He will only say, that, though the action of the Civil Courts under the new Procedure Code is much more prompt and effective than it used to be, he would have unhesitatingly advocated the enactment of a law to make fraudulent breaches of contract criminal had the question been still an open one. As it is understood that a Bill on the subject is about to be brought before the Council for making laws and regulations, its action may be awaited.

12. Referring now to the thirteenth, fourteenth, and twenty-first paragraphs of Mr. Saunders's report, I am desired to observe that the opinions of the Lieut.-governor on the subject of the "Redemption of the Land-tax," and the "Sale in fee simple of Waste Lands," were communicated in a Minute, which was forwarded to the Government of India in May or June, 1860; and that further discussion is barred by the Resolution No. 3,264, dated 17th October last, in which the views and the instructions of the Government of India on both these important subjects have been set forth. I am to add, however, that the Lieut.-governor does not share in Mr. Saunders's expectation, even if "a fair demand for cotton from England springs up," that these waste lands will be used largely for the cultivation of cotton, at least for many years to come. For 1st. The available waste is for the most part covered with jungle or forest, and the clearing will be a work of time involving considerable outlay. 2nd. There will be a heavy expense and some difficulty in settling cultivators on the tract, and the first object will be to grow food for their consumption, as will be necessitated by the distance of markets. 3rd. The waste will probably be without the means of irrigation essential to the certain production of first-class cotton crops. 4th. The tract will be generally distant from any roads, and these will need to be provided before the produce can be removed from the site of growth. 5th. Though the spoliation may be less, there will be no more care in the agricultural processes unless the cultivator be made to see his interest in the production of a plentiful crop, or unless the European supervision be such as it can hardly be without a very large expenditure. Here, as elsewhere, the Lieut.-governor thinks the function of the European will be to encourage the cultivation by low rates of rent, or by advances, or by insuring a ready sale of the produce as may be, and by improvements in the way of cleaning, packing, &c.

13. As regards Mr. Saunders's remarks on the "tenure of lands in the North-Western Provinces," and his advocacy of a permanent settlement, the Lieut.-governor prefers to postpone the expression of his views until he shall be in a position to do so in connection with Colonel Baird Smith's Report, which has been referred for his consideration with your Letter No. 2,033, dated 7th October last. It appears to him, however, that the evils supposed by Mr. Saunders to arise from the system of periodical settlements of the land revenue in these provinces have been somewhat, though of course unintentionally, exaggerated, and that he is mistaken in assuming that the desire and the object of the Government in every resettlement are to increase the revenue. On these two points a few remarks may not be out of place.

14. When we first acquired possession of these provinces, now nearly sixty years ago, quinquennial settlements of the land revenue were instituted. Subsequently the period was extended to ten years. These settlements were formed without measurements of area, and, it is believed, without much independent inquiry, and the assessments were little better than mere guess-work, guided in some measure, perhaps, but very imperfectly, by Kanoongoes' estimates and untrustworthy records of village collections. Since 1833 assessments have been made only after professional survey, and interior measurement of the area of every village; and from the very first (as the Lieut.-gov. can himself testify, having entered the settlement dept. in 1832) the principle has been inculcated that enhancement of the revenue is by no means the chief object to be looked to, but rather the equalisation of the demand at such moderate rates as shall ensure a fair profit to the proprietors and a punctual realisation of the Government revenue.

15. There can be no doubt whatever, it is presumed, that, notwithstanding the pressure of a system which Mr. Saunders pronounces to be "injurious to the country," these provinces are a garden as compared with what they were in 1803; and that if, when they first came into our possession, we had given a permanent settlement, the land revenue would have been little more than half what it is now, while the sources of indirect revenue would have been little more abundant. It is certain that, notwithstanding the pressure of this "injurious, unjust," and impolitic system, these provinces have thriven; that barren lands have been very extensively brought into cultivation; that, trusting perhaps to the known moderation of the Government, the landholders have sunk numberless wells; and it may be deduced from these facts that the reluctance to make improvements is not so great in point of fact as Mr. Saunders has represented; and the apparent anomaly may be explained without much difficulty, even though it be admitted, as the Lieut.-governor does admit, "that, when a district approaches to within five or four years of the expiration of the settlement, all improvement ceases." This is quite true; but when, immediately on the conclusion of a settlement, the landholder sees before him a guaranteed fixity of demand for thirty years, he has no hesitation in taking canal water, or in digging wells, or in bringing new lands under the plough, because any possible enhancement of the demand upon him is so distant that, as he knows well, the profits to be derived from the introduction of these improvements and the extension of cultivation will repay his capital, even if it do not repay it twice over, before the period of resettlement shall come round—and if at that period the Government demand should be increased his improved assets will be sufficient to meet it and to give to him a fair profit still; while, in the currency of the previous settlement, he will have recovered the whole of his outlay at the least, and will, in all probability, have obtained a larger return.

16. Statistical facts alone, which are obviously unattainable, can settle the question as to how far the progress of the North-Western Provinces has been retarded by the system of periodical settlements, as compared with the prosperity of Bengal under a permanent settlement; but the Lieut.-gov. hazards the opinion that improvement would have advanced with little more rapidity than it has done had a permanent settlement of the land revenue been given in 1803, and that, man for man, the agriculturist of the North-Western Provinces is at least on a par in his circumstances with him of Bengal. The proprietary body in the North-Western Provinces cannot be compared with the landholders of Bengal in respect of wealth and substance; but this is not due so much to the difference of the settlement system as to the fact that the former are the actual hereditary owners of the soil, occupying it in infinitesimal portions according to ancestral right or local custom, while the latter are nothing more or less than the amils who collected revenue under the old Mohamedan Government from vast tracts of country, and were recognised as proprietors thereof under the permanent settlement. Whether these latter have ever expended capital in the improvement of their estates, or whether their prosperity has grown with the natural growth of the population, and is due as much to the luxuriant productiveness of the soil as to any outlay of money, remains to be proved.

17. Mr. Saunders hints that the permanent settlement is the source of all progress in Bengal, and that the system of periodical settlements is the root of much evil in the North-Western Provinces; but he has omitted to advert to the distinctive features of the two sections of the Presidency—the one with a rich soil, with a teeming population, with large and constant demands for produce, whether for home consumption or for export, with unlimited water carriage for its conveyance to the places of consumption or to the ports of export, and, lastly, with a climate in which the periodical rains never fail; the other with a light soil, which, though productive under irrigation, is nearly barren of produce without it; with a population falling little short, probably, of that in Bengal, and possibly with a local demand for produce little less, but at a great distance from any port, and with infinitely smaller, and those more expensive, means of reaching it; and, lastly, with a liability to "periodical droughts," . . . "when there is an almost total failure of rain," and when "appalling desolation and famine" befall the people.

18. These are marked distinctions, and the justifiable inference is that, while the prosperity of Bengal may be traced to other causes than the permanent settlement which Mr. Saunders so strongly advocates, the North-Western Provinces have progressed in spite of the system which he unequivocally condemns; that, while on the one hand the great staple of Bengal (rice) is produced with no other watering than that which it receives from the never-failing periodical rains, and in Bengal the need of expending capital in providing for irrigation is not pressing; on the other, the cereals, which are the staple of these provinces, can be but scantily produced without irrigation—which irrigation cannot be obtained, as a certainty, without a large expenditure of capital. The same may be said of sugar.

19. The Lieut.-governor would not be understood to say that he is opposed to a permanent settlement in these provinces under certain conditions, the statement of which is reserved for a future occasion, as already stated. Times and circumstances have changed, and what would have been certainly premature in 1803 may very well be advantageous now. All that he desires to convey is, that a permanent settlement is not a cure for every evil, and that the effect of the system of periodical settlements, which has obtained here in retarding improvement, has been much less in degree than Mr. Saunders implies.

20. It has been stated above that Mr. Saunders "is mistaken in assuming that the desire and the object of the Government in every re-settlement are to increase the revenue." In the orders which have been from time to time issued by this Government for the guidance of settlement officers there is enough to show that the principle of moderation has always been inculcated. [Directions to settlement officers, paragraph 47.] "The object of the fiscal part of the settlement is to fix the demand upon the land," . . . "within such limits as may leave a fair profit to proprietors, and create a valuable and marketable property in the land." Then, after laying down full instructions for fixing the demand of the Government, the following cautions are conveyed:—[Directions to settlement officers, paragraph 61.] "It is a more fatal error to over-assess than to under-assess. The Government will not test the settlement by the mere amount of direct revenue which it brings into the Treasury." . . . "If the jumma is less than it was before the Government will be satisfied, if the reasons for the reduction are sound and sufficient," . . . "if he (the settlement officer) is in doubt which of the two jummas to fix, a high one or a low one, he should always incline to the latter. Over-assessment discourages the people, and demoralises them, by driving them to unworthy shifts and expedients, and it also prevents the accumulation of capital, and dries up the resources of the country. Viewing the question simply in a financial light, an assessment which presses hardly on the resources of the people is most injurious."

21. Again, when the settlements of the districts in these provinces began to fall in, and the district of Saharunpore was about to be resettled, instructions, now known as the "Saharunpore Rules," were issued, and in these it is said that "the Government does not look for any total increase on the present demand, excepting, of course, as to fresh land brought into culture since the last settlement beyond the limits of the then assessed villages, or where there may have been a great rise in the rent value of land, caused by the growth of new large centres of consumption or the like. The collector should aim rather at the equalisation of the assessments."

22. Further, as to Mr. Saunders's remark [Paragraph 15] that the improvements made by the landholders, such as cultivation of barren and unassessed lands, construction of wells, &c., being taken into the calculation of assets for re-settlements, it may not be out of place to note that Regulation II. of 1819 provides for the assessment of lands which, at the period of the Decennial Settlement in Bengal, were not included within the limits of estates for which a settlement was concluded with the owners; and in regard to the other point, construction of wells, &c., it is thought right to subjoin the following passages: the first from Directions to Settlement Officers, the second from the Saharunpore Rules, which will show that in this respect also a caution has been enjoined:—"Whenever the value of land has been much raised by the expenditure of capital in providing irrigation, locating labourers, or in other modes, care should be taken, lest by too high an assessment an unfair tax be laid on the profits of the capital, over and above the just right of the Government to a portion of the net produce of the land. [Directions to Settlement Officers, page 65.] Again, in villages the cultivation of which has been much extended since the settlement by the breaking up of new land, or the percentage of irrigation increased by the sinking of new wells, or other improvements, the expenditure of capital must be allowed, and a moderate jumma assessed. [Saharunpore Rules, paragraph 37. See also foot-note to the above, being extract (paragraph 489) from a Despatch from the Honourable Court of Directors, No. 9, dated Aug. 13, 1851.]

23. The Lieut.-governor has thought it right to offer the foregoing comments on paragraphs 15 to 20 of Mr. Saunders's Report, not with any intention of disputing the present expediency of converting the settlements of these provinces (subject to certain conditions) into a permanent settlement—for it is to that issue that the extension from time to time of the period of settlement has been gradually advancing—but with the desire to show that the system of these provinces has not been so injurious to progress, or the Government of these provinces so intent upon increasing the land revenue without regard to considerations of justice and of policy as Mr. Saunders would seem to represent. The Lieut.-governor does not believe that the land in these provinces, taking them as a whole, is "heavily assessed;" and if it be, the fact is not due to the action of the Government which he has the honour to represent. If this Government has erred, it has been, Mr. Edmonstone thinks, very much more in the disruption of the old talookas, and the annihilation by this measure of the landed aristocracy that once existed, than in any encouragement given to heavy assessments.

24. In regard to the "cultivation of exotic cotton," the Lieut.-governor does not feel himself competent to remark, never having given his attention to the subject, or experimentalised, as many others have done, in growing it. There is no doubt that the fullest information on this point will be furnished to the Government of India from other quarters.

25. It has been stated in the 2nd paragraph of this address that the only part of Mr. P. Saunders's Report upon which the Lieut. government thought proper to take action at once was that relating to "the Canals of the Doab." This subject was considered in the Department of Public Works, and the copy of a letter (No. 3,628a, dated 30th November last), addressed to the superintendent general of Irrigation, is enclosed. This letter, so far as it goes, expresses the Lieut.-governor's sentiments, and he is sanguine that the result of the discussion to which it will give rise will be the introduction of measures that will at least mitigate the corruption and the oppression complained of in connection with Canal management. That these evil practices will ever be entirely suppressed—until at least the morality of the people who must be our instruments, more or less, is very greatly improved, Mr. Edmonstone does not believe, whatever may be the means used.

26. Mr. Saunders testifies in paragraph 38 that "in the matter of roads there is no impediment whatever to the trade in cotton so far as the roads in the Doab are concerned." The Government of India are aware from my letter dated March 29, 1861, and its enclosures, and from separate correspondence in the department of public works, that the improvement of the internal communication in these provinces has been attended to by the Lieut.-governor, and perhaps it may be needless to say more on this point than that in Rohilkund, Bundelkhand, and in the Benares division, no less than in the Doab, the necessity of facilitating traffic has been kept constantly in view. It will be seen from the appendices to the department public works budget for 1862-63, now under despatch, that very large sums of money derived from the local funds will be applied to the construction, improvement, and maintenance of the roads, and to the erection of numerous bridges in the several divisions of these provinces during the twelve months extending from Sept. 1, 1861, to August 31, 1862.

27. The representations contained in the 39th paragraph of Mr. Saunders's report formed the subject of my separate letter No. 43a, dated the 8th of this month, in which you were informed of the inquiries about to be instituted under the Lieut.-governor's instructions. The depositions of Lalla Ram Buxsh and Radha Lal, which are enclosed in Mr. Saunders's letter dated 6th instant (just received under cover of your No. 239, dated 14th ibid), will be forwarded to the magistrates of Cawnpore and Etawah respectively, with a direction to examine the deponents, and to obtain from them any proof they can offer of their assertions, and of the particular incidents on which those assertions are founded, the result of all these inquiries will be fully reported in due course to the Government of India; but the Lieut.-governor must not conceal his apprehension that he may have too hastily formed the conclusions communicated in my letter above referred to. It will be remembered that the requisition therein replied to was very urgent; and it may be observed that the Lieut.-governor's camp was distant from sources of information, and that no inquiry could be made without the certainty of disappointing the wishes of H.E. the Viceroy in Council for an early report on the subject. Since that time the Lieut.-governor has been led to doubt the correctness of his belief that cotton carts are not commonly impressed. He has been told that to enable troops to move, urgent incidents for many scores of carts are not infrequently sent, at very short notice, to collectors; and that, in the execution of these, it does happen that even cotton carts are seized, the bales being generally stacked by the persons in charge in the purlies alongside the road, until the carts shall be restored. This may or may not be confirmed from other parts of the country, and the Lieut. governor will await the issue of the investigations now in progress. It may, however, be observed that as long as the civil authorities continue to be served with these urgent incidents at the shortest notice, and are informed that the troops cannot move until the carts are furnished, so long there must be either impressment of carriage, or serious detention of troops on the line of march.

From Lieut. col. W. E. MORTON, Offg. Sec. to the Govt. of the N.W.P., Public Works Dept., to Lieut. col. A. D. TURNELL, Superint. gen. of Irrigation, N.W.P., Roorkee.—No. 3628, dated Camp Orai, Nov. 30, 1861.

In continuation of my docket No. 2,994a, dated 4th ultimo, forwarding extract from a report by the commissioner to inquire into the cultivation of cotton, I am directed to call your attention to the following observations which, by an oversight, were not communicated to you in the first instance.

2. Among the questions put by the cotton commissioner to Mr. Peters, a zemindar of Mynpooree, para. 24, is one to the effect whether complaints such as he (Mr. Peters) brought against the canal department were general in the district. To this the reply was, that such complaints were general, for "hundreds of petitions have been given by natives to the collector detailing their grievances, but they get no redress."

3. This statement, the Lieut.-governor believes, is as unfair as it is incorrect. His honour feels certain that redress is never refused by officers of the Irrigation Department when grievances are proved. No doubt many complaints fall to the ground, either from deficiency of proof, or because those who prefer them subsequently fail to exert themselves to establish their cases.

4. The remedy proposed by the same zemindar for the grievances complained of—viz., that the distribution of canal water should be placed under district officers—is manifestly absurd. For district officers do not employ a more honest class of subordinates, grade for grade, than do canal officers; while the former certainly could not devote as much time to matters connected with irrigation as officers especially appointed for such duties.

5. The next evidence was given by Mr. W. Martin, an indigo planter of Mynpooree. I am to notice particularly only the concluding portion of his last reply, in which he gives it as his opinion that the water rate for indigo and cotton is too high, being double of that for cereals. On this the Lieut.-governor remarks that Mr. Martin naturally would desire to see the charge for watering indigo lowered; others, no doubt, are equally certain that the crops which they chiefly cultivate—rice, wheat, sugarcane, or whatever it may be—are made to pay too high a rate for canal water. In point of fact, his honour believes the whole of the canal water-rates are extremely low as compared either with the average cost of well irrigation or the more abundant yield due to that by canals.

6. Mr. Saunders states (paragraph 25) that the general result of many inquiries made in the Boondshuhur and Allypore districts was, that it was a common complaint among native cultivators that the canal officers were chiefly young men who have no consideration for the agriculturists, and the consequence is that many zemindars will not take water. But the Lieut.-governor is not inclined to accept either of these statements. In regard to the former, his honour observes, that one officer at least in every division, the superintendent, necessarily has ample experience, and, as a rule, it is believed that such officers, whose duties to bring them almost daily into contact with native cultivators, do listen to complaints which appear to have any foundation.

7. As to the assertions that many zemindars do not take water, the Lieut.-governor considers that it is effectually disproved by the experience gained on the Jumna Canals. There, it is well known, it is not the demand, but the supply that is deficient, and we have no reason whatever for supposing that, when the Ganges Canal has existed as long as those from the Jumna, and the benefits of irrigation become as widely known, there will not be an equal readiness to take water on the part of the cultivators within the districts through which it runs.

8. In the same paragraph Mr. Saunders gives it as the opinion of Hurpal, cotton dealer and zemindar of the Muzzulnugger district, and Hosein Ally Khan, a large landholder, that the lower establishment of the Ganges Canal is corrupt, and that chowkeedars receiving a pay of Rs. 4 per mensem make nearly ten times that amount. This charge, the Lieut.-governor fears, has too much truth in it; from the very circumstances of the case it would scarcely be otherwise. His honour suggests for your consideration that, pending the introduction of a better system of irrigation under which the conservancy establishments of the canals may be almost, if not entirely, dispensed with, the large number of underpaid chowkeedars should be reduced. Such a reduction would admit of the pay of the remainder being so increased as to lessen the temptation to dishonesty and oppression now so powerful.

9. The remedy for the evils above referred to, which Mr. Saunders mentions in his 28th paragraph—viz., the supply of canal water on contracts—is the one that, his honour believes, is best calculated to effect the object in view. Such a system in one form was introduced by your predecessor, but it was at the out-set opposed by difficulties which led to its partial modification. Contracts in another form—viz., with the average measurements of a certain number of previous years as their base, are being adopted on the Eastern Jumna Canal. It is not proposed on this occasion to discuss the respective merits of these two forms of the contract system. The question will shortly be brought forward in connection with the 2nd section of Colonel Baird Smith's Famine Report.

10. With reference to Mr. Saunders's thirtieth and thirty-first paragraphs, I am to observe that it does not by any means seem so certain, as that gentleman appears to suppose, that the plan of enhancing land rent in canal districts and then giving water ad libitum would answer.

11. In the first place, as shown on the Jumna Canal, water ad libitum is an impossibility. Any canal on which such a rule existed would in times of scarcity be dry far above its lower terminus. Restrictions on the quantity of water issued to any one cultivator, or to any one community, must be kept in view, if equal justice is to be meted to all who come within range of the canal's action.

12. Secondly, it is more than doubtful that all cultivators to whom canal water can be given will willingly agree to an arbitrary increase of land rent in lieu of the demands now made by the department, such increase being fixed without any knowledge of the requirements of each cultivator one year with another. Certainly, on the Ganges Canal, in its present undeveloped state, such an innovation could result in nothing but a grievous failure.

13. Mr. Saunders (para. 32) alludes to the advantage to be derived by the abolition of measurements on the introduction of some system of contracts. Such a change would, of course, remove the whole of that large body of men who form the present measuring establishment, and to whom, without doubt, much of the extortions which now brings odium on the canal department is due.

14. But the Lieut.-governor would point out that such a remedy would be only a partial one. Over and above the measuring establishments there are numerous subordinates attached to every canal, whose practices are quite as detrimental to the good name of the department. Of these the most prominent is the Conservancy Establishment already alluded to. It is for you to consider whether, even irrespectively of the introduction of contracts, this establishment may not be diminished in numbers. One mode of doing this appears to be by inducing influential zemindars to become responsible for the safety of canal works, and the Lieut.-governor desires that you will give this measure full consideration.

15. Adverting to paragraph 33, I am to observe that Mr. Saunders evidently was not aware that for nearly six months of every year the superintendent-general and deputy superintendent-general are out on their tours of inspection, and that during that time they visit nearly the whole of the several canal districts. On these terms the officers named inquire into all cases of appeal brought before them, and give redress where it may be required; but, of course, it is chimerical to suppose that they can put a stop to the corrupt practice of the native establishments. The only practical remedy is that above suggested, viz., the diminution of the numbers of those who, with inadequate salaries, are placed in positions of great power for evil.

16. In conclusion, I am to request that, in submitting the Report called for in my No. 2,994a, you will prominently notice the various points referred to in this address.

ABOLITION OF DUTY ON COTTON IN THE GWALIOR TERRITORY.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

From Major R. J. MEADE, Agent to the Governor-general for Central India, to Colonel H. M. DURAND, C.B., Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, dated Camp Duttia, Feb. 22, 1862.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward herewith, for submission to H.E. the Gov. gen. of India, a Khureeta from Maharajah Scindia to H.E.'s address, intimating that he has abolished the duty on cotton within his territory, and has taken measures to remove all existing obstructions to the passage of this article through the Gwalior State.

2. I have, at various times within the last year, had conversations with the Maharajah on this subject, but H.H. could not hitherto make up his mind to the sacrifice of so large an item of revenue.

That he has now done so, will, I trust, be a subject of satisfaction to the Gov. gen.

3. An English translation of the Khureeta is also enclosed.

Translation of a letter from H.H. Maharajah Scindia, to H.E. the Gov. gen. of India, dated Feb. 18, 1862:—

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Whereas the prosperity and convenience of the people in general are objects which I ever keep sincerely in view, and whereas to afford facility to trade and communication, I had, in 1856, the pleasure of remitting transit duties on the three roads in my territory leading to Etawah, Furrackabad, and over the Scinde River, notifications of which were then issued throughout my dominions, and information of the same conveyed through Sir Robert Hamilton, the late agent, Gov. gen. for Central India, to your Excellency, who was pleased to acknowledge the same in your letter to me, dated July 28, 1856, I have now had under consideration the remission of transit duties on the staple article of cotton, with a view to increase the trade of that article, and to meet the increasing demand for it in England, and also in the hope that I shall thereby give satisfaction to your Excellency.

The carrying out of the measure will involve a loss of revenue of about fifty thousand rupees annually; but influenced by the above-mentioned motives, I have decided to instruct my local authorities in no way to obstruct or interfere with the passage of cotton, "duty free," within my territory.

(True translation.)

(Signed) R. J. MEADE, Major, Agent, Gov. gen. for Central India.

From the Governor general to MOOKTAR OOL MOOLK UMDATUL UMRA ALIJAH MAHARAJAH DHEERAJ JYAJEE RAO SCINDIA SREKNATH BAHADOOR MUNSOOR ZUMAN, Knight of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, Gwalior (dated Fort William, the 4th March, 1862).

MY HONOURED AND VALUED FRIEND,—I have received your Highness' letter of the 18th of February, informing me that, influenced by the desire to increase the trade in cotton, and to meet the demand for it in England, your Highness has remitted the transit duties on that article within your territory at a loss of about 50,000 rupees to your revenues, and that the passage of cotton through the Gwalior State will henceforward be free of duty.

Your Highness has rightly judged that this measure would give me satisfaction. I hear of it with the greatest pleasure, and I beg your Highness to accept my sincere thanks and congratulations upon this new proof of your Highness' determination to rule your country in a liberal and enlightened spirit.

I beg to express the high consideration I entertain for your Highness, and to subscribe myself,

Your Highness' Sincere Friend,
(Signed) CANNING.

MR. GRANT'S PUNKAH.—The Engineer's Journal shows how Mr. Grant's punkah invention can be adapted to private houses. A single coolie can keep twenty-five punkahs in motion by treadle and levers, "provided the punkahs are all in the same plane; but if the punkahs are in different planes, as is the case in the different rooms of a dwelling-house, all that we require is a contrivance for changing the direction of motion in the wires in passing from one room to another. The small bent lever used for the bell-wire need only to be slightly enlarged and lengthened to secure a machine capable of changing the direction of the wires applied to the punkah. More than nine or ten punkahs will scarcely ever be required in any house; and these may be easily kept in motion by a single coolie."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

LORD CANNING'S ADMINISTRATION.

If Lord Canning cannot, like his illustrious predecessor, boast of having added four kingdoms to the British Empire, he can with far greater reason claim credit to himself for leaving the territories entrusted to his guardianship "in peace, without and within." It is true that trifling disturbances on the north-eastern frontier of Bengal may seem to detract from this assumption, but the fact of their obtaining any prominence at all is a striking proof of the profound tranquillity that reigns within the widely distant borders. In the words of the preceding Governor-General, these frontier raids "are and must for the present be viewed as events inseparable from the state of society which for centuries past has existed among the mountain tribes. They are no more to be regarded as interruptions of the general peace in India than the street brawls which appear among the every day proceedings of a police court in London are regarded as indications of the existence of civil war in England." There is, however, a marked difference between the internal condition of India in 1856 and in 1862. The peace that prevailed at the former period was as the hushed lull of the elements before a storm, while the peace which Lord Canning leaves behind him is as the joyous repose of nature after the tempest has cleared and purified the atmosphere. Indeed, Lord Dalhousie's pacific anticipations were doomed to be speedily frustrated. No formidable war from without, he said, could reasonably be apprehended, considering the amicable relations that existed between the Government of India and neighbouring Powers, and yet before winter set in war was declared against Persia, and a considerable force, both naval and military, was despatched to the Persian Gulf. Since then, too, Indian troops have twice been engaged in China, and Sikh horsemen from the banks of the Indus have enriched themselves with the spoils of the Summer Palace at Peking. But it is not to foreign wars that we must look for the distinctive memorials of Lord Canning's viceroyalty. Had there been nothing more worthy of record than the victory of Kooshab, or the brilliant charges of the Sikh cavalry in China, the history of the last six years of British supremacy in India might be dismissed with a mere passing remark. Dis aliter visum. The late Viceroy was destined to pass through a more fiery ordeal than any Indian ruler has ever been subjected to since the Black Hole of Calcutta, and compared with which even that horrible catastrophe sinks into insignificance. Barely a year had passed after his assumption of the Government, and before he could possibly have acquired sufficient local knowledge and experience to act on his own judgment, symptoms of disaffection began to exhibit themselves in the ranks of the native army. Pampered and petted and humoured in every caprice, the Sepoys had come to regard themselves much in the light of the Prætorian guards of the Roman Empire, and to fancy themselves as the only true source of power and dominion. It must be conceded that at first Lord Canning failed to read aright the warnings that rapidly succeeded each other. Neither he nor the experienced counsellors to whose advice he naturally deferred were capable of justly appreciating the importance of the movement then gradually acquiring force. They were aware, indeed, of a slight shock, but they little anticipated an earthquake that was about to overthrow temple and tower, and well-nigh demolish the entire fabric of the British Empire in the East. The measures adopted by the Government to repressing the growing evil were wholly inadequate to the emergency, and their apparent timidity and vacillation emboldened the native soldiery to resort to the arbitrament of arms. From that moment, however, Lord Canning rose equal to the occasion. Throwing aside his constitutional indolence and habit of procrastination, he at once faced the treacherous foe with the calm self-possession of an English gentleman, and by his unostentatious but resolute bearing inspired courage and confidence where abject terror and distrust had already become too painfully manifest. No sooner was the extent of the danger recognised than he steadily applied himself to the restoration of order, and the preservation of the vast territory committed to his care. Never for a moment did he despair of victory. Though every day brought fresh tidings of disasters in the north-west—though station after station was lost, and even Calcutta itself filled with wild alarms—his heart never quailed, his hand never faltered, his cheek never paled. His only fault, perhaps, was an untimely want of confidence in his own countrymen who were unconnected with the Government. And yet even in that respect some allowance must be made for traditional prejudices. Nor can it be denied that the European community conducted themselves in a manner little calculated to win the respect and esteem of the sorely embarrassed Government. Not only were all sorts of alarming rumours greedily swallowed and circulated, but coarse abuse was heaped upon the Governor-general, and frenzied cries for vengeance on the natives were incessantly uttered by men who should rather have set an example of patient courage and true manly deportment. Ill-seconded, or, to speak more correctly, misrepresented and thwarted by his own countrymen, it is not much to be wondered at that he should turn his back upon them for the moment and ignore their very existence. Nothing, perhaps, more tended to increase his unpopularity than his extreme measure of "gagging" the press, and much declamatory nonsense was talked about a son of Canning suppressing freedom of speech. In similar circumstances it is probable that Canning himself would have been compelled to act in a similar manner, and reduce to impotency those upon whose co-operation he could no longer rely.

It is not to be supposed that Lord Canning ever questioned the loyalty of the English journalists in India, but he certainly had much reason to question the soundness of their judgment. The fierce invectives against their unfortunate ruler, in which they habitually indulged, might have been passed over with contempt, had it not been for the mischief they were likely to work among even the well affected natives. In such cases moral support is oftentimes little inferior to physical force, and the knowledge of the fact that the Governor-general was opposed by his own countrymen would lend additional confidence to the enemies of the State, and excite grave doubts in the minds of those who were still well-disposed. Looking back from this distance of time, we cannot place to Lord Canning's account as a serious charge this bold, hazardous, and most unpopular act, but would rather accept it as a further proof of the self-reliant, resolute character of the man. And, ere long, he availed himself of an opportunity, to display the highest attribute of a truly brave man. While India was ringing with clamorous demands for signal retribution, and fire and sword were denounced against the innocent as well as the guilty, Lord Canning alone remembered that he was a Christian and dared to be merciful. Future generations will regard as an honourable epithet that which was intended as a reproach, and "Clemency Canning" will be spoken of as one who tempered justice with mercy, and held the balance even in the midst of angry passions and furious denunciations. Regardless of false reports and wilful misrepresentations, he steadfastly adhered to the straight and narrow path, and finally triumphed over his calumniators as signally as he had done over the mutinous sepoy. And when the rebellion was crushed he applied himself with the same quiet earnestness to soothe men's minds and conciliate all classes subject to his sway. His famous Oude Proclamation, so cruelly misunderstood in England, and so harshly rebuked by Lord Ellenborough, was in fact one of the wisest measures that characterise his viceroyalty, for it prepared the way for the restoration of the Talookdar system, and inseparably bound up the interests of the great native landowners with the stability of the British Power. After punishing the ringleaders and condoning the minor and misguided offenders, Lord Canning did not forget to shower noble gifts with princely profusion on those who had remained faithful to their allegiance, and proved themselves trustworthy allies in the hour of need. Nothing could be better or more eminently serviceable than his various progresses through the country, his stately durbars, his right Royal speeches. The favour he has systematically shown to the native gentry and independent princes will bear good fruit for many a generation yet to come, and by reviving the right of adoption he has removed all apprehension of future encroachments and absorption of territory. More recently we have seen the Viceroy engaged in prosecuting public works and encouraging the arts of peace. Roads, railways, and canals are being constructed or improved in all directions. Waste lands are being offered for sale at a moderate price to all, whether native or European, who will undertake to reclaim them, and the fee simple of every estate in the country may be obtained by its occupant on equitable terms. It is to be regretted, indeed, that the permanent settlement of the North-West Provinces is not one of the distinguishing monuments of Lord Canning's administration, and that he should have left to his successor to gather an honour that might have been all his own. In the unhappy disputes that have lately agitated Lower Bengal, and destroyed an important branch of industry, he hesitated too long between his sense of right and an amiable reluctance to interfere with a subordinate, but practically separate department. Had he come forward at an earlier period to control the perverse obstinacy of the Lieut.-Governor, and the insensate superciliousness of certain civilians of the old school, much ill-feeling might have been avoided and valuable interests saved from utter destruction. Slow to arrive at a conclusion, though firm and unflinching in carrying it out when once formed, Lord Canning has more than once allowed the happy moment to escape him, and like the "Noir Faincant" has dashed into the affray only in time to avert defeat, but too late to secure a bloodless victory. Still, with all his faults and shortcomings, the result of natural indolence, he has governed India for six years with eminent sagacity, uncompromising impartiality, dauntless resolution, and Christian magnanimity. If he has not added a kingdom to the British dominions, he has at least saved an empire. If he has not annexed principalities and chiefships, he has won the hearts of the princes themselves and made their interests coincide with those of the paramount Power. If he has not added many millions to the revenue, he has reduced the expenditure to a level with the income and prepared the way for a financial surplus. If he has not left a quarter of a million of sepoy in arms, he has removed the principal source of internal danger and provided an adequate European force to repel every foreign foe. And now, in the prime of life and in the pride of his intellectual faculties, he returns to his native land to receive the honours and rewards due to his good and faithful stewardship, and to assist with his matured experience the counsellors of his Sovereign and the administrators of his country. A cordial greeting awaits his arrival, and doubtless the nation at large will supplement the prerogative of the Crown, and by public demonstrations evince its recognition of the distinguished services, illustrious career, and chivalrous character of that eminent statesman, that conscientious ruler, that high-minded nobleman, the late Viceroy and Governor-general of British India.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADORS.

The Japanese Ambassadors were received on Sunday, April 13th, by the Emperor of the French at the Tuileries. At half-past two o'clock, five Court carriages went to the Hôtel du Louvre to convey them to the Palace. The cortège entered the yard of the Tuileries by the Arc de Triomphe, troops being drawn up at each side to pay them military honours. The first carriage contained two noble Japanese officers, entitled to wear two swords, who carried a coffer containing the letter written by the Emperor of Japan to his Majesty Napoleon III. In the next carriage, drawn by six horses, were the second and third Ambassadors, attended by Baron Sibust, secretary for the introduction of foreign representatives; in the next, also drawn by six horses, was the first Ambassador, with the title of Minister Plenipotentiary, accompanied by Baron Lepic, introducer of ambassadors; and in two other carriages, with two horses each, were other officers, and the interpreters of the Embassy. They alighted under the entrance of the Pavillon d'Horloge, and there fixed in their belts the second sword, which in Japan is a mark of high distinction. They were received at the foot of the grand staircase, on which were ranged the Cent Gardes, by the Duke de Cambacérès, Grand Master of the Ceremonies. After having passed through the Galerie de la Paix, and the magnificent rooms of the Palace, they were introduced into the Salle du Trône. The Emperor, the Empress, and the Prince Imperial were there seated in state, surrounded by the whole Court. The gentlemen were in full official costume, and the ladies in Court dresses and trains. The Chief of the Embassy, after having made a profound obeisance to their Majesties, delivered the following address in Japanese, which was repeated in French by one of the interpreters:—

"SIRE,—According to the orders of his Majesty the Tycoon, we have the honour of presenting ourselves this day at the audience of your Majesty.

"Since the conclusion of the treaty between France and Japan relations tend to develop themselves more and more between those two countries; our Sovereign has consequently charged us to deliver a personal letter to your Majesty, and to express to you, at the same time, the sincerity of his devotedness and his desire to see the treaty maintained.

"Our Sovereign has ordered us to respectfully make known to your Majesty that he attaches great value to the fact, that, by your Imperial kindness, the Embassy sent to Europe is to be conveyed back to Japan on board a French vessel of war.

"We conclude by expressing the best wishes for the welfare of your Majesty and of your august family, as well as for the happiness and prosperity of the French nation."

The Emperor replied in the following terms:—

"I am happy to see for the first time in France the representatives of the Emperor of Japan.

"The treaty which we have entered into to gether, will, I hope, lead to favourable results for the two countries.

"I doubt not that your residence in France will give you a just idea of the grandeur of our nation; the reception which you will here meet with, and the freedom which you will enjoy, will convince you that hospitality is one of the first virtues of a civilised nation.

"I will willingly have you conveyed back to your country by a vessel of war, and you will carry with the remembrance of your voyage to Europe the assurance of my desire to keep up the most friendly relations with Japan."

The Embassy then retired, and was conveyed back with the same ceremonial to the Hôtel du Louvre. The members of the Embassy wore costumes of the richest kind, and their arms were magnificent. The valuable presents for their Majesties, which had been sent via Suez, have not yet arrived.

ORIENTAL BANK.

At the Oriental Bank meeting, held April 17th, Mr. H. G. Gordon in the chair, the report submitted to the shareholders stated that the net profit for the year 1861 amounted to £196,454. 3s. 4d., after making provision for bad and doubtful debts, and defraying current expenses. The dividend and bonus already distributed out of the year's profits had absorbed £88,200, leaving available for present distribution £108,254. 3s. 4d.; and with that sum the directors propose to declare a dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year ending December 31, 1861, and a bonus of 3 per cent. free of Income tax, amounting together to £100,800 payable on and after the 1st of next month, leaving a balance of £7,454. 3s. 4d. to the credit of next year's account. The report also stated that the directors had, since the last meeting, closed the experimental branches opened in New Zealand, the profits being found too small in proportion to the cost of superintendence and management. The official statement showed that the liabilities due to the public amounted in the aggregate to £11,494,446. 14s. 9d. The reserve fund was £250,000, and the insurance fund £50,000; capital and other liabilities, £1,681,790. 8s. 4d.; making the total liabilities £13,176,237. 3s. 1d. The assets were—coin and bullion, £3,432,750. 10s. 1d.; notes and bills discounted and debts due to the corporation, £7,839,388. 19s. 2d.; and other assets, amounting in all to £13,176,237. 3s. 1d. In moving the adoption of the report, the chairman adverted to the dulness of foreign business caused by the American war, stating, however, that in Australia their prospects were of a very encouraging character, and in India the directors anticipated great results for the future. The general manager, Mr. Stewart, had inaugurated a mutual guarantee and insurance fund among the executive staff of their establishment. That fund now amounted to £30,000, and would be found most valuable as regards the officers, and a great security to the bank itself. The retiring directors were re-elected; and Messrs. Gibb and Hughes were re-elected auditors.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT (Foreign-office, April 16).—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. A. Berg as Consul general in London, and of Mr. J. Heard as Consul at Hong Kong, for his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias.

ORIENTAL JUSTICE.—It is thus that justice is administered according to the Oriental law of blood—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth as told by the Cabul newswriter in the Delhi Gazette:—"A sepoy of the battalion of Sirdar Shere Alea Ihan was owing two pice to a fish seller. On his demanding the pice from the sepoy they began to quarrel; at last the sepoy took out his knife and stabbed the fisherman. The fisherman having died there and then, the sepoy was secured by Shahmurd Khan's men, and together with the body of the fisherman taken to the Ameer. The Ameer, after examining into the matter ordered the prisoner to be made over to the parents of the killed man to be executed according to their wish. When Sirdar Shere Alea Khan was informed of this, he coaxed the parents of the fisherman to give a razeenama (certificate of satisfaction) as by having the sepoy executed their son would not be restored to them; the poor people were obliged to accept 120 Rs. which the Sirdar had offered them as ransom, and to give their razeenama."

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last; with her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £40,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Raneemuddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for Rs. 30,000 (£3,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,

First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,

Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7. 10s) to be made after three months,

Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7. 10s) to be made six months after allotment,

Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment. Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

|  | Rs.       | £.     |
|--|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                               | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies                | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|  | 3,825,000 | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                         | 3,500,000 | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                        | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                   | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, Gas, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                         | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                 | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                        | 13,800    | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                      | 65,500    | 6,550  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Suns Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Raneemuddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

OURSELVES.

THOUGH it is certainly not our custom to intrude our personal affairs upon the attention of our readers, we may surely hope to be excused if, at the commencement of a new career, we gratefully acknowledge the manifold kindnesses we have received since the establishment of our House in Leadenhall-street, nearly three-quarters of a century ago. It is not without a natural feeling of regret that we turn our back upon old scenes and friendly associations, but the realities of a business life are fatal to sentiment, and the interests of the present moment necessarily outweigh the pleasant memories of the past. Besides, we cannot think that our removal to the West End will cost us a single friend or acquaintance, but rather anticipate a large extension of the circle of our well-wishers and subscribers. The transfer of the India-office from the City to Westminster would alone have rendered it expedient that we also should follow "the march of empire" to the Westward, and simultaneously another motive has occurred to cause such a step to become altogether inevitable. In the good old times of the East India Company we were content to enjoy the virtual monopoly of Oriental Literature, and it was only on rare occasions that we published any works of general interest. Latterly, however, the progress of education, and the almost universal craving for intellectual recreation, have created a demand for literary productions of a cosmopolitan character that was utterly unknown in the days of our forefathers. Professing, then, like the Emperor Napoleon III., to understand the age in which we live, we have made extensive arrangements for entering largely into the general publishing trade, and it is almost needless to add that under such circumstances the West-end is preferable to the City. In other respects there will be no change. Profiting by a lengthened experience, we shall ever steadfastly adhere to the principles by which we have hitherto regulated our conduct in public and private, and to which we mainly attribute our past prosperity and our hopes of continued success.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd March brings nothing but satisfactory intelligence. The disturbances on the Bengal frontier, indeed, still continue, but only as smoke is perceptible long after the fire has been quenched and all danger has ceased. The Khonds also have been quieted, and thus Lord Elgin enters upon the duties of Government without being harassed by the anxieties attendant on a state of warfare.

Elsewhere we give the first part of Sir J. P. Grant's letter of explanation, to which we shall advert in our next issue. It is, perhaps, unfortunate that Lord Canning so long delayed to express his opinion on the Rent question—at the same time censuring the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal—as Sir John thereby enjoys the advantage of having the last word, and of stating his own case without fear of reply. But a more mischievous ruler has never misused his power in India, nor has any man ever been better rewarded for prejudice, obstinacy, and self-conceit.

The opening of the railway from Umritsar to Lahore has excited unbounded astonishment among the native population. Villagers are continually crowding in from the country to see the "Fire-horse," and enjoy a ride, wilder and more rapid than that of Leonora on the infernal steed. The gods, like Dagon, are toppling headlong from their seats, and the magic arts of the Feringhee are exalted above the creative power of Brahma. "All the incarnations of all the gods of India," exclaimed an awe-struck Brahmin as he gazed upon the portentous monster, "have never produced a thing like that."

The following notification, published by order of the Governor-general in Council, exhibits an almost incredible increase in the stamp revenue. "In continuation of the notification No. 209, dated the 3rd of December last, the following approximate statement of receipts from income-tax and the sale of stamps from November, 1861, to January, 1862, is published for general information:—

The Secretary of State for India has ruled that officers above the rank of subaltern shall not be eligible for appointments on the regimental staff. Those officers, therefore, elected to join the Staff Corps while holding regimental staff appointments, and who retained to the rank of captain on so joining, will have to vacate those appointments. Charles Wood further desires that "it may" distinctly understood not only that all officers of the Indian army who remain with their regiments have an equal claim to Staff employment with officers of the Staff Corps, but also, that so long as any subaltern belonging under the regular system to the several regiments remain with those regiments they should be understood to have, on all occasions of future vacancies among the regimental staff the same amount of prior claim to such appointments as they have hitherto been allowed to possess. In such cases the nomination to regimental appointments will rest as heretofore with Commander-in-Chief, who, should he find it necessary to appoint an officer of the Staff Corps, will apply to the Government for his services, should those services not be already at his disposal."

The chief news from China relates to a defeat sustained by the Taepings in the neighbourhood of Shanghai, at the hands of a small force, consisting of 400 English, 300 French, and 700 semi-disciplined Chinese, under the American adventurer, Colonel Ward. The rebel loss is estimated at nearly one thousand, whilst that of the allies was altogether insignificant. On the other hand, the Imperialist troops at Kinkiang, at the mouth of the Poyang Lake, have conducted themselves towards foreigners in an overbearing and threatening manner, which will probably subside on the first appearance of a gunboat.

Lord Canning has returned to his native land, having disembarked at Dover on Saturday afternoon. A few personal friends were there to meet him, and the Mayor of the place waited on his lordship to express the high opinion entertained by the Corporation, of his wise and beneficent administration. After a brief repose the ex-Viceroy proceeded to London in an ordinary railway train, unknown and undistinguished in the crowd. Her Majesty has been pleased to intimate her approval of Lord Canning's general policy by announcing her intention to bestow upon him the coveted honour of the Garter.

BENGAL.

CITIES OF THE FUTURE.

It requires no extraordinary gift of fancy—nothing but a careful attention to facts and strict deduction from them—to realise the changes that the completion of the railway system will effect in the habits and hopes of English residents in India. Anglo-Indians now can receive an answer to a letter in two months, can reach London in one, and have telegraphic news from Europe in two weeks. Yet it is little more than half-a-century since an answer to a letter involved from twelve to fifteen months, since a visit to England necessitated a voyage of half-a-year, and since India heard of the conclusion of peace with Napoleon months after a subsequent war was advancing towards its completion. Not greater is the difference between our position now and then, than it will be between our proximity to England now and five years hence. Already in England it requires an archaeologist to exhume the period of stage coaches—how much sooner will fade into oblivion in India the era of "dak gharees" and steamers toilsomely wending their way from the capital round the Peninsula and Ceylon!
